The Indians in 11 home games so far this season have drawn 94,000. Their total home attendance in 1915 was 154,000. Should they go home from their eastern trip in first place it is certain that during the following ten games the attendance surely will total beyond 650,000. That would mean that the attendance for 28 games in 1916 would be greater than for all the home contests last season.

As a road attraction the Indians are the real thing in the Johnson circuit just now. If they keep on drawing at the present rate, they will have played to more abroad crowds by June 1st than they did in all their road games a year ago.

STOCKHOLM, May 19. — (Via London, May 20).—What once was the Ford Peace Expedition was formally reorganized as "The Neutral Conference for Continuous Mediation," with two delegates from six neutral countries—the United States, Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

Although still generously supported by Henry Ford, a manifesto issued says the conference must not be confused with the original expedition. Only the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked of the original party which sailed from the United States, is now a delegate but Louis P. Lochner is still the general secretary. Miss Emily Greene Balch of Wellesley College is now the second American delegate and Frederick Holt, of Detroit, is acting as business administrator for Mr. Ford. The delegates from the other neutral countries were chosen by the votes of various peace organizations and are quite prominent.

Now More Practical.

With the new organization, new ideas and a more practical basis for work, the conference hopes to offset the early trials and tribulations of the Ford peace expedition, and through a publicity propaganda, keep the peace issue alive in Europe with the ultimate hope that neutral nations will act in concert in offering mediation.

A statement reviewing the work accomplished up to this time says the representatives of the peace mission in presenting an appeal to the neutral nations to act was received graciously by the ministers of all the neutral nations in Stockholm except the American minister, who said he had instructions from his home government not to recognize the neutral conferences.

"That this was humiliating to the American members of the conference need hardly be emphasised," says the statement.

The statement also says that the president of the Norwegian Storthing in accepting the appeal said Norway was greatly disappointed at the failure of the United States to take the lead in bringing about a conference of neutral nations to deal with the war question.

Lawn Tennis Championship

Church League Will Be Organized n the City

Any club desirous of taking part in the championship doubles for the city of Peterborough for the F. D. Kerr Cup are requested to notify the secretary of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association, E. Walton, 349 simcoe street, 'phones 910-1623 before June 1st as on that date the schedule will be drawn up.

There will be a church League organized for the friends players of the city the competitions will be for home and home games and to consist of 4 pots per match. The first games to be played on May 30th. Those desirous of joining notify O. H. Roper at the Y. M. C. A. or E. Walton, 349 Simcoe street.

LACROSSE

The officers of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club are sparing no efforts to make the team a creditable one, and the game popular [illegible] in Peterborough.

The Club is offering every encouragement to the Juniors to turn out, and they should take advantage of this privilege.

The O. A. L. A. has grouped Peterborough City juveniles in a local district, the winners of which will enter the semi-finals. This gives an excellent opportunity to the boys, and should ultimately produce some good material.

Parents should encourage their boys to play the game, as the few knocks they sustain will fit them all the better for life's future battles.

Hastings and Campbellford will stage the first game of the season on the holiday, which will be an exhibition fixture. Campbellford has a number of new faces from the Cornwall district; also a coach from the same burg.

They will have nothing on Peterborough as the local club will trot out a few live wires that the present prosperity has attracted to this hustling centre.

Juvenile Clubs should notify Ed. Dillon, the convenor, as to their intention this coming week, if possible School clubs might be formed that would make a lively little battle to see who would reach the tape first

Annual Shoot On Wednesday

The annual shoot of the Trent Valley Trap Shooters' Association will be held here on Wednesday morning next, May 24th. Clubs from Belleville, Cobourg, Stirling and Port Hope are expected to arrive in the early morning and shooting will commence at 9 o'clock. The grounds are situated at the end of the C.G.E. car line and will be open and free to all visitors and the general public.

There Is No Alternative
IF YOU WANT
PURE, SAFE MILK
It must be Scientifically Clarified and Pasteurized, otherwise Raw Milk can never be considered Safe.

CLARIFICATION contributes to the cleanliness of all milk, by removing all impurities.

PASTEURIZATION is positively necessary for all milk for the removal of diseased germs. It is the only guarantee of Purity.

MILK as it comes from all cows is not Pure. Did you ever get a microscopic view of the sediment removed from milk by a clarifier? Didn't it open your eyes?

IT IS STATED that probably 40 per cent. of the dairy cows of Ontario are suffering from tuberculosis.

THAT IS WHY the danger to health from raw milk is greater, in many respects, than the danger from so-called pure water.

THAT IS WHY the Peterborough Creamery clarifies and pasteurizes all the milk sold to its patrons in sterilized bottles.

Township Is Being Sued

Garret Galvin Claims Three Hundred Dollars Damages

Mr. Garret Galvin claims $300 damages in an action against the Township of Harvey, which Judge Huycke is hearing to-day. It was an alternative claim to that of the township against Mr. Galvin regarding a right of way, this latter case having been dismissed. Mr. E. A. Peck is acting for the municipality, and Mr. D. O'Connell for Mr. Galvin.

Butter 30 Cents On The Market

This was one of the Saturday markets at which the supply of produce considerably exceeded the demand. Eggs sold at 23 and 24 cents, butter at 30 cents, and chickens ranged from $1.00 to $1.25. There were a few turkeys at various prices. Some of the potato men were asking $2.15 a bag.

CARVILL ORDERS WRITS FOR LIBEL

Takes Action Against Newspaper Charging Him With Treason

OTTAWA, May 19.—Mr. F. B Carvell, M.P., has given instructions to his solicitors to issue writs for libel against certain of the Canadian press which recently published despatches and articles stating or insinuating, that in consulting Mr. William Travers Jerome of New York in connection with his investigation of the fuse contract disclosures he had been guilty of treasonable conduct in communicating Canadian or British munition matters to German sympathizers. It is understood that Mr. Carvell's action in consulting Mr. Jerome was suggested by unquestioned British authority, and that his interviews with that New York counsel all took place in the presence of advisers whose positions are a guarantee of the character of the investigation conducted. Mr. Carvell has received their authority, under the circumstances which have arisen through the publication of the despatches to which exception is taken, to use their evidence in law.

Will Regret Rash Charges.

When seen this evening Mr. Carvell declined to discuss the matter, which, he observes will be the best dealt with in the courts, other than to state that libel actions will be started immediately against a number of newspapers in Canada which have published the alleged libellous article. From counsel, however, it was learned that when the names of the two other gentlemen to whom Mr. Carvell referred in Parliament as among those he consulted, with Mr Jerome, are made public as well as the names of the prominent Canadians who were also present with him during at his interviews with Mr. Jerome, the newspapers concerned will regret having charged Mr. Carvell with acting in a treasonable way without first investigating and learning the facts of the case.

The newspapers against which Mr Carvell has instructed action are The Mail and Empire and The News of Toronto; The Herald, Halifax The Standard, St. John; The Journal, Ottawa; and possibly others. It is understood that Mr. E. F. B. Johnson K.C., will represent Mr. Carvell in Toronto.

Mr. Carvell has spent months of his time in investigations without remuneration of any kind, except the consciousness of performing a needed public duty. He is rightly concerned with his reputation as a loyal British subject, and proposes to amply vindicate in the courts the patriotism and propriety of his course.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 20.—Reading which led the spectacular advance on the stock exchange, yesterday, opened up 1-8 to 1 points at 165 1-8 and 164 to-day and many other "peace stocks" showed strength.

Steel was up 1-8, Westinghouse 1-8. Profit taking caused losses in half a dozen leaders.

JOFFRE'S APPETITE DESPAIR OF HIS CHEF

LONDON, May 20.—The chef of a famous Paris restaurant has become cook to Gen. Joffre at his headquarters. It was an accident that brought him in touch with the famous General. He was mobilized in the ordinary way, and when the War Minister gave instructions that as far as possible men were to be employed in situations similar to those they had occupied in civilan life the chef became a cook again.

Unfortunately he is not satisfied with his distinguished master's palate. He says the General prefers beef that has been boiled in the soup to the finest culinary efforts in the way of fillets of sole cooked with a wine sauce. He is also extremely fond of cabbage, but at every meal he insists on having a salad, which he eats with hard-boiled eggs and flavoure copiously with an English sauce.

One day M. Clemenceau came to lunch with Gen. Joffre, and to the dismay of the chef brought his own lunch with him. He handed the cook a box of macaroni, which he instructed him to boil in water "not salted too much." Then he took two bananas from a paper bag and said they were to be put on the table. Joffre and Clemenceau drank mineral water with their lunch, but the ex-Prime Minister had to forego his dessert, for the General ate one of the bananas with such relish that he promptly offered him the other, which was accepted.

Gen. Foch, who sometimes goes to lunch with his chief, always asks for a tablet of chocolate and two "crapaudsants," the little horseshoe rolls so beloved by Parisians, which they have not been able to obtain since the war.

President Poincarre's present chef has often cooked meals for the Kaiser, as he used to be chef to M. Jules Cambon, the last French Ambassador at Berlin. It was this artist — for the Kaiser has referred to him as an artist—who cooked the lunch for eighty persons when the allied delegates were recently the guests of the President at the Elysee.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Martin of Toronto, are in the city.

Miss Olive Allison, trained nurse, of Toronto, is spending a vacation with her mother.

The many friends of Miss Dora Lafferty, Water street, will be pleased to learn that her condition is very satisfactory after her operation at St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday. She will be confined to the hospital for at least a couple of weeks.

Mr. A. W. Turner, 572 Weller street, Mrs. Turner, Master Jack and Miss Marjorie, returned yesterday from a very pleasant pleasure tour through the Canadian west as far as the coast. Mr. Turner brings reports of several Peterborough people he met who are doing well, but he cannot say much for the healthy condition of business, especially at the coast.

Mr. and Mrs. M. James Casey, Jarvis street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Olive Lloyd, A.T. Coll. M., to Mr. Andrew James MacKay, manager of Bank of Hamilton, Port Rowan, son of Mr. and Mrs. George MacKay, Crediey, Ontario. The marriage will take place June 14, at the Metropolitan church at 8.30.—Toronto Globe.

Sergeant C. V. A. Mitchell, of the Bank of Montreal of this city, having resigned his position with the bank, enlisting with the 227 Battery, is now attending the Signalling course in Toronto. His many friends wish him the best of success in his new life.—Sault Daily Star, Sault Ste. Marie. Sergeant Mitchell is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. J. Mitchell, 801 Park St., and is spending a few days at his home here, before leaving for Niagara to complete his course.

WEDDING BELLS

COUGHLIN—HALPIN.

St. Peter's Cathedral was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday morning when Miss Pearl Halpin became the bride of Mr John ("Jerry") Coughlin, the well-known hockey player. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Phelan. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Roland Halpin and entered the Church to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss M Doherty. The bride was assisted by Miss Rose La Croix of Vermont, U. S., while Mr. Alonzo Coughlin acted as best man. Miss Mabel Mahoney sang while the register was being signed.

After the ceremony the wedding party returned to the home of the bride where a dainty breakfast was served. The young couple received many beautiful and costly presents, testifying to the high esteem in which they are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Coughlin will reside in Peterborough.

The Russians Continue Their Advance Toward Mosul

FRENCH OCCUPY 2 ENEMY TRENCHES NEAR HAUCOURT

Russian Troops Have Joined The British In Mesopotamia

And Some Heavy Blows Are Expected---Austrian Offensive in Tyrol District is Slackening---Italians Claim Defeat of Austrians.

TORONTO, Ont., May 22.—Col. Marshall, who succeeded Col. Currie in command of the 15th Battalion, has been killed in France.

LONDON, May 22.—Russian troops have joined the British in Mesopotamia and some heavy blows in Mesopotamia are expected.

LONDON, May 22.—An Austrian offensive in Tyrol district is slackening. Italians claim defeat of Austrians in Lagarina Valley.

LONDON, May 22.—Russians are continuing their advance toward Mosul. A strong force of Turks assembled at Sivas to oppose the Russians.

LONDON, May 22.—In continued heavy fighting around Mort Homme, the French yesterday occupied two German trenches near Haucourt and shattered Hill 287, occupied by the enemy. Haudremont Quarries were captured with eighty prisoners.

EXTRAORDINARY EXPLANATION BY GERMAN COMMANDER ABOUT SINKING OF VESSEL

THE HAGUE, May 22.—The captain of the Tubantia, sunk by a German torpedo which, according to the German statement, was fired at a British war ship on March 6 and hit the Royal Dutch line steamship, on March 16, in a statement Friday night says Count von Bernstorff's charge that neutral ships invite torpedoing as a result of approaching submarines does not apply to the Tubantia, which while proceeding on her way was fired upon without the slightest warning.

The Dutch press generally jeers at the explanation, demanding that the government, no matter at what cost, must obtain full satisfaction and reparation for the outrage. The newspapers confess their inability to understand how a torpedo could remain active for ten days and cite the Hague Convention of 1907, which forbids the use of torpedoes which do not become harmless after missing their mark.

But many newspapers, like the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, are frankly sarcastic and offer suggestions such as "The submarine commander forgot to keep his calendar up to date." All agree, however, the matter cannot be allowed to rest, especially in view of the testimony of eye-witnesses who plainly saw the track of a torpedo.

So far the matter has been treated as an unsolved puzzle, but the expectation is very general that Germany ultimately will admit that the submarine commander made "a mistake" and will offer regrets and compensation.

Captured Front Trench But Were Soon Driven Out

Crater on Vimy Ridge Was Also Recaptured—Thirteen Air Combats Took Place Yesterday

LONDON, May 22.—British official statement issued last night, says the enemy made a raid southwest of Loos, entering the front trench, but were immediately driven out. A crater on Vimy ridge was also recaptured. Thirteen air combats took place yesterday. Two enemy planes were brought down.

PARIS, May 22.—On the left bank of the Meuse, after a violent bombardment, a German attack of a large extent, was launched Saturday afternoon against the entire region of Le Mort Homme, occupying our first lines, but were immediately driven out.

TOULON, May 22.—The Greek collier was sunk Thursday by an Austrian submarine.

LONDON, May 22. —A Reuter despatch says Emperor William returned to Berlin yesterday in order to settle the ministerial crisis.

PETROGRAD, May 22.— Russian troops have occupied Sakiz in Persia and have advanced to the village of Ban.

KID GLOVE METHODS VAIN, SAYS MAXWELL

Commander of British Troops Issues Statement on Measures in Ireland

ALLEGATIONS ARE DENIED

Says Some Insurrentionists Shot and Then Posed as Peaceful Citizens.

DUBLIN, May 20.— Major-General Sir John Maxwell, commander of the British troops in Ireland, has given out the following statement in reply to charges of brutality made against the troops:

"Those allegations seem almost entirely concerned with the situation in North King street, which cut through the rebel area. Before we could complete a cordon in this street, the worst fighting in the whole of Dublin, with the exception of that at Ball's Bridge, occurred there. Only after 24 hours of fighting were we able to capture the street. The casualties were very heavy in this fighting. The troops were continually fired at from the roofs and upper windows of houses as the rebels moved from house to house.

Played False, He Says.

"As the troops moved along the street, the rebels would escape by back doors and fire again from behind houses, necessitating the searching and occupying of every house. They threw away their rifles and joined the women, who were herding at the bank, pretending to have been there all the time. These rebels wore no uniforms, and a man who was shooting at a soldier one minute might, for all we knew, be walking quietly beside him in the street at another.

"In spite of our efforts, the women and children refused to leave the King street section. Their sympathies were with the rebels, and this must be remembered in connection with their allegations now.

Inquiry Ordered.

"It was impossible from headquarters to exercise direct control of this sort of fighting, because the telegraph and telephones were out of commission, and nearly everything had to be left to the troops on the spot. Possibly unfortunate incidents, which we regret now, may have occurred. They were inevitable consequences of a rebellion of this kind, which could not be suppressed by kid-glove methods where our troops were desperately opposed and attacked. Some of the allegations certainly are false, and probably were made in order to establish a claim for compensation from the Government.

"I have ordered a strict military inquiry into all the allegations. Officers will visit all houses and investigate the circumstances impartially. The battalions concerned will be paraded, in order that witnesses may have an opportunity, if they can, of identifying the officers or men responsible. Any proved guilty will be properly punished. The full results of the inquiry will be made public as soon as possible."

Germans Capture First Line Trench In Vicinity of Dead Man's Hill

Heavy Fighting Reported From That Quarter---French Aeroplanes Bring Down German Fokker Machine

TORONTO, May 22.—Rumours here say that Canadians have been in a big action, and a number of prominent officers have been killed. There is no confirmation from Ottawa as yet.

PARIS, May 22.—Heavy fighting continued Saturday night in the vicinity of Dead Man's Hill, the Germans capturing a first line trench and gaining ground on the slopes.

PARIS, May 22.—In an engagement between four French aeroplanes and three German Fokkers over Bezange Forest, one Fokker was brought down and another forced to descend, and was later destroyed by French batteries.

WOODBINE, Toronto, May 22.—Mandarin, the favourite, won the famous King's Plate Saturday, before a crowd of ten thousand people, many in khaki. Galawater and Galaday were second and third, respectively. All three horses belonged to President Seagram, of the Ontario Jockey Club.

LONDON, May 22.—Dutch reports say three German aeroplanes were lost in the sea after this morning's raid on England.

DUBLIN, May 22.—Jeremiam Lynch, an American, who was mixed up in the rebellion, has been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.

PARIS, May 22.—French yesterday recaptured a strong point northwest of Verdun with two hundred prisoners and three machine guns.

OTTAWA, May 22.—In a long statement Saturday, the Government in reply to the Allison letter on the Ross rifle, says it was ammunition that was bad and caused all the trouble.

Bees and Bullets Give Men Hot Time

Ingenious Scheme Tried by Enemy to Trap Lancashire Troops

LONDON, May 20.—The Central News quotes from the Natal Mercury accounts of the difficulties confronting the British fighting forces in East Africa, furnished by an officer of the East African Mounted Rifles, who formerly was a coffee planter at Nairobi. This officer said the principal difficulty was the great density of the bush which rendered effective scouting almost impossible and provisioning troops very difficult.

Of the ingenuity of the Germans there is no doubt, as the following incident will prove. Round about Tanga, where the Lancashires landed, is a considerable bee country. The natives have a device whereby they placed hollow logs in trees to enable bees to construct their hives and from these the natives collect honey. In one place the Germans tied a whole lot oof these logs together, and attached them to a wire in long grass. They also invented a plan which caused a white flag to jump up when anyone came into contact with the wire, this being the signal for them to turn machine guns on the spot.

A party of Lancashires had the ill-luck to stumble over the wire, with the result that dozens of bee hives fell and up sprang the white flag, revealing their whereabouts The Lancashires immediately had bees and bullets to contend with and between the two had a hot time.

INJECT FLUID IN THE SPINE.

Operation to be Performed on Victim of Tse-Tse Fly Bite.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Dr. Albert C. Pervell, victim of the bite of the deadly tse-tse fly, whose case has attracted the attention of the medical profession in this and other cities, is to be operated on at Roosevelt Hospital.

Dr. Lee said he did not think that the operation would prove of any avail, but that persons outside of the family had prevailed upon Dr. Pervell's mother to consent to the operation. Dr. Lee agreed to the plan, although he was not able to see wherein the patient would be benefited as he underwent the same sort of an operation in Paris and it proved of no benefit.

The operation will consist of making an opening in the spine and extracting some of the spinal fluid. Some animal fluid will be injected in place of the fluid removed in the hope that the process will overcome the paralysis from which Dr. Pervell has been suffering.

St. Clair Hanging Still a Mystery

Detroit Miss Thinks the Dead Man May be Missing Fiance.

WINDSOR, May 18.—The weirdest mystery that ever came to the notice of the Detroit and Windsor police—the mystery of the young man who dressed himself in the silken robes of a bride and hanged himself in a summer home at Clott's Grove on Lake St. Clair—remains unsolved.

Provincial Constables Smith and Wigle of the border police have been working on every clue, not because they suspect foul play, but because this Edgar Allen Poe case appeals to their sense of investigation. From every sense rumors of strange disappearance and shattered love affairs, of double bereavements of young husbands are coming to the officers.

SEARCHES FOR LOVER.

This morning a young Detroit woman, who resides on Lincoln avenue, wanted officer Smith to inspect the clothes of the young man, which he discarded to don the clothes of the bride. Last December, the man to whom she was engaged, disappeared, and nothing has been heard of him since. His name was Robt. Swan, a native of Scotland. Six weeks before his disappearance he resided on the Mammoth road at Walkerville and worked in the Can dian town. He moved to Detroit, and was to have married the Detroit girl. When he disappeared from the American city he left his watch tie pin, cuff links and pipe. The Detroit girl was unable to identify the clothes as ever having been worn by her lover. She has been heart broken since his disappearance.

"AMES HOLDEN, LONDON"

The shoes marked "Ames Holden, London" and a pair of suspenders marked "Tex-End" which have not yet been identified as to the place of manufacture, are the only direct clues upon which identification could be established. It is felt here that the shoes may be of a military issue, given to a soldier who enlisted at London or made on a sub-contract in London. The body of the "bride's clothes" suicide is buried now and it is in such a state of decomposition as to be beyond identification.

I thank God my taste still continues for gay part of reading. Wiser people may think it trifling, but it serves to awaken life to me, and is at worst better than the generality of conversation.—Mary Worthey Montagu.

FEWER GERMAN PERIODICALS.

Since the first of the year 1,255 newspapers and other periodicals published in Germany have gone out of business, according to the German Post Office list quoted by the Brunswick Landeszeitung of April 12. The total number of periodicals discontinued since the war began is 3,000, according to the report referred to in a recent issue of Commerce Reports of Washington.

These items justify the complaints voiced by the Association of German Newspaper Publishers some four months ago at a meeting in Berlin, following which the publishers issued a statement reminding the public that, although circulation had been increased by the war, the overhead charges had gone up enormously and there had been a tremendous falling off in advertising, while the price of paper was constantly rising.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney trouble are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, coma, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

EXPECT NAVAL "SNIPING."

LONDON, May 20.—Although it is hoped in high naval circles that Germany will send out her battle fleet, the belief is generally held that the recent trivial engagements of destroyers off the Belgian coast and attacks on the east coast of England are only part of a series of unimportant encounters which the Germans will force in the next three months.

A FREAK OF NATURE.

Mr. T. E. Fennell, Dunmer Road, brought to The Register office on Tuesday a box of six eggs, which for weight and size were certainly a record in hen fruit production. Each egg weighed one quarter of a pound and measured 7 x 6 inches in circumference. The exhibit was further remarkable from the fact that the eggs were all the product of one hen,— a three-year-old Rhode Island Red.

Mr. Fennell in explaining the circumstances under which this peculiar occurrence took place said that his attention was attracted to he hen by its abnormal size, which he thought might be due to a tumor. He therefore decided to kill the bird. A post-mortem examination revealed the hen to be full of eggs, the six eggs described above, being taken from it, while three other large ones were broken in extracting them. Many small eggs were also found. None of the eggs possessed a hard shell. —Norwood Register.

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"Wal, what's all the fuss, then?"

"Any girl would ruin her life that threw herself away on Nat Burns. He's got a fine solid-gold case, but his works are very poor indeed, Ma Tanner."

"Don't go talkin' edwated or I can't follow ye. D'ye mean he's all show an' nothin' in his mind or heart of Christian goodness?"

"Yes, I mean that, and I mean more besides. He doesn't stop by being merely 'not good.' He is actively and busily downright bad."

"They's several kinds of bad, Elsa Mallaby."

"Well, I mean the kind that makes a girl break her engagement and keep it broken, and that drives a man out of a decent village."

There was a long and pregnant pause while Ma Tanner got everything straight in her mind.

"You don't mean that he has—" she inquired, her little mouth a thin, hard line.

"Yes, I do. Exactly that. I knew the case myself in this very village before Jim died. There are some men who instinctively take the correct course in a matter of that kind; others who don't care two pins as long as they get out of it with a whole skin. Nat Burns was that kind."

"Then you mean he ought already to be married?"

"Yes, or in jail."

"Why isn't he?"

"It was entirely up to the girl and she refused to act."

"Gawd! My poor Nellie!"

The servant knocked, and, upon receiving permission to enter, handed Elsa a telegram, evidently just delivered from the village telegraph office. Unconsciously the girl reached into a glass-covered book-case and drew forth a paper volume. Then she tore open the message and commenced to read it with the aid of the book.

Mrs. Tanner did not notice her. She sat staring into the future with a leaden heart. Such a thing as Elsa hinted at was unheard of in Freekirk Head, and she was overwhelmed. Suddenly she asked:

"Why do you hate Nat Burns so? You couldn't have told me that if you hadn't hated him."

Elsa looked up from her book impatiently, quite oblivious to the wound she had caused.

"Because I was very fond of that girl!" she said, and went back to the translation of the message. Suddenly she sprang to her feet with a little cry of dismay and rang the bell.

"Annette!" she cried. "Annette!" The maid rushed in, frightened, from the adjoining room.

"Tell Charles I am going to St. John's to-morrow, and to have the carriage at the door at half-past six. Pack my steamer trunk immediately. Great guns! Why isn't there a night boat?"

The maid flew out of the room, and Elsa, still doubtful, retranslated the message. Mrs. Tanner, taken aback by these sudden activities, rose hurriedly to go. This sudden flurry was inexplicable to her. Since the departure of the fleet Elsa had not as much as hinted leaving Freekirk Head. Now, in a moment, she was beside herself to go.

"I hope it isn't bad news, Elsa," she faltered.

"Well, it is, ma, it is, b-but only in a business way. A little trip will straighten it up, I think." And she was courteous but indefatigable in hastening the departure of her guest.

CHAPTER XXI.

A PRISONER.

When Code Schofield came to himself his first sensation was one of oppression, such as is felt after sleeping in an unventilated room. It seemed difficult for him to breathe, but his body was quite free and uninjured, as he found by moving himself carefully in all directions before he even opened his eyes.

Presently the air became familiar. It was a perfect mixture of flavours; oilskins, stale tobacco-smoke, brine, burned grease, tar, and, as a background, fish. His ears almost immediately detected water-noises running close by, and he could feel the pull of stout oak timber that formed the inner wall of where he lay.

"Fo'c'stle of a fishing schooner!" he announced, and then opened his eyes to prove that he was correct.

He looked out into a three-cornered room occupied by a three-cornered table, and that ran as far back as the foremast. Above, fastened to a huge square beam, hung a chain-lamp so swiveled that it kept itself level however much the schooner kicked and wriggled. On the table, swinging his legs, sat a large, unpleasant-looking man.

"Wal, how are ye?" asked this latter, seeing his charge had recovered consciousness. Never having seen the man before, Code did not consider it necessary to answer. So he wriggled to find out if any bones were broken, and, in the end, discovered a tender knob on the right side of his head.

He soon recalled the visit to St. Pierre, the purchase of the bait, Pete Ellinwood's fight, the general mix-up, and the blow on the head that had finished him. He sat up suddenly.

"Look here! What ship is this?" he demanded.

"You'll find out soon enough when you go on deck. Hungry? I got orders to feed you."

"You bet I'm hungry; didn't have any dinner last night in St. Pierre."

"Two nights ago," said the other, beginning to fry salt pork. "Nigh thirty-six hours you've laid here like a log." Code doubted it, but did not argue. He was trying to puzzle out the situation.

If this was a fishing schooner the men ought to be over the side fishing, and she would be at anchor. Instead, feeling the long, steady heel to leeward and half-recover to windward, he knew she was flying on a course.

Breakfast swallowed, he made his way on deck. As he came up the companionway a man stood leaning against the rail. With a feeling of violent revulsion, Code recognised Nat Burns. A glance at a nearby dory showed the lettering Nettie L., and Schofield at once recognized his position.

He was Nat Burns's prisoner.

"Mornin'," said Burns curtly. "Thought you were goin' to sleep forever."

"It's a hanging offence putting any one to sleep that long," retorted Code cheerfully. "Luck was with you, and I woke up."

"You're hardly in a position to joke about hanging offences," remarked Nat venomously.

"Why not?" Code had gone a sickly pallor, that looked hideous through his tan.

"Because you're goin' home to St. Andrew's to be tried for one."

Code glanced over his left shoulder. The sun was there. The schooner was headed almost directly south-west. Nat had spoken the truth. They were headed homeward.

"Where's your warrant?" Code could feel his teeth getting on edge with rage as he talked to this captor who bore himself with such insolence.

"Don't need a warrant for murder cases, and I'm a constable at Freekirk Head, so everything is being done according to law. The gunboat didn't find you, so I thought, as long as you were right to hand, I'd bring you along."

"Then you knew I was in St. Pierre?"

"Yes; saw you come in. If it hadn't been so dark you'd have recognized the Nettie not far away." Code, remembering the time of night they arrived, knew this to be impossible, for it is dark at six in September. He had barely been able to make out the lines of the nearest schooners.

A man was standing like a statue at the wheel, and, as he put the vessel over on the port tack, his face came brightly into the sun. It was 'Arry Duncan. Code had not been wrong, then, in thinking that he had seen the mans' face in St. Pierre.

"Fine traitor you've got there at the wheel," said Schofield. "He'll do you brown some day."

"I don't think so. Just because he did you, doesn't prove anything. He was in my employ all the time, and getting real money for this work."

"So it was all a plot, eh?" said Code dejectedly. "I give you credit, Burns, for more brains than I ever supposed you had. What's become of Pete Ellinwood and the Lass?"

"Pete is back on the schooner and she's gone out to fish. You needn't worry about them. At the proper time they'll be told you are safe and unhurt."

Code said nothing for a while. With hands rammed into his pockets he stood watching the white and blue sea whirl by. In those few minutes he touched the last depth of failure and despair. For a brief space he was minded to leap overboard.

He shivered as one with an ague and shook off the deadly influence of the idea. Had he no more grit? he asked himself. Had he come this far only to be beaten? Was this insolent young popinjay to win at last? No! Then he listened, for Nat was speaking.

"If you give your word of honour not to try and escape you can have the run of the decks and go anywhere you like on the schooner. If not, you will be locked up and go home a prisoner."

It was the last straw, the final piece of humiliation. Code stiffened as a soldier might to rebuke. A deadly, dull anger surged within him and took possession of his whole being—such an anger as can only come to one who amiable and upright by nature, is driven to inevitable revolt.

"Look here, Burns," he said, his voice low, but intense with the emotion that mastered him. "I'll give no word of honour regarding anything. Between you and me, there is a lot to be settled. You have almost ruined me, and, by Heaven, before I get through with you, you'll rue it!

"I shall make every attempt to escape from this schooner, and if I do escape, look out! If I do not escape and you press these charges against me, I'll hunt you down for the rest of my life; or if I go to prison I will have others do it for me.

"Now you know what to expect, and you also know that when I say a thing I mean it. Now do what you like with me."

Burns looked at Schofield's tense white face. His eyes encountered those flaming blue ones and dropped sullenly. Whether it was the tremendous force of the threat or whether it was a guilty conscience working, no one but himself knew, but his face grew gradually as pallid as that of his captive. Suddenly he turned away.

"Boys," he called to the crew who were working near, "put Schofield in the old storeroom. And one of you watch it all the time. He says he will escape if he can, so I hold you responsible."

Code followed the men to a little shanty seemingly erected against the foremast. It was of stout, heavy boards about long enough to allow a cot being set up in it. It had formerly been used for storing provisions and had never been taken down.

When the padlock snapped behind him Code took in his surroundings. There were two windows in the little cubby, one looking forward and the other to starboard. Neither was large enough to provide a means of escape, he judged. At the foot of the cot was a plain, wooden armchair, both pieces of furniture being screwed to the floor. For exercise there was a strip of bare deck planking about six feet long beside the bed, where he might pace back and forth.

Many Women Suffer
FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS
IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WHY SUFFER WITH BACKACHE, KIDNEYS OR RHEUMATISM NOW?

Letter Tells of Long-looked-for Prescription.

Dear Readers—If I can do any good in the world for others, I wish to do it, and I feel that it is my duty to write about the wonderful results I received from the use of "Anuric." I was suffering from kidney and bladder troubles, scalding urine, backache and rheumatism, and feet and ankles swelled so that at times I could not walk without assistance. Had taken several different kinds of kidney remedies but all failed. I sent for a box of Dr. Pierce's newest discovery, "Anuric," which I received by mail in tablet form. I soon got better and am convinced that this popular new medicine is good. I wish to recommend it to my neighbors and everybody suffering from such troubles.

MRS. M. J. SARGENT.

NOTE: You've all undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his well-known medicines. Well, this prescription is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney complaints, and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys, such as bladder, backache, uric acid, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the continued demand for this wonderful Healing Tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the stores, or send 10 cents for large trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic and reconstructor for any run down being the best blood-maker known.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long—let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well, what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is—if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of lime-stone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sloky complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

Heroism of an Indian.

A few years ago in northern Mexico a train carrying a load of dynamite for use at a mine was suddenly discovered to be on fire at a village station. The station master, on the driver of a locomotive engine picked the train up and ran it away into the country at all the speed he could put on. He made the gentleman jump off and save himself, adding, "I go to my death." When he had got a mile away the dynamite exploded. Every window in the village was broken, and he was blown to atoms, but the inhabitants were saved. He was a pure blooded Indian.—"South America," by James Bryce.

"What's Your Name?"—"What."

A guild of godparents to save children from incongruous names is being suggested. The late Canon Hardaley, author of a book on English names, told the story of what was probably the most idiotic name ever bestowed upon an unfortunate infant. A woman had had one baptised What, for no other reason than to cause amusement to future years when being asked his name he should reply "What"—London Chronicle.

Former U.S. Ambassador Says Kaiser's Ambition Threatens to Destroy Civilization It Has Wrecked.

NEWARK, N.J., May 20.—A severe arraignment of Germany was made by David Jayne Hill, at one time ambassador to Germany, at Newark last night in the lecture on international law before the students of the New Jersey Law School.

Dr. Hill's reference to the Imperial Government was as follows:

"What confronts us is a situation in which economic expansion is in unholy alliance with the inherited preposterous idea of absolute sovereignty. It takes whatever it can grasp and hold. To obtain and maintain its grasp, it is prepared to perpetrate any enormity. It is ready to ruin the whole of Europe and to challenge all the rest of the world in its mad career. It pours living men by the hundreds of thousands into the red hot gaping crater of death. It rains explosives from the skies, it renders the breath of life a cruel poison by asphyxiating gases, it respects neither manhood nor womanhood, nor childhood. It threatens the destruction not only of civilization, which it has already wrecked, but the very existence of the human race.

GOD SELECTING SAINTLY JEWELS

Those Loyal May Have Confidence.

Humility and Meekness Necessary—Patience and Gentleness Also Invaluable Qualities—God's Faithfulness Beyond Question—God's Book of Remembrance—God's Name Stands for His Character—The Church to Be a Glorious Diadem in the Hand of Their God.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Kingston, N. Y., May 21.—Pastor Russell spoke in our city to-day, from the text, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it; and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon His name. And they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that Day when I make up My jewels." Malachi 3: 16, 17.) He said:

Humility is a very important trait of character in anyone, and especially in the Christian. If we do not possess humility and meekness the Lord cannot use us, and we cannot make any progress. We do not know what may be one another's difficulties; but we know that we all have imperfections. But we should fight a good fight with ourselves. If we get ourselves into full line with the will of the Lord, He will help us by His providences.

Should our imperfection be especially along the line of a lack of meekness, the Lord will try us in this respect to show us our need in that direction. Or it may be along the line of a lack of gentleness. We may be rude, and may say and do things in an unkind manner. The Lord may therefore permit us to have certain trials in order to give us an opportunity of developing this quality of character. We may have tests of love for the brethren, for our own family, for our neighbors. The Lord might even hide His face from us for a time to give us a test of love for Him.

All such experiences "work together for good to them that love God, to the called according to His purpose." These are the ones who are desirous above everything else of becoming copies of God's dear Son. With these the Lord is now dealing.

The Loyal May Have Confidence.

This matter of our testing and trying as New Creatures begins with our begetting of the Holy Spirit, and ends when we die. But one may be sure that he is an overcomer; one may have confidence, "full assurance of faith," (Hebrews 10:22.) When we entered into our covenant with God (Psalm 50:5), we gave Him our time, our talents, our influence, our strength—everything that we had. In return, He gave us the begetting of His Holy Spirit, His providential care, and His exceeding great and precious promises respecting the future. If we are still seeking to walk in the footsteps of our dear Lord Jesus Christ, then all is well with us. Therefore we need not fear. If anyone breaks the contract, it will be ourselves. God will surely carry out His part.—1 Thessalonians 5:24.

Thus we may have confidence, in accordance with the Divinely appointed conditions. As the Apostle says, "If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God." (1 John 3: 20, 21.) But if our heart condemns us, then it is not well with us. If we have not been living faithfully to the full extent of our ability, then our heart will condemn us; and what our heart condemns in us God will also condemn. This means that if we wish to become members of the Bride class we must be more diligent, more zealous. We must study our character, and see to it that we develop the necessary qualities for a position in the glorified Church.

Ask yourself, "How much have I cultivated these Heavenly fruits and graces—the faith, the patience, and the brotherly-kindness, that go with love?" Then say to yourself, "This day I shall keep watch over myself and note what my hands are doing, how my time is spent, what my words are, what my thoughts are." Whoever has a proper love for our Lord, a proper appreciation of what He has done for us, and of what He is yet to do, will not find this careful scrutiny of thought, word, and deed a hard thing. It brings before us continually thoughts of God and of Christ, and of the glorious things which he has in reservation for those who love Him more than anything else.

Those who thus study their character are the class mentioned in our text when it says, "They that reverenced the Lord spake often one to another." They speak to one another in Bible studies, in prayer meetings, every Sunday at worship or in the home. They wish to have all the helps that the Lord is providing in these last days. They desire to know all the various parts of God's Plan. They have become separated from the masses of nominal Christians and have been brought together through the knowledge of His Word. So now they converse about the good things that the Lord has shown them. They have a fellowship of spirit.

This desire for fellowship with these of like precious faith is not selfishness, nor an impropriety. This class are especially anxious for fellowship with those who have characters similar to their own, similar faith in the precious blood of Christ, similar consecration, and who are passing through similar experiences at the hands of the great Potsher of the jewels. Their conversation, therefore, will be respecting "the things which belong to their peace"—the things which are uppermost in their hearts; for this class are all seeking first the Kingdom of God and its righteousness, and in earthly matters are content with whatever the Lord's providence shall arrange for them.

God's Book of Remembrance.

When "the Lord hearkened and heard" this class who spoke often one to another, He had a book of remembrance written for them. It is not that the Almighty had to write down this information so as not to forget, but that this statement gives us the thought that He does not forget and that He loves this class. God loves the whole world with a broad, sympathetic love; but He has a special love for His true Church, those who have consecrated themselves fully to Him during this Gospel Age. To such the Master says: "The Father Himself loveth you." They are as dear to Him as the apple of His eye.—John 1:16; 16:27; Zechariah 2:8.

This book of remembrance was kept for those that thought upon His name. In olden times the name stood for the character. Now we too often give names at random. Too many times an ignoble character bears a noble name. But in olden times people were very particular to attach a name which would fit the person's character. For instance, our Lord was named Jesus, because He was to save His people from their sins. (Matthew 1:21.) Jesus means Saviour. God's name stands for His character, glorious in righteousness.

Not very many think highly of the character of our God. There is a reason for this. For centuries the religious teachers have described the Divine character in such a way as to make it very undesirable for any to think much about Him. To many the name Jehovah God stands for One who is to be feared for His mighty power, for One who will throw them over to the Devil, rather than for One who is to be loved because of His great love for all His creatures.

But with God's dear children this is not so. They love God, and delight to study about His name, His character, and to think of His care for them. They are trying diligently to be like their Father in Heaven; and He is showing them His character more and more. Something of the lengths, the breadths, the heights, and the depths of His wonderful love has been revealed to this class; and they are still longing to know more about Him.

By and by the world will be made to know about God's wonderful character and plan. The light of the knowledge of the glory of God will then fill the whole earth. (Isaiah 11:9; Habakkuk 2:14.) But the Church of Christ get this knowledge beforehand. In coming into the family of God we have entered the School of Christ, and He is teaching us all these things. They are written in the Bible "for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages have come," in order that by thus knowing Him we may be prepared for our glorious inheritance with Christ Jesus our Lord and Head.—1 Corinthians 10:11; Colossians 1:12.

The Lord's Precious Jewels.

God's promise to this class that reverenced Him and that thought upon His name is that they shall be His in that Day when He shall make up His jewels. As one cares for precious jewels, so God cares for His saints. The man who handles the jewels sees to it first that they are properly cut and polished; and afterwards he mounts them. But they would not look well except they were mounted; for the mounting has much to do with the beauty of the jewels.

Of His jewels our God will make a beautiful diadem, set in the gold of the Divine nature. Is He to wear this royal diadem? Oh, no! Jehovah God needs no diadem to add to the charms of His person. To the jewel class the Prophet declares, "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:3.) The Church will be in the hand of our God, to be exhibited to angels and to men, as a piece of marvelous workmanship which God has wrought.

In preparing these jewels the Lord has not used force, coercion. Originally they were some of the poor sons and daughters of Adam. God did not compel them to leave their father's house, but simply led them by His Spirit and by the exceeding great and precious promises of His Word. Ultimately they will be diamonds of the first water—pure, stainless. They are to be faultless in love before the Father; and perfect love casts out not only fear, but also selfishness, animosity, evil surmisings, evil speaking, pride, and self-love. As they daily think upon the character of God, His Goodness, His infinity, His plan, His love, they come to know Him more and more intimately and to realize His grand perfection more clearly. Thus they are gradually changed into His character-likeness — from glory to glory."—2 Corinthians 3:18.

God's Jewels Are His Sons.

The Lord presents to us in His Word great truths under figures of speech which even the least learned can comprehend. For instance, instead of telling us that He has knowledge of His faithful ones and will never forget those who are His, and who diligently endeavor to know and to serve Him, He pictures the information, telling us in His Word that He has a "book of life" and a "book of remembrance." Through these figures we get the thought which He would have us get; namely, that He takes full knowledge of them that are His.

Then He encourages this class with the assurance that their love and devotion shall one day have its reward; that a great change is coming in His general dealings with the world of mankind; and that then every sigh, every tear, and every sacrifice for righteousness' sake and for love of the Lord, for His Cause and for His brethren shall be rewarded in a manner that is beyond our present comprehension. This class, however, serve not for selfish reasons, but from devotion, from fidelity and consequently from love; hence they shall find that the light afflictions of the present, which are for only a moment, are working out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, as they look not at the things now seen, but at those now unseen—the eternal things.—2 Corinthians 4: 17, 18.

Without attempting to detail the riches of grace in reservation for them that love God, the Scriptures use two figures which are quite expressive to the eye and the ear of faith—God's jewels, God's faithful sons. These two phrases suggest a full explanation of present experiences. The proper father will instruct, correct, and discipline his son, although he may pass by the greater faults and blemishes of those who are not his children. As respects jewels, we all know the necessity for cutting and polishing them, to the intent that their real qualities may be developed. Thus the Church class see themselves in their Heavenly Father's school of discipline, in preparation to be His heirs—joint-heirs with Christ in His Kingdom. They see the necessity of the trials, the perplexities, and the severities of this present time, that they may be polished and prepared for the glorious future.—Romans 3: 17; Galatians 3:29.

One Day the Close of the Age.

According to our best knowledge of the Word of God, we have now come down to the close of the Gospel Age. All about us we see the foretold signs of our Lord's Second Presence and of the end of the Age. To His Church our Lord Jesus said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads; for your deliverance draweth nigh." (Luke 21:28.) We see these things coming to pass in the great war in Europe, in the mutterings of revolution amongst the nations, in the world-wide Zionist movement of the Jews, etc. The Church, the Bride of Christ, is almost complete. But we do not yet know how long it will be until we shall have finished our earthly course. That is for the Lord to determine.

"Faithful is He that hath called you, who will also do it." Our eye of faith has sighted the prize of glory, honor, immortality, and joint-heirship with Christ. "God hath given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these we might become partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4.) And we have been able to receive these promises. There is nothing that compares with them. The more we know of the great Divine Plan of the Ages and of the privileges which we may have in that Plan, the more we are enthused, the more we would glorify the Father and the Son, the more we rejoice together as brethren in the Body of Christ.

Those who have comprehended this Divine Plan for human salvation have an abundant theme, a never-ending theme, a theme which above all others will fill their hearts and their minds, and which will crowd out all worldly topics as not worthy of comparison. It will crowd out all complainings and murmurings, as wholly improper on the part of those who have been recipients of so many Divine favors and who have "much advantage every way," in that they have delivered unto them the Divine oracles. Especially is this true in view of our adoption into the family of God as sons, "joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord, if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together."

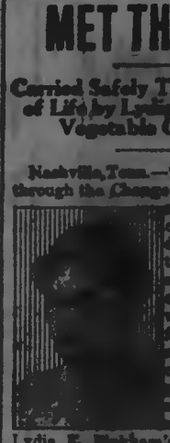
A Word to the People of God.

Let us, then, as true sons of God, remember the importance of honesty—"truth in the inward parts"—when we come together to study the Divine Word and to help one another as members of the Body of Christ. "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory," but let each esteem the other greater than himself in saintliness, seeking to see in each other, so far as possible, the noble, the good, the true; and let each seek to watch his own heart and to know of his own blemishes. Thus shall personal humility and brotherly love keep pace with our growth in the knowledge of Divine things.

Let us talk together of the mighty power of our God, which will soon overthrow the reign of Sin and Death, which will bind Satan that he shall deceive the nations no more, and which will establish the Lord Jesus Christ and His glorified Church in power and great glory, with dominion over all the earth, with authority to punish sin and to reward every effort toward righteousness. That almighty power will lift up out of the miry pit of sin, out of the weakness and imperfections of the flesh—mental, moral, and physical—every member of the human family who desires to return to the grand perfection of human nature represented originally in Father Adam before he fell. Those who realize the Lord's Presence in the gatherings of His people will be very careful that their words, their actions, and their very thoughts are such as will honor His name. They will remember that the Lord hearkens and hears.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it."—Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 625 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

WOLVES IN RUSSIA

Daring Brutes That Attack Travelers on the Steppes.

EXCITING BATTLE AT NIGHT.

Perilous Plight of a Sleigh Party That Was Surrounded and Set Upon by a Pack of the Ferocious and Famished Animals—A Timely Rescue.

There are still wolves on the steppes of Russia and pretty ferocious ones at that, as appears from this story sent to a Swedish paper by one of its correspondents, who was traveling a winter or two ago through the wastes of what was formerly known as Lithuania.

It was a bright, frosty winter day. The snow was excellent, and the mail sleigh glided forward at great speed. A troika with three Poles in it followed behind. Toward sunset we emerged from the dark pine woods upon the steppe, which stretched away in front of us as far as the eye could reach.

Soon the stars made their appearance, and the moon rose. It was bitterly cold, and the snow crackled beneath the runners. The horses' breath rose in the air like thick smoke. The songs and shouts of the Poles died away, and profound silence reigned.

Suddenly one of the horses whinnied, then another, and a third shied violently, uttering that terrible cry of which the horse is capable only when in extreme fear. I could see by the light of the moon the shadow of an animal about the size of a dog flitting over the frozen surface of a marsh pool which lay some twenty paces from us on one side of the road.

No animal can travel more silently than a wolf when in search of prey, and none can attack so suddenly and unexpectedly. I was slowly raising my gun when a second wolf rose immediately in front of the horses with great erect and green, phosphorescent eyes. At the same time points of light appeared all over the mere, and the howling of the beasts rang out.

A shot was fired. Revolver in hand, Lecock, one of the Poles, stood on the driving seat of the troika. Then from the mail sleigh I discharged both barrels of my gun, and a savage howl announced that they had taken effect. Two of the most daring of our assailants lay rolling in the snow.

The three Poles kept firing furiously, although the attack of the wolves was directed more against our sleigh, probably because it was drawn by double the number of horses. Our driver had no other weapon than his loaded whip, but with it he dealt tremendous blows.

The horses struggled madly and tried with all their strength to break the harness. At each shot from my gun the wolves scattered, only to collect again immediately and renew their attack on the horses. Suddenly there arose a wild yell behind us.

The three Poles were rolling in the snow by the side of their overturned sleigh. Lecock's badly driven horses had torn themselves loose from the troika in their terror, and were careering wildly over the snow covered steppe, pursued by some of the wolves. They were soon pulled down, and in the stillness of the night their death screams were terrible. The Poles wallowed about in the snow shouting, weeping and lamenting by turns.

Their situation was, indeed, sufficiently serious, for only Lecock had had enough presence of mind to hide himself beneath the sleigh, and the mail driver and I, surrounded by wolves, could give them no help. I looked upon them as doomed and felt sure that we should quickly share their fate.

Suddenly our pursuers disappeared, and although bleeding badly, the horses became calmer. The gleaming eyes of the wolves were seen only here and there out on the steppe. A shot rang out, then a volley, succeeded by yells of pain. A dozen dead wolves lay on the ground, and two page beasts actually expired beneath the hoofs of the horses as our rescuers came up in their tinkling sleighs.

It was a landed proprietor with his servants whose solitary farm lay only a couple of versts away. None of us was dangerously wounded. The wolves had treated the Poles worst, for their clothes were nearly torn from their bodies. They were bitten, too, but not seriously.

The following morning our host, Herr Stanski, came across the skeletons of the three troika horses scarcely half a verst from the scene of our struggle. The poor creatures were still bound together with the harness. What our own fate would have been were it not for our timely rescue, is not hard to imagine. The thought of it makes me shudder to this day.

GUNPOWDER IN WAR.

For Centuries Its Use Was Opposed in the Name of Humanity.

There was a period when any kind of "explosive" fighting in war was considered barbarous. The discovery of gunpowder put a stop to the old fashioned method of attack, in which only missiles and sharp edged weapons were considered ethical, but gunpowder did not come into approval without a struggle. In fact, it was under the "humanity" ban for almost three centuries.

This remarkable compound of saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal, which was given its first tryout at the siege of Constantinople in 1453, had been known to both the chemist and the soldier for a hundred years or more. It is said to have been discovered by Roger Bacon in England about the year 1200 and by a German monk named Schwarz twenty years later. Another independent discoverer of the same dangerous mixture was an unknown and uncelebrated Moor, whose secret was ultimately carried into Europe in the fourteenth century. Even he was not the first to make an explosive compound. The Chinese "beat him to it," having used this same kind of mixture for rocket signals before the Christian era.

The fall of Constantinople was brought about by the use, the wholly unethical and altogether barbarous use, of cannon balls, and it was not until about a century later that the world gave its full sanction to the killing of men by means of gunpowder.

Fatal Abstraction.

History tells how Archimedes the Great, while busily engaged in tracing geometric figures in the sand in his home city, Syracuse, forgetful of the fact that the city was besieged and all the inhabitants in danger of being slaughtered by the Romans, was spared by the victorious foemen, who had forced their entrance. Archimedes perished. And Plato was near to death on account of his abstraction. While walking forth one evening, his eyes fixed on the stars, his mind busy at solving some celestial problem that occupied it, he fell into a well, from which he was extricated with difficulty.—Chicago Herald.

Would Do Her Best.

He—Of course you understand, Betty, that our engagement must be kept secret.

She—Oh, yes, dear. I'll be sure and tell everybody that.

Suffered Constantly from HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters, reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SUFFERERS FROM THE WAR.

STOCKHOLM, May 20.—Evidence of the heavy toll that tuberculosis is exacting in the world war is found in the exchange of disabled prisoners which is being conducted through Sweden by Russia and Austria. One train from the Russian camps had eighty cases of consumption among the 200 Austrian prisoners on board. On another train from Russia there were 30 Austrians who had been rendered insane by their sufferings. Three trains are now running weekly in each direction exchanging prisoners who from disease, loss of limbs or mental breakdown, are unfit for further military service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The evacuation of Vera Cruz had taken place, and the fleet was ready to sail. The surgeon in charge of the hospital approached the medical director to report that all invalids had been removed.

"There's a man," said the former, "who, I think, must have died without his death getting on to the list. He was dying yesterday afternoon. I haven't seen him since and presume his body was removed. Conover should have seen to it that the record was made."

"Well, there's no time now," said the medical director, "to investigate the case. We must go abroad."

So it was then when the ships reached the United States the name of Horace Morton, petty officer, was reported, "Died in hospital."

Now, it happened that the elimination of Horace Morton was very acceptable to Mrs. Martha Jones, the mother of Ethel Jones, who had been betrothed to the sailor before he departed for Vera Cruz. He had nothing to marry on, while Philip Thompson, a plumber, who had wanted Ethel, had made considerable funds in his business and was able to take care of her in good style. Mrs. Jones had set her face against her daughter's marrying Morton, and to quiet the old lady Ethel promised that if her lover lost his life in Mexico she would marry Thompson. After this promise there was peace in the Jones family, Mrs. Jones hoping that the man who she considered stood in the way of her daughter's welfare would be snuffed out by the Mexican bullet.

But there was only a small scrap at the landing at Vera Cruz, and greatly to Mrs. Jones' disappointment, Morton was not among the killed. Then came the evacuation, and with it the mother made preparations to renew the fight in the matter of a son-in-law. But when she read in a morning paper that Morton had died at Vera Cruz she muttered silent thanks and with every appearance of heartfelt sympathy broke the sad news to her daughter, all the while laying plans for a wedding with the plumber.

Ethel shut herself up in her room for a week, then came out with a surrender, telling her mother that since her lover was dead she cared not whom she married and was perfectly willing to take the plumber or any one else. Such being the case, Mrs. Jones sent Mr. Thompson word that the way was open for him to win her daughter, but she advised him to be very circumspect and proceed slowly. She believed that Ethel thought she loved another, but that the girl was deceiving herself. A few weeks' courtship would do the business.

Mr. Thompson who was not an adept in wooing a woman who had just lost the man she loved, began by sending Ethel an invitation to a plumber's ball. Fortunately, he sent it through Mrs. Jones, who threw it in the fire with all haste and wrote her daughter's nonacceptance on account of indisposition.

Mr. Thompson's next move was sending a bouquet of flowers. Mrs. Jones intercepted them, separated the posy, put them in a box and gave them to Ethel as an offering of sympathy from the donor.

This was a beginning, and Mrs. Jones hoped that by carefully heading off the indelicate attentions of Mr. Thompson to bring the affair to a successful termination in due time. Why she took so much pains to prevent her daughter's being ruffled by the plumber's want of tact is not plain, because Ethel was not in a state of mind to care whom she married. Perhaps her motive was looking to the future. It is also a question as to why Mr. Thompson was anxious to marry a girl whose heart was in the grave. He explained this to Mrs. Jones by saying that a live man was better any day than a dead one and Ethel was sure to find it out. It must be admitted that there is more wisdom in the explanation than sentiment in the statement.

All things had an end, and the plumber's courtship was no exception. The wedding day came round, and with it came a coincidence. When the wedding party was assembling in walked Horace Morton, who had failed to get on the dead list in accordance with the navy regulations. And there was no time for an investigation. He had walked out of the hospital in delirium, and the party responsible for him had been looking for him up to the very moment of the sailing of the fleet homeward.

Upon his appearance as a wedding guest, pale and emaciated, there was a scattering of those present. The bride alone seemed to consider him flesh and blood and, rushing toward him, fell into his arms. He had been aware of Mrs. Jones' opposition to him and her preference for the plumber; consequently he took in the situation without its being explained to him.

"I reckon," he said "that since everything is handy for a wedding we may as well have one."

Mrs. Jones, seeing that she had lost, threw up the sponge. The plumber remarked that there were as good fish in the sea as ever were caught and walked away without any presently prevailed upon to celebrate the wedding with the change of grooms, and when the parson came in she was married to the sailor.

This is not the only case of a man's being officially dead and turning up at a time when he is not expected.

Heart's Action Was Weak And Circulation Poor

He Was Always Tired and Nervous and Had Pains in Feet and Legs —Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured

The heart is a wonderful worker, plodding away year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. So long as the blood is rich and nourishing it renews its own waste and keeps up a vigorous circulation of the blood through the arteries and veins of the human system.

But when the blood gets thin the nerves are starved, motive power is lacking, the heart's action weakens and the circulation is slow. The hands and feet feel cold, there are cramps and pains in the legs and through the body, digestion fails, you become nervous and irritable and do not rest or sleep well.

This letter will give you some idea how admirably Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is suited to overcome derangements of this nature. It is, above all, a creator of new, rich blood, and with the blood in good condition the nerves are soon restored and bodily organs resume their natural functions.

Mrs. E. A. Hutchings, "Prairie View," Elva, Man., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my husband had tried almost every remedy recommended as a tonic. He suffering with cold feet, poor circulation of the blood, and was always tired. He had pains in his feet and legs, and could get no rest or sleep at night. After the first box of the Nerve Food we could see an improvement, and now after using it for six months, he is an entirely different man. He eats and sleeps well and has no pains in his feet and legs. It has built up his health wonderfully, and we can recommend it as a splendid nerve tonic."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S KITCHEN APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

Among the wash materials that are suitable for a strictly serviceable garment like the one pictured are blue and white striped galatea, gingham, calico, crinkled cotton crepe and others. Every careful housekeeper knows that food and cleanliness mean a daily round of work, and the wise woman will make the tools for her activities as attractive as possible; the work is certainly made easier in this way.

This design of a serviceable garment and necessary kitchen tool has no sleeves; it fastens at the back with a strap buttoning to the shoulder straps that attach themselves to the centre of the belt. The front straps are in one with the large pockets and are the "odd" features that stamp the design an original one; by reason of this, it shows a fashion note. The front forms a panel and a belt at the waist in the back marks the skirt portion, which is cut on the full lines that are necessary in an apron.

The pattern is cut in sizes 34, 38 and 42 inches bust measure. To develop in size 34 it will take 4¼ yards 36 inch material, and for 5 cents, sent to the office of this publication, you can obtain the pattern.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 3 for 35c.

CHOOSING A HOBBY.

Make It One That Will Relieve the Tension of Business.

Writing on the advantage and enjoyment that a busy man will derive from a hobby, Arnold Bennett says in the Metropolitan:

"In choosing a distraction—that is to say, in choosing a rival to his business—he should select some pursuit whose nature differs as much as possible from the nature of his business, and which will bring into activity another side of his character. If his business is monotonous, demanding care and solicitude rather than irregular, intense efforts of the brain, then let his distraction be such as will make a powerful call upon his brain. But if on the other hand the course of his business runs in crises that string up the brain to its tightest strain, then let his distraction be a foolish and merry one.

"Many men fall into the error of assuming that their hobbies must be as dignified and serious as their vocations, though surely the example of the greatest philosophers ought to have taught them better! They seem to imagine that they should continually be improving themselves in either body or mind. If they take up a sport, it is because the sport may improve their health. And if the hobby is intellectual it must needs be employed to improve their brain.

"The fact is that their conception of self improvement is too narrow. In their restricted sense of the phrase they possibly don't need improving, they possibly are already improved to the point of being a nuisance to their fellow creatures; possibly what they need is worsening. In the broad and full sense of the phrase self improvement, a course of self worsening might improve them.

"I have known men—and everybody has known them—who would approach nearer to perfection if they could only acquire a little carelessness, a little absentmindedness, a little illogicalness, a little irrational and infantile gaiety, a little unscrupulousness in the matter of the time of day. These considerations should be weighed before certain hobbies are dismissed as being unworthy of a plain man's notice."

PICTURESQUE HAVANA.

A Foreign City in Every Sense, With Its Own Odd Charm.

Americans driving to their hotel through Havana's narrow, noisy streets invariably exclaim that it seems to them "as if they were abroad." The question—to borrow a phrase from the widely traveled but unemotional Mr. Baedeker—"need not detain them long." They are abroad. Havana is not merely "like a foreign town;" it is a foreign town. It has its own odd look, its special picturesqueness, its own tumultuous life. It abounds in unknown dishes and strange fruits, and upon the hot tropic night it pours out half barbaric music and queer melancholy songs.

The long traditions of the Spanish dominion of the two Americas still cling about Havana's fortresses and the palaces, churches and monasteries of her ancient streets. She was a proud, rich city, the entrepot of the west, when our northern mainland was a wilderness. And now in the Cuban twentieth century she is a crowded, thriving, gay metropolis, with her own pride, her own tropic airs and graces, her own wholly un-American individuality.

She may be crowded in the brief winter season with American tourists, may contain (as indeed she always has contained) a considerable American business colony and may be a refuge for derelicts and vagabonds straight from the pages of O. Henry, Richard Harding Davis and other Kiplings of Spanish America. Still, she is always the old Havana, the Cuban capital of Cuba.—Harrison Rhodes in Metropolitan.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

To Exclude All Aliens.

At a communication of the Grand Lodge of England in London recently the Duke of Connaught was unanimously re-elected Grand Master of England Free Masonry, for the ensuing year. In June of last year, Grand Lodge decided that in order to prevent the peace and harmony of the craft being disturbed it was necessary that all brethren of German, Austrian, Hungarian, or Turkish birth should not during the continuance of the war attend any Masonic meeting of any description. It was determined at this meeting to extend this restriction "until Grand Lodge, after the treaty of peace has been signed, should otherwise determine," which might result in a perpetual exclusion of all brethren of alien enemy birth.

To Encourage Thrift.

A novel scheme has been inaugurated in Londonderry with the object of encouraging thrift amongst soldiers' wives and dependants. A number of prominent ladies of the city attend at various post offices and get in touch with parties drawing separation allowances, to whom they explain the advantages of economy and emphasize the desirability of depositing a portion of the money in the Post Office Savings Bank.

WHISPERING GALLERIES.

Old World Churches With Remarkable Acoustic Properties.

The most celebrated whispering gallery is that which surrounds the base of the interior of the dome of St. Paul's cathedral, London. A person speaking near its surface can be heard distinctly by one listening near the smooth wall at the other extremity of the diameter, but not elsewhere.

In the cathedral of Gloucester a whispering passage leads from one aisle to the opposite behind the east window of the choir. It is seventy-five feet long, six and a half feet high and three feet wide in the form of half an irregular octagon. The walls and ceilings are of freestone, and the slightest whisper travels from end to end.

The cathedral of the Taj Mahal in Agra, India, has most marvelous echoes and reverberating qualities, but is scarcely a whispering gallery. The whole cathedral of Girgenti, in Sicily, has this character owing to the peculiar structure of its walls. These remarkable properties also belonged to the "Ear of Dionysius," cut in the rock at Syracuse in the shape of a parabolic curve, ending in an elliptical arch. It is said that the tyrant seated in a small chamber over a hundred feet from the spot occupied by his captives by this means could hear every word spoken by his prisoners.—London Answers.

If Animals Could Speak.

It is a startling fact that if some animals could tell their life history they would be able to recall events which happened hundreds of years ago. A Russian eagle, for instance, would be able to remember watching with greedy eyes as one by one the French soldiers under Napoleon fell exhausted out of the ranks in their awful retreat from Moscow in 1812. There are crocodiles alive in India today which saw the first English traveler set foot there, while there are whales in the sea which may have skirted the coast of France when it was invaded in 1415. A great many elephants could recall historical events of a hundred years ago, while there are ravens still living whose memory could go back twice that period.—London Answers.

Plenty of Room.

The young man who writes verses was standing out in the night gazing at the sky when a friend ran across him.

"What are you doing—studying astronomy?"

"Go away and don't disturb me. I am gazing into infinite distance."

"I don't see what satisfaction you find in that."

"That's because you never had any experience with editors. You don't know what a comfort it is to find some place where nothing is crowded out for lack of space."—London Tit-Bits.

The Amethyst.

A good example of one of the ways in which magical properties became attributed to natural objects is the stone known as amethyst. The ancient Indian name of this stone had the sound represented by its present name. In Greek this sound happens to mean "anti-wine;" hence, without more ado, the ancients declared that the amethyst was a preventive of and a cure for drunkenness!—London Mail.

Idle Dream.

"Poor dad! Sister told him that the girls of her class are going to graduate in dollar gowns."

"Well, what about poor dad?"

"He thinks a dollar is all he will be called upon to give up."

Two Sides.

IN FREEZING TRENCHES.

Officer Describes First Adventure of New Battalion.

An interesting and detailed account of how a battalion first takes to the trenches in cold weather is given in a letter from Lance-Corp. C. R. Bennett, attached to a Warwickshire Regiment of the Imperial Army, to his father in Montreal.

"We marched out of the village about three o'clock in the afternoon," he says, "and after a very hard march over very bad roads we arrived at a barn where two companies of the regiment we were to be attached to—until our own battalion arrived—were preparing to go into the trenches that evening as soon as it was dark. It was a black night and raining hard, and the nearer we got to the trenches the worse the roads became. The regiment we were to go in with were old hands and knew the ropes well."

"Before we got to the communication trench proper, we had to enter a trench to get through a rising bit of ground, for at this point the bullets were whining overhead, just to remind us that we were in it at last. Well, this trench proved to be not less than three feet deep in water which gave us a delightful sensation about the legs. We at length reached the dug-out we were to pass the night in. It was about five feet high and five feet wide by about twenty-four feet long, and the floor was wet and muddy. We sat on our packs and as sleep was out of the question our friends soon made some hot tea which put new life into us. There were three other N. C. O.'s beside myself of our battalion, and we took it in turns to slither about the trench during the night to see how men were posted and made ourselves acquainted with their periods of duty, etc.

"During the night all the men were ordered to turn out, except those on sentry duty, to clean up the trench. I thought at the time that daylight would have been a better time to do such work, but I learned on enquiry that it was done to keep the circulation going and therefore prevent frost bite, a complaint which is exceedingly painful, and everything possible is being done to minimise it. When the light arrived I had a pot at the enemy over the parapet, and somehow I felt it was worth the journey of the night before, to be able to do that.

"After four days' instruction, our own battalion relieved the regiment we had been with and then we carried on the good work for another four days in which we experienced some horrible weather conditions. The trenches were knee deep in many places and thigh and waist deep in mud. More than one poor chap got hopelessly stuck, and it proved an exceedingly hard task to get them out again."

FRENCH ATTACKS ARE SUCCESSFUL ON BOTH BANKS OF THE MEUSE RIVER

Near Vaux Village French Capture a Trench While West of Deadman's Hill the Enemy is Thrown Back With Severe Losses---Austrian Successes Against the Italians Have Cost the Attacking Forces Dearly.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 22.—French counter attacks have driven the Germans from positions on both banks of the Meuse in the renewal of heavy fighting around Verdun, the War Office announced to-day.

German attacks on both banks of the river have been repulsed.

West of Dead Man's hill each German assault met with an eruption of fire from the French guns that threw the enemy back with severe losses.

The French by a successful counter attack regained a part of the ground lost Saturday night in this region.

On the east bank of the Meuse the French carried out a successful attack against German positions near Vaux village, capturing a trench.

The Germans suffered heavy losses last night in unsuccessful attempts to reconquer the Haudremont quarries, captured by the French earlier in the day.

The Germans attempted unsuccessfully to attack the French lines in the Champagne, using gas. A shift in the wind rolled the gas clouds back upon the German lines.

Feeling Growing in Turkey Against Huns

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, May 22.—A special cable from Bucharest says: A high Turkish official who has arrived in Bucharest from Constantinople says: Anger against the Germans, Enver Pasha, Minister of War, and Talaat Bey, Minister of the Interior, is growing in the Turkish army and among the people.

Field Marshal Baron Von Der Goltz did not die a natural death as was reported, but was assassinated in Bagdad by a Turkish staff officer, Hikmet Bey, who was shot by a German officer.

Gen. Von Blume, commander of cavalry, was assassinated by a Turkish officer after the Russians took Trebisond. Several other German officers have been killed in Constantinople.

An attempt to poison Enver Pasha was made recently in the Turkish capital.

An extensive anti-German conspiracy was discovered in Constantinople lately. The conspirators had distributed a manifesto throughout the army calling on the soldiers to turn their arms against the country's "internal enemies," Enver Pasha and Talaat Bey, "who have sold Turkey to the Germans."

Accuses Birrell of Lax Readings

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 22.—Viscount Midleton, former Secretary of War, accused Augustine Birrell, former Chief Secretary for Ireland, of lax dealings with the Irish rebels, in his testimony before the Royal Commission investigating the rebellion. Midleton's statement that he had warned Premier Asquith of the seriousness of the situation in Ireland was one of the sensations of to-day's testimony. He declared that he placed all the facts before the Prime Minister on January 26. Asquith evidently called the matter to the attention of Birrell. Midleton said he warned Lord Winborne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, only six days before the outbreak that grave results would follow if no action was taken. Others, he said, gave similar warnings. Adjutant- General McCudy, of the War Office, in a letter read before the Commission, said that so far as he knew Birrell had never requested the War Office to send troops for the purpose of anticipating in the rebellion and overawing the Sinn Feiners.

Lord Winborne declared that he too urged Lord Kitchener and Sir John French to send more troops to Ireland, but was told that would be a delay in the sending of troops to the front.

Early this year he said that he suggested Sinn Feiners either be deported or interned. He admitted, however, that he was more morried over the possibility of a German raid than of internal disturbances.

Spanish King To Start Peace Proposals

Special to The Examiner:

MADRID, May 22.—King Alfonso may initiate peace negotiations in the near future, Madrid papers stated to-day. The Spanish ruler plans first to sound out the peace sentiment in each of the belligerent countries. If the results are satisfactory he will send two Spanish statesmen to belligerent capitals to work out plans for a truce.

RECORD CROWD IS EXPECTED WEDNESDAY

All preparations are complete for Wednesday's demonstration and farewell to the 93rd Battalion. From all indications one of the largest crowds that ever gathered at the Exhibition Grounds will be on hand as big delegations are coming from all parts of the county to say good-bye to the boys in khaki. At 10:30 o'clock the battalion will be reviewed at the Exhibition Grounds. This will be one of the biggest features of the day and should not be missed as it will afford a splendid opportunity of judging of the capabilities of the battalion as a whole. In the afternoon there will be a varied programme of sports, including races, a ball game, motor-cycle races, etc., mixed with military features of a specially interesting nature, including exhibitions by the Machine Gun Section, Signallers and a physical drill squad under the direction of Sergt.-Major Miller. Meals will be served at the grounds for those who wish to remain there all day, and there will be refreshment booths and other features. The following officers of the 93rd Battalion will assist in the various departments:

Tents, etc.—Lieut. Stock, Lieut. Sexton.
Sports—Lieut. Gillham, Lieut. Ketchum, Lieut. Payne.
Chairs, Carting, etc.—Lieut. McNab, Lieut. Stevenson, Lieut. Richardson
Guards, Tickets, etc.—Lieut. Milburn, Lieut. Hatton.

The complete programme will be published to-morrow.

TAG DAY IN AID OF 93RD BATTALION BROUGHT $535.14

Sale of Buttons on Saturday by the Ladies Netted a Nice Little Sum For the Battalion Fund

BUTTONS COST $161.70

$535.14 was the result of Tag Day in aid of the 93rd Battalion Fund. $696.84 was the total sum received, but after the cost of the buttons had been deducted, the above amount remained. In view of the fact that a canvass of the city is to be made on behalf of the Fund, no doubt many citizens only contributed a small amount in this way, waiting to give to the collectors.

GET OUT YOUR FLAGS FOR VICTORIA DAY

The citizens of Peterborough, especially the merchants, can cooperate in the success of Wednesday's military demonstration and farewell to the 93rd Battalion, by displaying flags and bunting. Let the city be a mass of colour on Wednesday and Thursday. Every merchant on George street should see to it that his premises are decorated with a flag at least, while citizens generally should see that the old flag is kept flying. Some time ago the suggestion was made that in front of each home a soldier has gone, a flag should be permanently displayed. Many have adopted this plan, and The Examiner would like to see it unanimously put into practice. It would be a splendid index of the city's loyalty to be able to say to visitors to our city that every home that has a flag displayed has sent a soldier to the front. If one has gone from your home get a flag, large or small, display it prominently and keep it flying until the war is over.

FIRST DETACHMENT OF 93rd BATTALION LEAVES FOR CAMP

Advance Party of Eighty-six Non-Coms and Men Under Command of Major Lech Entrained For Barriefield This Morning--Main Body Will Leave Thursday---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The 93rd Battalion has already begun to leave the city. This morning an advance party, consisting of eighty-six non-commissioned officers and men in charge of Major K. G. Lech, left for Barriefield to put the camp in shape for the arrival of the main body of the battalion on Thursday morning. The advance consisted of one non-com and twenty men from each company, the non-coms being Sergt. Jay from A company, Sergt. Lockie from B company, Sergt. Ball from C company, and Corp. O'Brien from D company, while Corp. E. G. Hardie and Pte. Jackson represented the battalion cooks.

The men paraded at the armouries at 7 o'clock this morning, and were each presented with socks by the 57th Chapter, Daughters of the Empire. Mayor Duffus, Ald. Dobbin, Ald. Langford and City Clerk Armstrong were present on behalf of the civic authorities, and the Mayor briefly addressed the men before they left the armouries. Major Davidson, chaplain of the battalion, conducted a short but impressive service, while Capt. J E. R. Munro, adjutant of the 93rd, read to the advance party some of the standing orders of Barriefield camp.

At 8 o'clock, headed by the brass and bugle bands of the battalion, the advance party left on their march to the station, headed by the brass band playing, "My Little Girl," which the men found a little difficult to sing this morning, although they came out strong on the two lines,

"My little girl, I know you're waiting
And I'm coming back to you."

The men wore their full equipment, with their great coats slung around their shoulders and carried rifles. They looked very business like as they marched down street.

At the G.T.R. station a large number of friends gathered to say goodbye and the affecting farewells that have grown all too familiar, were again in evidence as mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts gave the last greeting to their loved ones. While waiting for the departure of the train the band played "O Canada," "Rule Britannia" and other patriotic airs, and as the train started to move they broke into the strains of one of 93rd's well known marching songs, Farewell Isabelle," the words of which are particularly appropriate to such an occasions:

"Farewell Isabelle, Isabelle
Don't let it grieve you, I've got to go.
Farewell Isabelle, Isabelle
I've got to leave you to face the foe
You know very well, Isabelle
As the battle I go through,
I'll do my best while I'm in it, to win it
As I won, you.

As the train pulled out the boys in khaki who were leaving cheered lustily in reply to the cheers from the crowd, while arms were waved as long as the train was in sight.

Lt.-Col. Johnston and the majority of the officers of the 93rd were on hand to see the detachment away.

Following is a list of the men who left this morning:

Tragic Culmination To a Police Raid

"Dollie" Simpson Committed Suicide at Her Home 139 Sherbrooke Street Shortly After One O'clock This Morning — House Was Raided by the Police.

TOOK CARBOLIC ACID

After suffering for upwards of an hour from the effects of carbolic acid, self administered, a woman locally known as "Dollie Simpson," passed away early this morning in the presence of a squad of policemen and a couple of doctors, who made a frantic but futile effort to save the woman's life. The tragedy was the culmination to a police raid that was made shortly after midnight at 139 Sherbrooke street. The house is one of two houses situated at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets, opposite the site purchased by the Government for the proposed new post office and customs house. Both the occupants and the house have been under police surveillance for some time. Shortly after midnight Sunday, Patrol Sergeants Kidd and Reid and Policeman Denneard entered the house and found the deceased in company with a man. She was placed under arrest and preparations were made to remove her to the police station. Before she could be removed from the house she became suddenly ill.

Medical Aid Summoned.

The ambulance and two doctors were summoned. The police applied first aid treatment until Dr. Greer and Dr. Amys arrived, when the case was diagnosed as one of poisoning. Death occurred some time after one o'clock this morning, after which the body was removed to Comstock's undertaking parlours.

It is surmised that the woman took the poison during the interval that she was out of sight of the police. Two small bottles were found concealed in her clothes and from the remaining contents of one and the symptoms manifested by the woman before she died, it was assumed that she had taken a dose of carbolic acid. Just when the poison was taken or how it was administered is not known. The police used every reasonable precaution in connection with the case and are at a loss to know just how the deadly drug was taken.

Only a Boarder.

"Dollie" Simpson had more than one alias. Years ago she went under the name of Mrs. William Pearson. It is claimed that Pearson was her lawful husband. He is said to be living in Toronto. In latter years she was sometimes known as Mrs. Seney, and finally caused it to be known that she was the wife of Pte. Edward Thebeau. One week ago she received word from Ottawa to the effect that Pte Edward Thebeau, who was supposed to be her husband, had been wounded in the thigh. Pte. Thebeau, who is Canadian born, enlisted here early in 1915 with the 57th contingent to the 39th Battalion, and went overseas with the 39th, afterwards being transferred to another battalion at the front, as were nearly all the other privates in the 39th. The official notice from Ottawa was in French, the Adjutant General's Department being evidently misled by the name. Mrs. Thebeau was unable to read the message and had to have it translated into English.

Members of the Thebeau family claim that the deceased was not married to Pte. Edward Thebeau and that so far as they were aware he was only boarding with the woman prior to enlisting in the 39th Battalion.

An inquest will be held this evening, commencing at eight o'clock.

PTE. T. BARRELL, of 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., a former local resident, who died of wounds on April 26th.

FORMER PETERBORO' SOLDIER DEAD AS RESULT OF WOUNDS

Pte. Thomas Barrell Who Enlisted in Cobourg With the First Contingent Was Wounded on April 26th and Died Four Days After

HAD RELATIVES HERE

Word was received in the city this morning by Mrs. George Barrell, 712 Harvey Street, of the death from wounds, of her brother-in-law, Pte. T. Barrell, of the 2nd Battalion, on April 30th, in France. According to a letter from her husband, Pte. Geo. Barrell of the 4th Battalion, his brother Tom was wounded on April 26th, when he was hit on the arm and shoulder by a piece of shell. His wounds were not thought to be serious at the time; consequently the news of his death, this morning, was a great shock to his friends here.

The late Pte. Barrell enlisted at Cobourg with the 1st contingent. He came through St. Julien, Ypres, and Festubert without a scratch. He had been in Canada four years at the time of enlistment, most of which was spent in Peterborough. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and one child, now at Shoreham, Kent, England.

His brother, Pte. George Barrell, now in France with the 4th Battalion, enlisted here with the 57th Battalion.

Three More Peterborough Men Back

Trio of Soldiers Invalided From Europe Arrive at Quebec

Examiner Special.

QUEBEC CITY, May 22.—Corp. J. Coppack, Gunner A. Leach and Pte. A. E. Blundell, of Peterborough, are among the returned soldiers arriving on the Metagama to-day and awaiting their clearances at the discharge depot here.

Of the above men Corp. John Coppack left here over a year ago with the 39th Battalion, while Gunner ("Buster") Leach left last autumn with the 33rd Battery. Pte. Blundell's name does not appear on any of the local lists, but there is a possibility that there has been a telegraphic mistake in the name. Nine Peterborough men invalided from Europe have arrived in Canada during the past ten days, the others being Pte. Pelan of the 2nd Battalion, Pte. R. H. Muir of the 21st Battalion, Pres. C. Sturgeon, F. Underwood and W. J. Williams of the Mounted Rifles, and Pte. A. Crippa of the 39th Battalion. Some of these men are expected to-day.

LEAVING HOME AND COMING HOME.

In a few days the 39rd Battalion will be leaving home, and the fact of our taking in the war with a new contingent will be coming home to us with greater directness. Yesterday was probably the last Sunday the battalion will spend in Peterborough, and naturally in all the churches, this circumstance was recognized by some special features of the service, by special prayers for their safety and success. As the time of their departure draws near we are drawn nearer to them, and we begin to think and realize what all the marching of the uniformed flowers of our manhood through our streets for the past few months means. We begin to realize that it is not mere military display—that it means business, and that the smart and loyal young fellows are being on serious business. We begin to realize, or if we do not we should do, that they are going abroad to fight for us as really and effectively as if they were fighting at home, to repel an invading enemy. We should, and it is hoped we do, realize the fact that the 39rd Battalion is fighting for us, doing the actual fighting that we cannot all of us take a share in actively in the field. If we recognize this fact, we are in honour and duty bound to do our share of the fighting, and not allow others to do it all and all for us. We have our share of responsibility placed directly upon us, and we should not shrink from its performance. We are called upon to fight in our own way, as really as the brave boys who are wearing the colous, and putting limb and life in pledge for our good and the good of the country and Empire. We should not fail them. We should be awfully humiliated if the cable carried the news to us that the 39rd Battalion when it came to the front, failed to do its duty, or failed, as they will not do, to measure up to the brilliant record, that Canadians have compiled in the past days of the present war. It would be no worse, however, for them to fail than for us to fail, which we shall do unless we loyally support, and do everything in our power, to give them the help that they need; to contribute to their comfort; to keep them physically fit so that they will remain at the top notch of effectiveness in the fight they will within a few months be waging for us. We can do this with one-tenth, or one-hundredth part of the sacrifice our boys of the 39rd will necessarily be making. Comparatively they will have hard beds, plain fare, and many discomforts, and be exposed to hourly and momentary danger, when they get into the fighting zone. Meanwhile we, at home, will be enjoying our usual comfortable existence, and facing no danger except the danger of failing to do our full duty. This will not consist in giving them a hearty send-off—and cheering them as they go. We must see that as a last act of our interest we must send them away cheered by the fact that we have done all in our power to make the breach with home, as they leave us, as easy as possible; cheered by the fact that we have done all in our power to make them only decently comfortable; cheered by the assurance that our parting cheers and good wishes are not mere words but are represented in substantial deeds. We must remember that the boys we send away across a thousand leagues of troubled water to the hardest fighting task that ever confronted soldiers, are in reality sacrificing and fighting for us. Shall we fail them; shall we neglect our share?

OUR CAUSE IS JUST.

It is difficult to insist too strongly upon the importance of education as a factor in the formation of national character. The character of Canadian civilization is, no doubt, an outcome of our long years of benign education and training — in our schools and in the school of public life. We have had inculcated in our midst the cult of freedom of the widest scope—freedom of the individual, freedom of worship, and freedom of its expression, freedom of action. We have been taught that we can not justly assert our individual rights except with a recognition of the rights of others. It is easy for us to adjust our sentiments and our actions to such a relation because we have been schooled and trained to it. Whatever of good or evil a country wants its people to learn can be taught and learned. Germany with its marvellous policy of thoroughness, for good or evil—mostly for evil—is an example of the way a national education can be ground into the national character. They have been taught—for the past half century—to hold themselves in exaggerated self respect to look down on other people as inferiors. They have been taught by school and state craft, that everything must conform to maintaining this asserted superiority; that nothing is too sacred to be swept aside if it inteferes with the plan of realizing the ambition, "Germany über alles." That the contemptible allies, with their "contemptible little armies" were able to disjoint Germany's plans for a resistless march of conquest, suggested to the German mind that something had gone wrong with the machinery of their divine destiny, though they are loth to admit it. Their habit of brag and assertion, the result of half a century of the educational cult of German culture—Frightfulness — has become so much a habit that it cannot be easily broken. But in the midst of the desperate circle of steel the allies have stretched around Germany, there is enforced acknowledgment that the German people are being disciplined, if not defeated. The following example of the German comedy of conceit is from the Hamburger Fremdenblatt:

> It is a hard lesson that the German people is now learning, the immense difference between the German and the foreign worlds of thought is being hammered in. This involves much pain. . . . One would have to despair of humanity if it were not for Germany. . . . All the qualities that are for us obvious conditions of educated life or not, as we had supposed, the common possession of human civilization, but a special superiority in what is Germany. Faith in mankind has been driven out of us, and self-confident pride in the brilliant and exceptional position of our people has taken its place.

If such rubbish represents, as it doubtless does, the natural delusions of the German people, the German people are due for a rude awakening. They will sooner or later learn that the national education they have had the diabolical spirit they have had implanted, is all false, a gigantic delusion and gigantic snare. We o' the allied nations may be teaching the lesson slowly, for we are slowly but surely gaining. The Central empires are surrounded—in military strategy a fatal condition. The circle is rather large yet, but it is narrowing every day. We know we are fighting for what is right, and that counts largely. We have, in the relative conditions of the great combatants in this great war, an illustration of the eternal truth of Shakspere's lines:

> Thrice is he armed, who hath his quarrel, just;
> And he but naked, though locked up in steel,
> Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

Secure in this assurance, trusting to the divine Ally in every righteous cause, we are sending our soldiers to do battle in a sacred fight, feeling certain that they will be the triumphant instruments and aids to the victory of the civilization, that stands for human freedom and human and divine right.

IN CLOSE QUARTERS.

Germany cannot get beyond the steel fence which encompasses her. Her ultimate destruction is certain if we be but true to ourselves.—Montreal Herald.

GRAND TRUNK'S PATRIOTIC COURSE.

The Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific have sent all told, 2,915 men to the front. It has paid out over $500,000 in salaries and wages to absent men and from March onwards, in place of payments to the men, it has proposed to contribute $10,000 per month to the Patriotic Fund. The officers of the company together with the men, had subscribed of some $460,000 to this fund. The C. P. R. has also been a liberal contributer in men and money to the war.—Hamilton Times.

THE SHIPPING PROBLEM.

Two principal concessions are asked for the Canadian shipbuilding industry: the removal of the duty on the parts which enter into the construction of ships, and the establishment of a bounty. A completed vessel may be brought into this country from other parts of Britain duty free, but steel parts used in shipbuilding are subject to a duty of from thirty-five to forty-five per cent. Canadian builders cannot compete on this basis And Canadian builders have demonstrated their ability by the construction of the magnificent vessels which ply the Great Lakes. The shipping problem of Canada requires the serious attention of the Government as the railway problem needs it.—Ottawa Free Press.

A CANADIAN NATIONAL POLICY MUST BE FAIR TO ALL NATIONAL INTERESTS

Nobody knows what change Britain may make in her trade policy as a result of the tremendous world upheaval now going on.

Nobody knows, although some indulge in predictions. It must be admitted, however, that after such a shake-up as is now taking place, people and nations will be more ready than before to venture upon new ways.

Canada is in the war and will experience the effects of it. The country will have aged fifty years, owing to our present experiences. After what we have done in this war, no undertaking will seem too large for us, if it but be a sound one.

The nationalization of our railways but awaits the arrival of a leader in either party at Ottawa with the courage to boldly advocate it.

It will be necessary for Canada to size up her position. Here we have an immense country, with its industrial centres largely in the east, and with the west largely devoted to agriculture. Although there will be a steady growth of industrial enterprises in the west, yet for years to come the present balance will be preserved. Ontario is herself still the foremost agricultural Province, yet she manufactures largely for all the others.

In view of the new energy that the Dominion will feel as a result of her present adventures, it will not remain possible, we think, for the country to jog along in the old way, asking no questions, and accepting events as they seem to happen.

For one thing, we do not believe that the present crude system of tariff protection will long be tolerated. Something better will have to be devised—will be forced on the country primarily because of the very fact that largely the east manufacturers for the west.

The system of tariff protection that we have so far in Canada is about the crudest thing imaginable. In its justification its advocates point always to bulk results—to the way the country has grown; to the enlarged foreign trade; to the total of manufactures; to the enlarged agricultural production. They consider the nation, not the individual, and little thought is given to the grave circumstance that national policy is accused of steadily favoring one end of a long Dominion at the expense of all the rest of it.

It is idle to ignore the accusation. It is much better to meet it fairly and deal with it.

The country has a protective tariff and seems likely to retain it in some form for some time to come. That being so, the purpose of the Liberal party ought, we think, to be directed towards a complete reorganization of the tariff along lines that will include not only manufacturing industries but those employed in such works, and those who purchase and use the wares produced.

There ought to be a national board of experts solely engaged in studying the effects of "protection"—how it operates in each case, what position it puts an industry in, how much it earns annually; and not only that but what rate of wages it pays its employes and whether it sells its goods at a fair price to the Canadian public. This board could ascertain whether an industry, on receiving the benefit of national tariff protection was using the preferred position in which the nation had placed it to combine with other similar industries in forcing up the cost of its products to the Canadian public. If it were found that industries were abusing the favor the nation conferred on them by keeping down the wages of those they employed and keeping up prices against the consuming public, the tariff favors they receive could be reduced or abolished.

Sometimes it is said: "But you cannot walk into a man's business and examine it like that." It can be done. It is done right now under the protective tariff system. If the Customs authorities suspect that an importer is evading the payment of lawful duties they enter his place of business and scrutinize his doings. If a man is suspected of bringing goods into the country for slaughter in violation of the anti-dumping law the Customs authorities, with the applause of all our protected industries and after him and investigate his dealings.

There is nothing so sacred about business that the nation cannot scrutinize its details. It is already done to perfect the protective system, and to make it fully serve the protected interests. It could be done to a further extent to protect the wage-earners and the purchasing public.

It could be done and should be done. If industries are to receive special favours from the nation in the way of tariff protection, they should be held liable for these favours, and required to play fair with the people of the nation.—Toronto Star.

Ontario Fall Wheat Crop Promises Excellent Returns

According to May Bulletin of the Ontario Department of Agriculture—Cold, Backward Spring Has Delayed Vegetation Fully a Week Later Than Usual

The following information concerning agricultural conditions in this Province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon information furnished by a large staff of correspondents under date of May 15th.

Fall Wheat: This crop so far promises excellent returns, except where affected by frequent spring rains on low spots or on untilled land. Some correspondents mention a comparative lack of sunshine so far this season, which, with the prevailing cool weather, has retarded growth; but the general tone of the reports is more or less cheerful, as less fall wheat land than usual will be plowed up or resown. There also have been fewer complaints of injury from insect pests.

Clover: Hay and clover, judging from the present outlook, should be one of the best crops for years. The fields, especially those of last year's seeding, came through the inter in fine form, and there was but little heaving or other injury from spring frosts. As in the case of fall wheat, a small portion of the crop, owing to the very wet spring, has been drowned out on low-lying places where the fields are not well drained.

Alfalfa: Alfalfa looks more uneven than clover at present, not having wintered so well as the sister crop. However, there are some reports of splendid fields, and an average general yield is looked for.

Vegetation: The cold, backward spring weather has delayed vegetation fully a week later than usual for the middle of May, and about a fortnight later than for the same period for last year. Pastures were farther on relatively than orchard leaf or blossom. Some live stock has been turned on to the grass, but many cattle were yet in the stable. With warm weather a rush of growth is anticipated, as the ground has been thoroughly saturated by frequent spring rains.

Spring Sowing: Reporting on conditions existing on the 15th of May, it may be said that not half the expected area of spring grain seeding had yet been done. While a few fortunate individuals on high, light or well drained soils had finished the job, many had not been able to even get on the land, and were anxiously waiting for a few days of continuous dry weather. The ground, particularly heavy clays, suffered from the very wet summer of the preceding year as well as from the rains of the present season, and its condition was variously described by correspondents as "soggy", "sticky", "tough", and "sad". A good seed bed was impossible in most cases, although some "mucked in" a portion of their seed, taking a chance of early germination. The delayed sowing season, with a scarcity of suitable help, will render farmers very busy during the remainder of the spring, and grains will consequently have a reduced acreage. Later field crops, such as corn, buckwheat, beans, and potatoes are likely to be more extensively grown in order to make up the deficiency. More mixed grains will be sown for feeding live stock—chiefly oats and barley.

Fruits: Spring prospects for fruit, generally speaking, have never been surpassed. Very little winter injury has happened to orchards, rabbits and mice having done more damage than the elements. So far this season there has been no frost to injure fruit buds, and all classes of orchard trees are making a most promising show of blossom, although about a week or two later in showing than usual. Owing to the frequent rains of the last few weeks spraying operations have been delayed, and the results of this forced neglect may be seen later. While some grape and raspberry canes have been more or less frozen back on account of all the heavy fall growth failing to mature, both of these fruits are expected to average up after all. The other bush fruits and strawberries give promise of generous yields.

Fodder Supplies: While the very late spring has made considerable inroad into fodder supplies, there is still sufficient on hand in most cases to meet requirements. Hay is relatively scarce and high in price, but straw, ensilage and other coarse fodders help farmers to go light in feeding it. Oats are more plentiful, and are being fed generously, owing to the high price of live stock and their products. The same may be said of wheat, much of which is being turned into pork. The hogs are greatly in demand. None of the inferior grain from last year's wet harvest has been wasted, and even the choicest oats, wheat, and barley are at present worth more sold "on foot" than in the bag. The splendid pastures now promising will soon relieve the drain on the better class of fodders. In short, the Ontario farmer who is into beef raising or dairying never had more encouraging prospects before him.

SUFFERERS FROM THE WAR

Austrian Prisoners Ill, Maimed or Demented, Returned from Russia.

STOCKHOLM, May 20.—Evidence of the heavy toll that tuberculosis is exacting in the world war is found in the exchange of disabled prisoners which is being conducted through Sweden by Russia and Austria. One train from the Russian camps had eighty cases of consumption among the 230 Austrian prisoners on board. On another train from Russia there were 30 Austrians who had been rendered insane by their sufferings. Three trains are now running weekly in each direction exchanging prisoners who from disease, loss of limbs or mental breakdown, are unfit for further military service.

Twenty Millions Monthly is Rate Japan's Progress

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Japan's industries are receiving a powerful stimulus from the war. Consular advices reporting this to the Department of Commerce said industrial investments during the first part of the present year had been heavier than at any time since the industrial revival of 1908. New investments largely are for ironworks, shipbuilding, paper milling, dye and drug fanufacture and other chemical industries.

Business slumped in Japan for a time after the war began, and, according to the consular reports, investments in business enterprises began to increase only last October. Since that time more than $80,000,000 monthly has been put into business extensions and new enterprises.

Prohibition by the British Government of importation of luxuries is said to have hurt certain lines of manufacturing in Japan.

How Germany Trains The Business Boy

(By Harry W. Wayne.)

The German boy belongs first to Germany, and then to his parents. As soon as he is old enough to be taught he is educated in such a way as to make him a valuable asset to the nation, and, as a consequence, a success to himself. Pride of race brings pride of self, and Germany, being thorough in everything, that it does begins teaching the child the language of the country by using such literature as will early imbue him with the greatness of his race.

Early in life the boy is taught that he is a member of a huge, a national, co-operative institution. Individualism is encouraged to its fullest extent, but the strength of individualism will make co-operation so much stronger. He is nearly always taught French and English, in addition to his own language, so that when the time comes to measure his strength commercially against his competitors he shall be as fully equipped as it is possible to make him.

He is taught the full value of cleanliness and sanitation in school and at home. He is taught the value of discipline. He is made to realize that before he can hope to command he must learn to obey. He is taught why laziness courts failure, and how to avoid it.

When he is 15 years of age and the time has arrived for him to adopt a trade or profession, here, again the state steps in and helps him in every possible way. The future of the child is not left to the decision of parents, who, in most cases are not competent to judge what the by is best fitted for.

He must become an apprentice to the trade to which his gifts are best adapted and by the art of suggestion he is made to look forward with pleasure to the work he is about to undertake. In addition to his general training his employer is compelled, although compulsion is scarcely necessary, to give him sufficient time to attend a technical institution, not at night, but during his working day.

He is thus made proficient in all branches of his trade. He attends these technical institutions for at least three years. He is then encouraged to go on and when he is strong enough mentally and physically to attend evening classes he is expected to do so.

Recreation is not forgotten, but that recreation is of a nature helpful towards making his either a proficient or a professor.

In Germany a man is always encouraged to aim at reaching the top of his own social scale rather than to gain a place at the bottom of the one above. Better be a better carpenter than your father rather than a thirty-bob a week clerk. The value of this is too self-evident to need further comment.

Chums of Princess Mary at War Work

LONDON, May 19.—One of the prettiest of the little coterie of nobly born girls who are chummy with Princess Mary is as busy as a bee with war work. She is Miss Enid Dudley Ward, and a niece of Lord Esher, chairman of the imperial defence committee.

In the ordinary course of things Miss Enid is one of the comeliest girls whose names are in the peerage, would have been one of this year's debutantes. Instead, she is working like a beaver at Friary court, the headquarters of Queen Mary's needle work guild, which employs nearly women to make "comforts" for the fighting men.

Besides being one of Princess Mary's best chums Miss Dudley Ward is one of the five or six youthful society damsels who share the princess' lessons. The classes they attend are held at Buckingham palace and the lessons include courses in cookery and dressmaking, as well as music and languages.

Two other winsome girls who were formerly members of the princess' set are the two daughters of Lord and Lady Burghclere, formerly Lady Mary, and the Hon. Alethea Gardner. The elder is now the Hon. Mrs. Geoffrey Hope Morley, her husband being the heir of Lord Hollenden. The second daughter is the Hon. Mrs. Geoffrey Fry. She had a grand wedding last June. Her husband, Geoffrey Fry, is son of F. J. Fry of Cricket St. Thomas, Somersetshire.

The latest war betrothal to be announced is that of an exceedingly attractive society girl, Miss Beatrice Ida Feilden, eldest daughter of Sir William and Lady Feilden of Dilhorne Hall, Staffordshire and Feniscowles, Lancashire.

The lucky man in this case is Capt H. F. Brace of the Fifteenth Hussars.

BRITAIN PREPARED

From Actual Moving Photographs of Super-Dreadnought Queen Elizabeth in Action

UNDER Royal patronage, and with the full sanction of the Imperial Government, the official moving picture records of Britain at war are to be shown in The Grand Opera House, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week. These pictures form the most illuminating proof of national earnestness in a cause that was ever produced. They show Britain is in this war to win, and that she is throwing the whole strength of not only her magnificent and predominating fleet into the scale, but also the available manhood of the British Isles for the army, and, in the industrial organization that supplements the military operations — the available womanhood also, for these pictures include the great arsenals and munition factories, where thousands of women and girls are at work. They give an insight right into the heart of Britain aroused for war.

"BRITAIN PREPARED" records the facts in pictures that the censorship refused to reveal in words. It shows what Britain is doing, and seeing is more convincing than any written cable despatches. These pictures furnish their own proof. Britain is performing a stupendous task, and engaged with all her might. The work of raising, equipping, and training Kitchener's army was not done in a day. These pictures show it in all its details in an hour, and leave no room for doubt as to Britain's intentions. She means to win this war. Four million men are in training or at the front. The pictures show how the raw recruit is transformed—hundreds of thousands of them—into an efficient modern soldier. It shows the great transformation Lloyd George has evoked in the munition factories where thousands of women are helping to make shells and equipment.

BUT it is by the Grand Fleet of the High Seas that the greatest work of Britain has been done—that vast machine which has policed the world for a century and which is even now blockading Europe in behalf of the Allies, and slowly but surely choking Germany's insane ambition to break the barriers and defy all laws, human and Divine, in the lust for power and world dominance. The pictures of the fleet—moving pictures as clear as though the beholder were himself on a war vessel in the North Sea—show what heretofore has been left to faith and imagination, the awe-inspiring might of Britain. With the assistance and co-operation of the Admiralty, the pictures we will show at The Grand were taken to supply a fitting answer to the query: "Is Britain Prepared?"

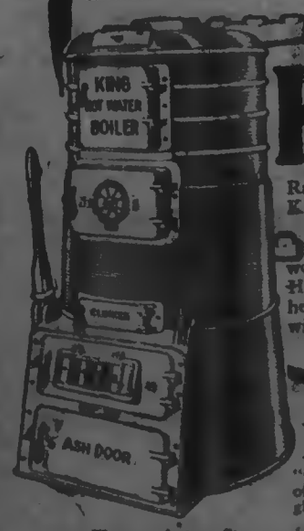
For Your House, the Best Heating!

Canadian Winters make house heating an important problem. Seven months of cold weather and during five of them the thermometer does a jig around "zero." Nothing creates more misery than not being able to keep the house warm. There is only one satisfactory Heating System and that is Hot Water. A Hot Water Boiler works with the least consumption of fuel and gives the utmost general diffusion of heat. The steady inflow of hot water direct from the boiler keeps the heat constant. Hot Water Heating is not affected by drafts, winds or any of the erratic eccentricities of Hot Air Systems. You can keep every room in your house at 70 degrees with a King Hot Water Boiler and Radiators. Note the advantages which the King Boiler and King Radiators offer you—(1) Fuel Economy. (2) Quick Heating. (3) Easy Operating. If you want to know what it would cost you to install a complete Hot Water Heating System, ask your architect or your heating engineer, or write us and we will gladly give you the information you desire without any obligation to you.



King Hot Water Boiler

Free Book We have printed a handsomely illustrated booklet on the subject of Hot Water Heating, entitled "COMFORTABLE HOMES," which very simply explains the important features of this method of house heating and gives much valuable information. We will gladly send this booklet free, postage paid upon receipt of your name and address.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Fined $500; Used Mails To Defraud

Judge Hazel Changes First Sentence —Man Escapes Penitentiary

Sold Agents' Outfits to the Gullible —Arrested By Post-office Inspectors

ROCHESTER, May 22 — Oswald (M. Mackie; 29, is minus $500 as a result of pleading guilty before Judge John R. Hazel in United States District Court, to a charge of using the mails to defraud. Incidentally Mackie almost spoiled a good story, according to newspaper parlance, by admitting his guilt and throwing himself upon the mercy of the court. Mackie, it seems, escaped a term of imprisonment, for after Judge Hazel had pronounced a sentence of seven months in the Monroe County penitentiary and a $50 fine, Mackie turned to Walter Edson, assistant district attorney, in an anxious way. Mr. Edson conferred with Judge Hazel, and then the sentence was changed to $750 fine. This, too, was changed, the fine being reduced by Judge Hazel to $500. The money was paid by Mackie.

Although comparatively young, Mackie's ingenuity in separating gullible persons from their hard-earned savings—all savings are of that kind—is well developed. The story of Mackie' get-rich-quick schemes, unfolded by H. B. Reynolds, post-office inspector, who arrested Mackie, shows Mackie to be resourceful as well as ingenious in his illegal pursuits. According to Reynolds, the game of fleecing as practiced by Mackie was profitable.

"Mackie told me he made $62,000 in 1915 out of his scheme to sell insoles," Reynolds said.

Made of Cheap Ingredients.

These insoles were manufactured of a soft composition of cornfeed and other inexpensive ingredients, and were retailed by Mackie, according to advertisements, to persons at twenty-five cents. There was a constant demand for the insoles, the post office men say, for they were guaranteed to effect instant cures for corns, to make it impossible for bunions to grow, and to make walking as easy and painless as a bird's flight through the air. But it was not in the sale of these marvellous insoles that Mackie accumulated a fortune. He mulcted unsuspecting men who applied for "agents' outfits" out of $6 apiece, with an added proviso that each agent get six more agents like himself.

"A funny thing in connection with Mackie's scheme to sell these fake agents' outfits developed at Niagara Falls, from which point he operated," said Reynolds. "Mackie had advertised the 'Elastic Arch Corporation' as owners of this wonderful insole, and he proved to be the entire staff of officers, with board of directors thrown in. The innocent applicants always received mimeographed letters informing them of the action of the board of directors, which consisted of Mackie. Well, one of these alluring ads fell into the hands of a Buffalo man and he bought two $6 outfits from Mackie, and when he discovered the fake he went over to Niagara Falls and threatened to kick $12 worth of revenge out of Mackie's hide if that amount of money was not returned. The $12 was handed back, and Mackie wisely advised his assistant never again to advertise these 'bargains' so near home. Another man, who came from Olean, was fleeced out of $300."

Mackie, it appears, was head and brains of the concern with which John J. Hanrahan, George H. Slengerland and Chares C. Looke were connected. These men each paid $50 fines.

"The insoles were worthless, and the 'agents' outfit for which Mackie extracted $6 from each of his victims was a cheap imitation of a satchel," Reynolds added.

ASCANIA COMES SAW TRANSPORTS UNLOAD RUSSIANS

MONTREAL, MAY 22.—An interesting arrival in port was the Cunard liner Ascania, which has just completed eighteen months' service for the British Admiralty. The Ascania comes from Marseilles, and is the first local arrival to bring word of the Russian troops debarking there.

"There were two transports unloading Russian troops," said an Ascania officer, "during the period we were in that port. We had quite an interesting gathering of troops ourselves, which we put off at the same point, namely, Anzac. The Ascania took the Australasian troops from the Gallipoli Peninsula to Alexandria and later picked them up again after they had been reorganized. They were a hard-bitten crowd and you would not want better fighters for the Flanders campaign than these survivors of the Suvla Bay landing."

"The Ascania has been a marked ship more than once during her Mediterranean sojourn, but has always been ahead of the traps Austrian submarines laid for her. She left Malta on her voyage here somewhat ahead of the schedule. Six hours later a big merchantman was torpedoed almost within sight of the ports."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

BEEKEEPERS' FIELD DAY

Interesting Demonstration to Take Place at Apiary of Stewart Brown, Douro

Next to doing a thing yourself, the best way to learn is to see it done. It is one thing to sit in some convention room and hear a man tell how he manages his bees; it is far better to go with him into the apiary and have him show you. That is what you will have a chance to do at the apiary of Stewart Brown, Peterborough, Ont. (Township Douro, Con. 9, Lot 6), on May 31st, 1916(at 1:30 p.m. sharp.

A qualified apiary instructor sent by the Ontario Department of Agriculture will show how to examine hives for disease, and will actually put a colony through the treatment for cure. Other manipulations will then be shown, such as finding the queen, removing bees from supers, operating to prevent swarming, etc., etc.

Prominent local beekeepers will be asked to take part and assist in the discussion of practical questions. These apiary demonstrations are being held all over Ontario, and it will be well worth your while to attend one.

Ladies are especially invited, and all are advised to bring bee veils so they can come right out into the apiary with comfort.—Morley Pettit, Provincial Apiarist, Guelph, Ont.

Music & Drama

SEPTEMBER MORN.

The show of tunes and tangoes 'September Morn' which made a very favourable impression on local theatregoers when it was here last year paid a return visit to the Grand on Saturday and was greeted by two large audiences. The musical comedy is as bright and vivacious as ever with a wealth of lively music, spectacular dancing and good looking girls. A large and capable cast made the most of their opportunities, both in singing and dancing. The song hits were humorous. 'When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl', 'Where's the Pleasure in Wine and Song if the Woman is not there?' 'September Morn', 'Beautiful Dreams I am Dreaming,' and 'A Spare Rib From the Butcher Shop of life', proving the favourites. A special word of praise is due the dancing which was away above the average. Although "September Morn" was a most pleasing success.

REDMOND.

"Call off the dogs!" we heard the people yell,
When traitors crushed the heart of poor Parnell.
No truer friend had he in that sad time
(Nor deemed we loyalty to him a crime)
Than he whom many call a traitor now,
Forgetful of the years he toiled, and how
He fought so valiantly for Ireland's cause
Until her shackles broke beneath his laws.
Call off the dogs! till Home Rule's flag, unfurled,
Shall give John Redmond honoured place before the world.
—John H. Taylor in N.Y. Times.

BRITISH WOMEN CO-OPERATE WITH BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY

Story of "Britain Prepared" Would Be Half Told If It Left Out Share Women Are Performing in Workshops and Munition Factories

CONVINCING WAR PICTURES OF BRITAIN

If proof were wanting that the womanhood of Great Britain have enlisted in this war, it is furnished in convincing measure by the moving pictures of the British ammunition factories, which under the direction of a committee authorized by Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions for Britain, were pictured on the film for reproduction throughout the world, and for purposes of historic record.

These pictures show as no other evidence we have had on this side of the Atlantic has been able to do just what a disruption the war has caused in the Mother Country. In the Vickers Ammunition Works, for example, women are to be seen working the trip hammers that beat the white hot steel ingots into shell cases. Thousands of girls in great, glassed buildings are at work upon rifle cartridges. Boys, too young for the army, are doing a hundred and one jobs in the machine shops formerly done by men.

That at first, this invasion of shops by women, girls and boys was misunderstood and resented by organized labour unionism, may well be believed. The new situation upset conditions of employment won by a generation of struggle, sacrifice and agitation, with all the pain and distress which accompany industrial strikes.

WOMEN ENTERED FACTORIES.

A campaign of education as to the serious change in conditions confronting the nation was necessary before the British workingman reconciled himself to behold the skilled trades invaded by women and boys, who holding no place in organized labour, had not even served an apprenticeship to the bench or the lathe, or the machine they were placed to work at.

But a new spirit was needed in Britain. The workers had to be made to see the national peril, to realize that the Empire was at war for its existence.

Lloyd George was the man the workers had learned to trust, and he was the man chosen by the Government to put the case to organized labour. With all his characteristic Celtic ardor, with all his profound belief in democracy and the common sense of the average man, the new Minister of the new Department of Munitions tackled his new task. He campaigned the British Isles, and the British people woke up to their position. The industries of Britain were mobilized. Production of munitions became a national industry. No longer was it left to individuals to say what they would contract to do at a price. Their plant was taken over by the Government and the order was "full speed ahead; produce to fullest capacity."

And the women were called to help. The army was calling for men. Men were deserting their lathes and their benches and their places at the big furnaces and rolls where hot steel is shaped, to join the army, dropping their tools to take up arms. Somebody had to take their places. Women did so, strong-hearted, wholesome English women who gave their men and themselves to the cause for which Britain had entered Armageddon.

PICTURES ALMOST ALIVE.

Striking in its realism is the film of the modern "movie." To see "Britain Prepared," the film, on the screen, is to see Britain—Britain if not prepared completely, preparing and in various stages of preparation. And when the screen suddenly flashes forth a view of a great factory employing thousands of operatives, and the spectator sees row upon row upon row of benches at which girls are working—happy-faced, English girls, used to the delicacies and refinements of life many of them, he realizes with a peculiar choking sensation of the throat how great is the change that has come over England and the British Isles since this war was visited upon the world; realizes what sacrifices a Britain Prepared means.

History tells of the sacrifices women have made for patriotism. Newspapers tell how sacrifices are being made in France or in Germany. But nothing ever told was as graphic as the story the moving picture tells, and "Britain Prepared" tells the story about the women of the Mother Land. These pictures were not posed, or acted before the camera. One glance at the film as reflected on the screen shows that the facts are real. The scale of them is too big to be anything else.

BRITAIN AT WAR.

It is England, Britain, the British Isles, at war with the enemy of all mankind—her latest, greatest war, and the old struggle for the old cause of human liberty against the powers of tyranny and reaction. And how deeply she has set her heart upon victory may be seen by these moving pictures of her women at work in the ammunition factories.

Have You Shed Your Furs?

If So Where Are You Going to Keep Them All Summer?

This must not be considered an important question, but a most natural one, from the viewpoint of a Furrier.

Your fur coat, muff and stole are awaiting your answer to this question, for their life, health and beauty are concerned. To be stowed away in some hot, close cupboard or clothes closet, means that pelts dry, fur loses its gloss, and they become a prey to the moths.

To be stored in Barrie's, Limited, cold air vaults means that the frigid temperature of winter is enjoyed throughout the warmest days in summer, and the furs emerge in the Fall in as good a condition as when they entered.

All garments, before being placed in Barrie's vaults, are thoroughly cleaned (or repaired, if desired), and suspended on separate hangers, avoiding all danger of crushing or creasing. Charges are reckoned at 3 per cent. of the value of the garment.

Was Not a Liberal Reader.—Mother always heard little Jackie do his lessons. One day the small boy was going over his reading lesson, which was the story of "Goldilocks and the Three Bears." "'Goldilocks jumped right out of the window.'" he read slowly. "No, no, Jackie," protested mother; "you know the book doesn't say that. You should read more carefully. The book says that Goldilocks jumped out of bed." "I know mother," explained Jackie promptly, "but I wanted her to jump far enough to get away from the three bears."

THE BIGGEST GARAGE IN CANADA

21,000 Square Feet of Floor Space Leased by Charley Banks

Peterborough can claim to have the biggest garage in Canada. Mr. C. R. Banks of the Banks Garage, has leased for a term of years, for use during the months of April, May, June, July August, September, October and November, of the Peterborough Curling Club building, in the rear of his present show-rooms. This gives the Banks Garage the largest covered Garage in Canada, the floor space being over 21,000 square feet. On account of the large space, it is possible to make a complete turn with a car without the necessity of backing. The lighting is of the best, both day and night. Entrance to the Garage is through the present show rooms.

Included in the equipment is a large pit, 14 feet long, 3 feet wide and 5 feet deep, which makes it possible to make any repairs in the shortest time possible.

Storage for cars can be secured for 50 cents a day, and visitors to the celebration on May 24th are cordially invited to make use of the Banks Garage. 2d

TIZ-IT THEATRE

SPECIAL NOTICE

Mrs. S. Jones, of the Tiz-It Theatre, has made special arrangements for an extra good programme for this week, and will without a doubt please the most refined critic. Also we wish to make this statement that has just come to our hearing—"We did not employ a union operator." This absolutely is false. Our operator is a Toronto union operator, and receives a much larger salary than any operator in this city. Don't forget to-morrow's matinee's proceeds goes to help the 93rd Battalion. We are making extra effort to give a first-class up-to-date programme. Be sure and see our programme this week. Change Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Good music. Special singing and excellent photo plays, at the Tiz-It Theatre.

Farewell at St. Andrew's to Men With the 93rd Batt.

The mid-weekly meeting of St. Andrew's congregation will be held on Tuesday evening of this week instead of Wednesday and will take the form of a farewell to Capt. Rollins and the other St. Andrew's men in the 93rd Battalion. This occasion promises to be a memorable one, and it is desired to give the men a cordial send-off. I will be a big social evening, with a programme and refreshments, and a large attendance is expected.

AN HONOUR FOR MR. R. J. DEVEY

Mr. R. J. Devey will be absent from the city until June 2nd, at the Hambourg Conservatory of Music Toronto, directing the vocal pupils in their presentation of the "Geisha" which is to be given in Loew's Theatre, Yonge Street, Toronto, on May 31 and June 1. The principals are pupils of Signor Carboni, the musical director of the Conservatory. The choice lay with a director from New York or one in Canada, and it was remembered that the work was given in part, some years ago, in the Royal Alexandra Theatre, by a company from Peterborough. Enquiries resulted in a midnight long-distance telephone conversation and an early departure on Friday. The play is to help forward the funds of the Toronto Light Infantry, 201st Battalion, and it was Col. Hagarty who decided to engage a Canadian director) Mr. Devey was home for Sunday duty (as the Rector and four members of the Choir leave the city this week), but left this morning at 6 a.m. for Toronto.

SIGNIFICANT SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S YESTERDAY

The services at St. John's yesterday had an informal, but distinct valedictory character, it being the last Sunday of Rector, Rev. Canon Davidson, who, as Chaplain of the 93rd, will leave the city with his Battalion, in a few days. Both morning and evening, Major Davidson had a few words of farewell admonition to say to the congregation to which he has ministered for nearly thirty years. There is, naturally, sadness in the severence, though under the compulsion of a grand patriotic motive, of the relations that have marked Rev. Canon Davidson's associations with congregation and parish with a closeness and intimacy that attach to no other relations. He has discharged his trust faithfully, and this service, in its tenderness, assiduity and unobtrusive kindness, has been a splendid apprenticeship to the service he will be able to give and will give in his military capacity as Chaplain—in being a true friend, especially in times of stress or trouble.

The evening service that was largely attended, had a particular valedictory tone. The hymns were apt in character to the occasion, and the noble, sacred lyric, "Blest be the Tie that Binds," was sung by choir and congregation with real feeling. After the offertory, "O Canada" and "God Save The King" were sung, and after the Benediction, the singing, with sweetness and tenderness, by choir and congregation kneeling, of "God be With You Till We Meet Again" was a touching finale to the service. As a tribute to the Entente Cordiale with France, the "Marseillaise" was played as the recessional voluntary.

Large congregations were present at all three services at St. John's yesterday, the Communion service being particularly impressive and devotional. Canon Davidson preached at 11 a.m. and gave a brief address before the sermon by Canon Cornish in the evening.

His text was St. Jno. 14:25,26 "These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you, but the Comforter . . . shall teach you all things." He reveiewed certain prominent facts and teachings which he had emphasized during his 27 years' ministry. Among them were: (1) The supreme importance of contact with God, as manifested in Jesus Christ. (2) The Church of Christ with its ministry, sacraments and ordinance, as a divine, concrete means of forming this contact. In this light the Church was the extension of the incarnation. While by formalism it was possible to bury Christ under His own Church, this was wholly unnecessary and unusual, and the Church should be devotionally used as a divine channel of life. (3). The use of different parts of the Church as particular means of contact under which head the speaker referred to efforts expended in striving to make the services real, living, hearty reverent and devotional. The services should be characterized by lofty reverence on the one hand, and loving warmth on the other. The highest powers of man should be enlisted in making the worship of God glorious and glorifying to Him, and indirectly training souls for God's life here and hereafter.

As a fourth point Canon Davidson referred to his efforts in the wider religious life of the city, while adhering loyally to the doctrines and laws of the Church of England he had taken all opportunities for realizing fellowship with fellow Christians of different names. He believed that just as expression should be given to our Churchmanship, so also expression should be given to our common Christianity, and that the two should go hand in hand. He had received great benefit and pleasure from close contact with earnest Christian ministers and laymen of other Communions. In the atmosphere generated by such contact misunderstandings were removed, help and inspiration given, and men brought up under different systems could witness for the particular sides of truth which they had received. There had been a steady advance in Peterborough of religious cooperation and wider fellowship, and the whole future outlook was encouraging.

In a few sentences in the evening, Rev. Canon Davidson said that as he expected to visit the city and even perhaps to spend a Sunday before going overseas this was no real farewell occasion. Demands upon his time made personal visits to the congregation an impossibility and he took this opportunity to express his grateful appreciation of the support given to him by all departments of the church during his long ministry, which he felt sure would be extended to his successor in the active work, Canon Cornish. He felt confidence in having the church so strongly equipped with clerical and lay leaders.

The congregation had clearly placed themselves behind him in his new work, to which general assent had been given and he went forth as their representative to attempt to do in God's strength and with their support, a work for soldiers of the Empire, which every one of his people wanted to see carried forward.

In the earnest sermon which followed Canon Cornish appealed for unceasing prayer and constant interest on behalf of the important enterprise undertaken by the Rector.

Extension Society In Cathedral Parish

A branch of the Catholic Church Extension Society for the Cathedral parish was organized on Sunday night after Vespers. The meeting was largely attended and the following officers were elected:

President—Mr. V. J. McElderry.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. J. B. Corbett, Jr.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. C. H. Pennefather.

This branch begins its work with a numerous membership which is expected to be further increased.

The Coughlin Granite Shed Broken Into

Several Tools Carried Away on Sunday—Suspicion Rests Upon Some Boys

The granite shed of the Coughlin Monumental Co., on Hunter street, was broken into on Sunday and several valuable tools for granite working taken away. The door of the shed was torn off and a number of the tools thrown around and the contents disturbed. The tools missing are a special set of iron tongs and a bevel-faced hammer, made specially for working on granite. They can be of no use to anyone except a granite worker. One of the tools was found outside where some boys were noticed hammering on the logs near the creek on Sunday. These boys are known, and will save themselves appearing before the Police Magistrate if they bring the tools back to Mr. Coughlin at once.

RECEPTION WAS HELD

A few nights ago a number of the 93rd Battalion bandsmen, including Bandmaster Hughes, Bandsmen H. Woods, T. Blunt, A. Briscoe, H. Worrell, 'Dad' Dyer, H. Miles and P. Grange were invited by Mr. and Mrs. H. Gilbert of 610 Bethune Street, to celebrate the 79th birthday of Mr. John King at the above address. The boys spent a most pleasant evening and best wishes were expressed to the honoured guest Mr King, and also to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, for their kind invitation.

A hearty vote of thanks, moved by Bandsman Blunt, and seconded by Bandsman Grange, was carried unanimously. The National Anthem was sung in the usual manner, after which the boys made their way home in the early hours of the morning.

Garnsey Argument Concluded

At 6.25 p.m. on Saturday evening the argument in the Garnsey case was concluded and Judge Hoyoke reserved judgment. Mr. B. D. Hall presented his plea in behalf of the defendant, Beatty, and Mr. O. A. Langley made his reply to the arguments of the defending counsel.

SERVICES AT KNOX CHURCH

At the preparatory service at Knox Church yesterday morning twelve applicants for membership were received by the session and congregation.

The Communion service in the evening was largely attended. Rev. Dougal Brown, of Park Street Baptist Church, gave an appropriate and impressive post Communion address.

The thanks of the congregation are due those who so kindly placed their autos at the disposal of members who were unable to walk to the services.

N.Y. TO SEND NOAH'S ARK TO ANTWERP

NEW YORK, May 22.—New York will help in re-stocking the zoological gardens of Antwerp, Belgium, according to a decision of the Board of Managers of the New York Zoological Society which was announced to-day.

The decision was made in response to an appeal from the Zoological Society of Antwerp which stated that its gardens had been almost depleted since the German invasion. As soon as the Belgian organization is prepared to take up the re-stocking of the Antwerp gardens, a veritable Noah's Ark will be sent across the ocean from this city. The New York Board has decided to send the numerous duplicates among the more than 5,000 specimens in the zoological gardens at Bronx Park and the aquarium.

Lynch Wore Garb of Rebel Officer

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 22.—Jeremiah C. Lynch, American citizen, is sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for participating in the Dublin rebellion. He wore the uniform of a rebel officer, Gen. Sir John Maxwell reported to Premier Asquith to-day. He was first sentenced to death, but the sentence was later commuted.

No Developments in Rifle Matter

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, May 22.—There have been no decided points of interest in conection with Ross Rifle matter, and none are expected for the present at least. The Government proposes to rest the matter with the official statement made on Saturday in which the claim was advanced that the Ross Rifle is quite the equal of the British arm, and the view is expressed that even if it is not quite so good, it is not patriotic to say so at a time when it is not possible to get any other rifles with which to arm the Canadian forces.

Peace Possible Only With Allied Victory

Examiner Special:

PARIS, May 22.—Peace can only come through a decisive allied victory, Premier Briand told a delegation from the Russian Duma to-day.

The Allies can regard the future with confidence, said the Prime Minister. Peace must not result from diplomatic intrigue, but can come only through a decisive Allied victory, which alone can and will restore a recognition of international law and right.

Cross of War For Queen of the Belgians

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, May 22.—President Poincare personally presented the French Cross of War to Queen Elizabeth of Belgium on a visit to the Flanders front, it was announced to-day.

The Queen responded that she was proud to wear the same decoration awarded French officers.

ROME, May 22.—The Austrians lost 20,000 in killed, wounded and missing in the first three days of their offensive in the Tyrolese Alps. Their losses for the last four days are believed to have been almost equally as large. The hospitals at Trent are reported filled with Austrian wounded, and barracks have been transformed into hospitals.

COPENHAGEN, May 22.—Violent cannonading has been heard in the Baltic off the Swedish port of Kalmar, indicating that the Russian and German fleets have been engaged.

WANTED—POSITION FOR RETURNED SOLDIER

Ald F. H. Dobbin, Secretary of the local branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, is anxious to find employment for Pte. E. Maudsley, a Peterborough soldier invalided home from England. Pte. Maudsley has now practically recovered and is in condition to accept light employment If any one has a position open he is asked to communicate with the local branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission at the office of the Patriotic Fund.

MR. FRANK YEIGH'S LECTURE TO-NIGHT

Mr. Frank Yeigh of Toronto, will arrive on the 5.30 train from Toronto with his splendid war pictures, and will deliver his wonderful lectures to-night at the armouries. A strenuous effort is being made to have one or two of the returned soldiers to speak as well, also a member of the committee for the Battalion Fund.

Good Work By Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club

The Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club announce that the sale of work augmented by a donation of $67.00 from the boys of the 93rd Battalion, cleared $280. The president wishes to thank all friends who so generously helped in the work. Recently the club sent 250 pairs of socks to the 4th Battery and the 21st Battalion, and on Saturday sent an hospital box containing 44 shirts, 56 towels, 93 wipes, 66 bandages, 80 packages of guns, etc. $25.00 has also been subscribed towards a field kitchen for the 93rd Battalion.

A Service of Song

A very special illustrated service of song, entitled "Father Come Home," will be given to-morrow evening at the S. A. Temple in aid of the Band Fund. This service has been imported from England, slides and all, for this particular purpose.

The final farewell of the S. A. khaki boys will take place at this service. Tea will be served.

Pte. F. UNDERWOOD, a Peterborough member of the Mounted Rifles, who has been invalided home.

Outdoor Living Gains Adherents

Recreation in America is coming every day to assume more of the original meaning of the word, says the Syracuse Post-Standard. The tendency of sport is away from professional activities and toward the wider field of outdoor exercise. A glance at the sporting pages of the daily newspaper is enough to convince one of the change.

Time was when the sporting columns of most newspapers were devoted largely to a record of professional baseball, pugilism, horse racing and some college games. To-day they are incomplete unless they record events in the world of amateur baseball, of golf, of tennis, of park and playground activities, and of other outdoor sports, which are gaining favor with men and women.

Tennis has revived in interest in the last few years. Public golf courses are in constant use from spring time until late autumn. New clubs are being organized the older ones are flourishing. The extended interest in golf is scarcely less marked than in tennis. Of equal significance is the public's patronage of park and playground pursuits.

Another example of growing fondness for outdoors games is the more widespread interest in public school athletics, in amateur baseball leagues, and track contests. Organization has in many cases given a stimulus to such healthful contests, and increasing numbers of children are joining in the movement.

A race that lives outdoors that uses its spare moments in building muscle and absorbing health from a clean atmosphere, will have stamina. The outdoor tendency is a sign that augurs well for the future of Americans.

Judgment For $165 and Costs to Galvin

Mr. Garret Galvin was awarded $165 and costs by Judge Huycke on Saturday afternoon in the counter claim against the Township of Harvey. The municipality's original claim recording a right of way on Mr. Galvin's property was previously dismissed by the Judge. Mr. Peck appeared for the Township, and Mr. O'Connell for Mr. Galvin.

Rev. Father Phelan Had Farewell to Men

At St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning Rev. Father Phelan referred to the approaching departure of the 93rd Battalion and wished the men Godspeed and safe keeping. He assured them that the prayers and labours of those at home would accompany them in their future training in Canada and in their servic overseas.

Farewell Smoker At the K. C. Club

The Knights of Columbus are holding a farewell smoker in their club rooms on Tuesday evening for the Catholic members of the 93rd Battalion. A large attendance is expected. A number of speeches and a musical programme are included in the evening's entertainment.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

The question has been asked why the public is providing funds for the soldiers and asking soldiers to contribute. The inquirer claims that the soldiers have all they can do.

HEAVIEST OF THE WAR

Fighting in Progress in Region of Rovereto and Sugana Valley.

GENEVA, May 18 — Reports from Innsbruck indicate that the heaviest fighting of the war between Italy and Austria during this year is in progress in the region of Rovereto, and the Sugana Valley, while there is every evidence that the Austrians have begun a general offensive against the Italians from the Alps to the Adriatic. A large number of bodies of Austrian soldiers killed during the fighting are said to be floating down the River Adige.

The Austrians have brought several batteries of their heaviest guns from Germany and have installed them near Gorizia and Monfalcone where the staff of Archduke Frederick has arrived. The Austrians are also rushing troops from Innsbruck into the region of Trent.

Swiss troops on the frontier report that the Austrian positions on the Adamello range have recently been greatly strengthened and that the artillery duels are increasing in intensity.

TEMPERANCE A LA WINSTED

Consider Ye the Lowly Bugs and Frogs, How They Sipped the Seepage and Got Soaked!

WINSTED, Conn., May 22. — A school of pickerel amused themselves in Highland Lake playing leap frog atop an empty beer keg anchored in the lake as a buoy and threequarters submerged. A collection of bugs and young frogs had gathered, apparently sipping seepage through the bunghole.

When the pickerel discovered the bugs and frogs they jumped at the bait avariciously. Sometimes the pickeral passed over the frogs, but they kept on the jump until every bug and frog had disappeared from the keg buoy.

22,000,000 Persons In the War Zone Are In Urgent Need

NEW YORK, May 22.—Instant relief is needed for more than 22,000,000 persons in the war zones of Europe and Asia Minor, according to an appeal issued by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ last night.

The council, in letter to 10,000 American clergymen, asks that May 28 be made a memorial Sunday for the collection of funds.

The need for aid is described as "immediate, appalling and increasing." In Armenia refugees, dying of starvation by hundreds, are reduced to eating grass, according to messages received from Constantinople by the American Committee for American and Syrian relief. Only relief given by Americans will prevent the destruction of a race. There are 800,000 refugees in Armenia and 200,000 in Turkey.

In Belgium 3,000,000 persons are virtually destitute, and $6,000,000 is needed at once.

In northern France more than 2,000,000 persons are critically in need. These include 175,000 children who are refugees. The distress is declared to be even more extensive than in Belgium.

In Serbia 5,000,000 persons have been "deprived of their living and of chance to make it," and there are thousands of Serbians destitute in France.

In Poland there are 11,000,000 homeless, wandering peasants, mostly women and children, of whom 3,500,000 "are in a condition of starvation, with certain death facing them unless relief comes speedily.

In East Prussia thousands have been driven from their homes and deprived of their livelihood, and the suffering is severe.

To-day, To-morrow and the Holiday "Helene of the North"

In Saturday's paper we made an announcement that 'The White Pearl' would be on the first three days of this week. This was a mistake, as this picture is on the last three days. For to-day, to-morrow and the holiday we are showing Marguerite Clarke in "Helene of the North."

The subject combines in a decidedly novel manner the cultured atmosphere of aristocratic society circles with the rugged environment of the trackless wastes of Northwestern Canada. Between these far extremes, the drama sways with uninterrupted fascination. Whether in the limitless wilds, or the warm, luxurious drawing room, Marguerite Clark is equally effective and appealing, and as the central character of this unique dramatic romance, she attains a greater success than any of her previous screen triumphs.

WAS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

In this morning's police court Geo Downer was committed for trial on a serious charge. Downer's appearance in the Police Court was the outcome of a raid that was made on the Downer home last evening, when Downer his wife and daughter were taken into custody. Downer and his wife will have to answer a charge of keeping a disorderly house. This charge will be heard on Friday next.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence and Crown Attorney Hatton for the prosecution.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 22.—War stocks opened with gains of half a point or more on stock exchange to-day, while railroads and industrials showed fractional advances. Goodrich was up half, Westinghouse 3-4, Reading 3-4, New Haven 1-2, Crucible 7-8, and Industrial Alcohol 3-4. U.S. was up 5-8

NEW YORK, May 22.—Reading took the lead on the Stock Exchange this afternoon, jumping 6 5-8 points to 109 5-8, a new high record price. After one o'clock Underwood Typewriter shot up 7 points. Others specialties were strong. Butte and Superior advanced two points to 86, and Baldwin Loco. made a similar gain.

The Austrian Offensive

LONDON, May 2.—A Rome despatch to the Daily Telegraph says: Here are a few details concerning the Austrian offensive. The battle line extends from Monte Pari to the west of Lake Garda to Cima Dodici, east of the lake, and has a length of about forty-five miles. The principal points attacked are four in number: In the Ledro Valley; Zugna-torta, just below Roverato; between the valleys of Terragnolo and Astico, and in the Sugana Valley.

The Austrian forces on this front are estimated to number 150,000 men, and have thousands of guns of all calibres. Their front is supported on a line comprising forty permanent forts, all of which are participating in the action. The battle is taking place entirely on Austrian territory, except for a short stretch near the Astico torrent. The attacks of the Austian infantry developed, according to the German method, with dense masses of men.

The Austrian headquarters are at Trent, where are Archduke Eugene and Marshal Conrad Von Holtzendorf, chief of the general staff. The conduct of the Italians is quiet and orderly without any wastage, whereas the Austrians squander ammunition in the most extraordinary manner. The fire of the Italian artillery is very accurate, whole units of the Austrian forces being annihilated. There are places where the ground is covered with Austrian corpses, forming heaps several feet high. The Italian losses have been relatively small

DENIES STATEMENT

A woman residing at 289 Romaine Street called at the Examiner Office this morning and said she desired to refute the statement made by certain parties to the effect that her cow was diseased. In proof of his she produced a note from Mr. G. A. Gillespie to the effect that the bovine was in a healthy condition, and the milk of the same averaged 4.6 butter fat.

Following will be the daily routine of training at Barriefield Camp:

Reveille, 5.30 a.m.
Physical drill, 6.00 to 6.30 a.m
Breakfast, 7 a.m.
Morning parade, 8.30 to 12 a.m.
Dinner, 12.30 a.m.
Afternoon parade, 2 to 4 p.m.
Tea, 5.30 p.m.
Retreat (as published in camp orders).
First post, 9.00 p.m.
Last Post, 10 p.m.
Lights out, 10.15 p.m.

That the percentage of native-born Canadians enlisting for overseas service is evident by the following official figures of the recruiting for this division for the first two weeks in May:

Canadians	434
English	66
Scotch	15
Irish	2
Others	20

Standing Orders for Barriefield include the following: "Troops should be taught that one of the main characteristics of a soldier is his cleanliness and neatness. This does not only refer to outer garments but extends to underclothing and the body itself. There is no excuse whatever for the failure of any man to keep himself clean and neat and troops should be taught to take pride in their cleanliness and neat appearance. Men should acquire the habit of bathing as often as circumstances will permit, but in no case less than once a week."

The dress to be worn outside camp is as follows:

Mounted units — Service dress, boots and puttees, spurs, bandolier and whip.

Dismounted units—Service dress, boots, puttees, waist belt and cane.

The commander of the main guard will not permit any soldier who is not properly and neatly dressed to proceed to town.

The wearing of any article of civilian clothing is prohibited. The slovenly and unsoldierly habit of walking and loungings about with hands in pockets is forbidden.

Lance-Corp. B. G. Hardie and Pte. W. Jackson of the 93rd Battalion cooks, left with the advance party for Kingston this morning to look after the meals for the men.

When they leave the city on Thursday for Barriefield camp, Bandmaster Walter Hughes and Sergt. Fred Barnes of the 93rd Band will sever a long connection with the Grand Opera House orchestra. They made their farewell appearance with the orchestra on Saturday night and until the war is over at least their familiar faces and charming music will be missed from in front of the footlights. Bandmaster Hughes has been a member of the orchestra ever since the Grand was built, while for the past seven years Sergt. Barnes has played at the Grand. Theatre-goers will miss both musicians and will wish them every success and a safe return to Peterborough.

Sergt. Leader, who has played with the Grand orchestra during the winter, will also be an absentee, as he leaves with the 93rd Battalion. Incidentally the orchestra of the Grand is well represented in the overseas forces, as in addition to those named, Fred Howarth the former leader, is now armourer sergeant of the 80th Battalion, while Mr. Nicholls, the pianist, has a son in the 21st Battalion.

Owing to the heavy rains of the last week, which interfered with the work of the contractors at Barriefield camp the dates of units entering camp have been changed as follows:

It is published for the information of all concerned, that the dates when Units will proceed to camp are changed to read as follows:

93rd battalion, 24th May; 109th battalion, 26th May; 130th battalion, 31st May; 136th battalion, 27th May; 139th Battalion, 26th May; 146th battalion, 22nd May; 154th battalion, 29th May; 156th battalion, 23th May; 156th battalion, 27th May.

This means that the 93rd Battalion will be the first battalion from outside to go into Barriefield camp.

On Saturday evening about 20 friends gathered at the home of Private Clarence Scholey, Chamberlain street, a member of the 93rd Battalion to bid farewell on his leaving for Barriefield Camp. During the evening Mr. W. Warren presented him with a handsome wrist watch as a token of esteem which he is held by his friends. Mr. Scholey suitably responded, after supper was partaken of. Mr. Warren gave selections on the gramophone and Mr. Atkinson with his mandoline. Vocal selections were given by Mr. Reidman, Mr. Whitelaw, Mr. Reed, Mr. Ridyard and Mrs. Scoley, after wishing Mr. Scoley (au revoir) the National Anthem was sung and a pleasant evening brought to a close.

The Examiner has received the following interesting letter from Bandmaster Peryer of the 59th band.

Folkstone, Kent.
59th Base Battalion

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

At the request of a host of Peterborough boys I write you re our reception into the Canadian Training Camps.

After training for a while at Bordon, Hants, we were removed to Ceasen's camp, Folkstone and immediately on our arrival we were met, by boys from Peterborough.

And for the first and second day I had the pleasure of meeting many of my own comrades of the machine shop of the C.G.E. who went over in former battalions, some are yet in England, some have been to France and returned, and in all cases the men look well in health and were delighted to listen to our band, seeing that the majority were from their own home town.

Our duties as a band are very strenuous, playing drafts away, playing for hospitals and on band stands Sunday afternoons. We are attached to the 5th Brigade Headquarters. We received orders to play a draft of the 45th Battalion away on Sunday, May 7th and there were a lot of Peterborough boys in the draft. It took my mind back to last year, when we used to play drafts away from Barriefield.

But the drafts, we play away now, are bound for somewhere in France.

We have received kindness on every hand, lots to eat, and lots of mud to walk on.

We are forty miles from the firing line and can hear the big guns, booming day and night, and it is no uncommon sight to see five or six aeroplanes and dirigibles flying overhead.

Trusting some of the above information will prove useful,

I remain on behalf of the Peterborough boys of the 59th, Yours truly,

W. W. PERYER,
Bandmaster 5th Canadian Brigade.

The Ladies' Aid of Knox Church is arranging to tender an informal banquet to the members of the 93rd Battalion who have made their church home at Knox during the stay of the Battalion in the city. The event will take place on Tuesday evening from 6 to 8 o'clock in the Lecture Hall of the Church. An invitation is also extended to the wives or parents, as the case may be, of the soldiers concerned to be present on this occasion. Will the soldiers referred to kindly look upon this announcement as their invitation and oblige Knox Church officials?

A letter received by his father, Capt. F. Copperthwaite, from Pte. Jack Copperthwaite, with the 5th C.M.R., now in France, in which he intimated that he had received a parcel sent him by the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E. His father, on his son's behalf, takes this means of expressing his thanks to the Order.

A letter has been received from Sergt. A. F. Field, formerly of the staff of the Bank of Montreal in this city, and now a prisoner of war in Germany, in which he states: "I am getting well. I still have a stiff feeling in the right side, but I have good reason to think that my lung will be altogether well. I have the appearance of young and robust health." Sergt. Field's many friends will be glad to receive this information.

Mr. W. R. Morris has received a cable from his son, Lieut. F. W. Morris, 9th Battery, C.F.A., stating that he has landed in England on a short holiday from the front.

Yesterday morning, at the 8 o'clock Communion service at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, the members of this congregation who have enlisted with the 93rd attended, it being their last Communion before leaving for the training camp at Barriefield.

The suggestion has been made to the Examiner that soldiers wives should be admitted free to the grounds on Wednesday for the farewell demonstration to the 93rd Battalion. The women could easily be identified by their Patriotic Fund cards. The suggestion seems a good one and is passed on to the committee.

A consignment of athletic uniforms for the use of the 93rd Battalion has arrived at the armouries. Two dozen jerseys and two dozen pairs of knickers

70 Children at St. Peter's Received First Communion

About seventy children of St. Peter's parish received their first communion at the Cathedral at the 8 o'clock mass on Sunday morning. The boys assembled at St. Peter's school and the girls at St. Mary's convent and marched to the church singing the hymn, "Come Holy Ghost." The mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who afterwards addressed the children on the subject of the Sacrament of the Eucharist. Confirmation will be administered by His Lordship next Sunday.

Never wave gray hair with irons. It must be put up in curling pins and dried, before an electric or gas heater, or put in the water waves with combs.

Captain and Mrs. F. Jii Hayes of Cobourg were in the city over Sunday.

Mr. Ed. Hood, of Galt, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Logan, Sophia street, for the week-end.

Miss Estella Hayton spent Sunday with her brother, Pte. Bert Hayton, 155th Battalion, Madoc, before leaving for Barrie field.

Mr. Ewart O'Shea of Toronto, spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Jas. H. O'Shea, before leaving to join the 169th Battalion, Niagara.

Mrs. Jas. Head's brother, Robert H. Sandys, of Pomeray, Ohio, is a new arrival in town, and expects to make his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, Sherbrooke street, announces the engagement of their eldest daughter, Jennie Stephens, to Mr. Fred J. Elliot, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Elliot, Madoc, Ont., the marriage to take place quietly about the middle of June.

WEDDING BELLS

STEVENS—TAYLOR.

The marriage of Miss Annie Taylor to Mr. Bertram Stevens was solemnized on Saturday, May 20 by the Rev. Dougal Brown at his residence, Reid street. The couple were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will reside at 560 Romaine street. The groom is on the postal delivery staff of the post office.

DUNSMORE—VOADEN.

Particulars of the marriage of Miss Rose Voaden, of Peterborough, to Lieut. R. L. Dunsmore, on Thursday, May 4, in England, have been received by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Voaden, 495 Gilmour Street, as follows: The ceremony was performed at the quaint old St. John's Church (800 years old), at Couladon, Surrey. The bride and groom were unattended, the bride being given away by Mr. Benjamin Hales. Following the ceremony, the party motored to "Elmwood," the home of Miss Jessie Hales, at Kenley, Surrey, where luncheon was served following a reception in the conservatory. The weather was delightful, being bright and sunny. The guests present were: Miss Bessie Chown, of Kingston, Ont.; Mrs. Pearson, of Peterborough, Ont.; Miss Alice Drader, London; Sister Betty Cooke, London; Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Hales, Kenley; Miss Pearse, New York; Sister Constance Pearse, France; Mrs. Elizabeth Cowie, London; Miss Catherine Hales, Miss Alice Hales and Miss Florence Hales, Kenley. Lieut. Dunsmore, who had ten days' leave of absence, returned with his bride to London to spend their honeymoon.

Things Going From Bad To Worse In Berlin Butter and Meat Scarce

Estimates of Supply Prove Erroneous--Other German States Resent Prussian Dictatorship

LONDON, May 23.—A despatch to the Telegraph from Rotterdam says:

In Berlin things are going from bad to worse in the matter of food. Fresh meat has been almost unobtainable, and it is now disclosed that for some days the capital has been without sausages. From to-day the butter ration will be reduced to ninety grams, less than a fifth of a pound per head per week. For this amount the city council has fixed the price at 6d. (12 cents). It was only a few weeks ago that the ration was fixed at a quarter of a pound, and assurances were given that the supplies were adequate to meet this demand.

The council now admits that this was not the case. They repeat the assurance so far as the new ration of 90 grams is concerned, but the people are sceptical. For several weeks thousands of housewives, after waiting hours outside shops, were unable to obtain a single ounce.

DIVISION INTO DISTRICTS.

As regards meat, the same authority intimated that the minimum amount was liable to be varied each week. In the future this foreshadows a reduction also of the meat rations. Again the admission is being made that the council was wrong in its assurances that supplies in hand were large enough to provide everybody with the legalized minimum of meat.

As a part of the new dictatorship scheme, Berlin will be divided into four districts, each containing sixty butcher shops. Responsible for each group will be two master butchers, assisted by a Government official and one veterinary surgeon. To each group will be allotted a certain number of cattle and the head of every family in Berlin has each week to order what his requirements will be in the succeeding seven days.

PRUSSIAN DICTATORSHIP.

A new German scheme for controlling food supplied really means an absolute dictatorship from Prussia over the whole empire. There is strong opposition from other states, which hitherto have retained to themselves the administration of foodstuffs, and as a result some of them have been better off than Prussia. Moreover, Bavaria and other states have passed laws prohibiting export to other states of any foodstuffs, thus accentuating the difficulties within the empire. All this will be obviated by the new scheme, which includes the installation of an all powerful military representative as one of the leading assistants of the food dictators.

Mutual Trust Held Hindustan Loyal To the Empire

LONDON, May 23.—Lord Hardinge of Penhurst, who was Viceroy of India and returned to England last month after an administration which was commonly described as highly successful, disclosed some interesting facts in the course of a statement made to a correspondent whom he received at his house in Gloucester place.

Lord Hanrdinge showed how India's voluntary contributions to the prosecution of the war had justified that dependency's being regarded as an integral part of the British Empire, united to the central administration by considerations of self-interest and political development, which in the eyes of the Indians themselves, had assumed paramount importance and had received a most striking exemplification during the course of the war.

Denuded of British Troops.

For months during the early period of the war India was practically denuded of British troops and the Indian contingents, who went abroad to fight the British Empire's battles, amounted to about twenty times the force which was sent to China at the time of the Boxer rebellion, not only in men, but also in guns, rifles, ammunition, and stores of all kinds.

India gave so unstintedly that, with the exception of a few batteries which remained on the northwest frontier, there was at one time hardly any artillery throughout the length and breadth of the country.

"How was this possible?" Lord Hardinge was asked.

"Only because of mutual trust," he replied. "At the outset of the war I had consulations with leaders throughout India. I frankly exposed to them the situation and needs of the Empire, and I was assured that there would be no serious trouble in India. I believed their assurances, and my trust has been amply justified.

300,000 Troops Supplied.

"We sent out of the country no fewer than 300,000 men to the various fields of the Imperial battle line in France, Egypt, China, Mesopotamia, East Africa, Gallipoli, and even the Cameroons. These consisted of both Indian and British troops.

"When it is remembered that the British army of occupation usually numbers 73,000 men, and that at one time for a few weeks there remained only a handful of British troops, something between 10,000 and 15,000 men, in a country with a population of over 315,000,000, one can realize that such a course of action would have been foolhardy in the extreme had there been any real foundation for the reports of widespread and serious disaffection, spread from enemy sources.

"To put the matter in a nutshell, had India been as disloyal as the Germans would doubtless have liked it to be, our policy would have been tantamount to evacuation of our Indian Empire, with the probability that we were condemning the few thousand troops, left behind practically without artillery, and the whole white civilized population to be submerged under a tidal wave of revolt.

"This situation was, however, purely temporary, for since the period of the first few months of the war the garrison of India has been considerably reinforced by territorial and garrison battalions and territorial artillery."

When reference was made to the reports with which Germany had continuously flooded her own papers and to some extent the neutral press of seditious outbreaks in India, Lord Hardinge said:

"Of course, there is a certain amount, though compartively small, of dissatisfaction and disloyalty in India. Among a population of over 300,000,000, comprising so many varieties of race and sect and representing all degrees of political development, how could it be otherwise? But even so, this discontent is anarchistic rather than revolutionary. It has no constructive programme; it represents a desire to tear down authority, not a plan to set up new authority.

"I wish to state most emphatically that the persons at the back of this movement, such as it is, are not the intellectuals of India; they are to be found among the half-educated. The Ghadr party, so-called because of the paper of that name, which is printed abroad and introduced in secret, is frankly anarchistic. It is encouraged by a few crazy people in the United States and Western Canada, and is probably subventioned by Germany.

"The head of the party is Hardyl, who was at one time employed at the German War Ministry and was last heard of, I believe, in Japan."

Now that the war has been in progress twenty-one months, Lord Hardinge's tribute to the loyalty of India has an even more emphatic note.

"Since the outbreak of the war," he said, "all political controversies concerning India have been suspended by the educated political classes with the object of not increasing the difficulties of the Government's task."

COURT DECISION PROTECTS BUYER

Condeman Sales Made Through Fraudulent Advertisements

A rather ingenious, although tricky and most reprehensible method of merchandising goods through the use of fraudulent advertisements, has just been condemned by the Toronto Courts through a verdict reached by jury before Mr. Justice Coatsworth in the case of Rex vs. Stevenson.

While the case in question specifically relate to an attempt to market substitute talking machines on the reputation of the well-known "Victrola" it is of more than ordinary general interest in that it reveals certain deceptive and unscrupulous means which could be employed to work injury to intending purchasers of almost any well-known and advertised product.

The action was based on the misrepresentations of a certain manufacturer who engaged women to dispose of a somewhat similarly named instrument in their homes, by placing advertisements in the "For Sale" columns of the daily papers, purporting to offer a slightly used Victrola at a big sacrifice in cost.

According to the court, these advertisements were "absolutely untrue, false and fraudulent," and intended to trick the unsuspecting purchaser into accepting an instrument different from the one he believed he was buying.

The case has created wide-spread interest and the verdict rendered is of no minor importance in that it shows plainly the necessity of the public looking for some distinguishing sign or trade mark in order to fully protect itself when making a purchase, and should stand as a fair warning to any manufacturer or party attempting similar unscrupulous methods.

HUSBAND WAS A COLD ARISTOCRAT

Mrs. Anna Fitzhugh Harty Says Millionaire Kingston Ont., Man Deserted Her—Asks For Divorce

CHICAGO, May 22.—Suit for divorce on charges of desertion was filed in the Circuit Court, yesterday, against John J. Harty, millionaire Canadian, by Mrs. Anna Fitzhugh Harty, a grand opera singer.

The suit, which was filed by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, charges that on April 24, 1906, the plaintiff married Mr. Harty, who is the son of the Hon. Wm. Harty, former M. P., of Kingston, Ont.

The bill further states that Mrs. Harty is an American woman by birth, and training, and as such is endowed by nature with that spontaneity of feeling and that inborn love of freedom and instincts of democracy peculiar to one bred in the ideals of a new world, but that the defendant is a man of cold, reserved and haughty mien and bearing, priding himself upon his impregnable hedge of reserve, justifying the same by reason of his descent from a long line of noble ancestors.

These ancestors, according to the bill, trace their genealogy from the Saxon aristocracy of England, and the time of William the Conqueror

MADE TO FEEL INFERIOR.

The bill further states that shortly after their marriage she was taken to the home of her husband in Canada, where she was assured she would be welcomed in a style befitting a foreign princess rather than the simple American girl that she really was.

The welcome, she states, was extended to her, but only in outward appearances, and she states that almost immediately her husband by a course of coolly calculated and studied hauteur of bearing and a neglect of even the ordinary courtesies sought to impress up on his wife her inferiority of birth and descent in comparison with the exalted station of the family into which she had been permitted to enter by marriage with its son and heir.

HER FATHER-IN-LAW'S $1,000.

"Shortly after their marriage," the bill continues, "Mrs. Harty became ill and was removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., for an operation, and being without funds, her father-in-law forwarded to her the sum of $1,000 to maintain her during her illness. This sum, however, falling into the hands of the defendant, who was at that time greatly interested in the improvement of the standard of his kennels, bought with the said $1,000 two blooded Great Dane dogs, also coming from a line of pedigreed ancestry, and repaired to his home in Canada with the said canines, leaving Mrs. Harty ill in the hospital without means to meet her expenses therefor."

LORDLY ESTATE

Mrs. Harty further charges that upon going to the home of her husband she found that there were attached about the premises seven motor and racing cars and all the accessories of a princely estate; that her husband operated and possessed a hydroplane and an aeroplane, and that shortly after her marriage he presented her with a yacht, naming it "Opitsa," which, Mr. Harty told her, is an Indian term meaning "Sweetheart," the gift being in token of the undying love borne by said defendant to his wife.

She also allages he got possession of her jewels, worth $100,000, and valuable stocks.

DISPOSAL OF PRISONERS.

Gen. Townshend and Staff to Have Liberty on Turk Island.

LONDON, May 23. — The Press Bureau reports: "Ambassador Page states that the American Embassy at Constantinople has been informed by the Ottoman Government that Gen Townshend (who was in command at Kut-el-Amara) and his staff will be brought to Constantinople, and probably would be assigned to the Island of Prinkipo (in the Sea of Marmora), where they will be allowed full liberty. Most of the officers and men are still at Kut and Bagdad. Some will be sent to Damascus."

570 FISHING SHIPS LOST.

500 Fishermen Have Perished Because of the War

LONDON, May 23.—The number of British fishing vessels destroyed since the beginning of the war by Great Britain's enemies was given as 570 by Francis D. Acland, financial secretary of the Treasury, in the House of Commons yesterday. The number of lives lost on these vessels is 500. Fishing has gone on as usual within necessary restrictions.

LIQUID CATARRH REMEDIES USELESS, ONLY RELIEVE, NEVER CURE

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the lining of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

OUR SERIAL STORY

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

Both the cot and chair appeared to be new. "Had the room all ready for me," said Code to himself.

The one remaining piece of furniture was a queer kind of book-shelf nailed against the wall. It was fully five feet long and protruded a foot out above the bed. In its thirty-odd pigeonholes was jammed a collection of stuff that was evidently the accumulation of years. There were stores of cheap paper-bound novels concerning either high society of great detectives, old tobacco-boxes, broken pipes, string, wrapping-paper, and all the what-not of a general depository.

With hours on his hands and nothing whatever to occupy him, Code began to sort over the lurind literature with a view to his entertainment. He hauled a great dusty bundle out of one pigeonhole, and found among the novels some dusty exercise books.

He inspected them curiously. On the stiff board cover of one was scrawled "Log Schooner M. C. Burns; M. C. Burns, master."

The novels were forgotten with the appearance of this old relic. The M. C. Burns was the original Burns schooner when Nat's father was still in the fish business at Freekirk Head. It was the direct predecessor of the Nettie B., which was entirely Nat's. On the death of the elder Burns when the May Schofield went down, the M. C. Burns had been sold to realise immediate cash. And here was her log!

Code looked over pages that were redolent of the events in his boyhood, for Michael was a ready writer and made notes regularly even when the M. C. was not on a voyage. He had spent an hour in this way when he came to this entry on one of the very last pages:

"June 30: This day clear with strong E. S. E. wind. This day Nat in the M. C. Burns, raced Code Schofield in the May Schofield from Quoddy Head to moorings in Freekirk Head harbour. My boy had the worst of it all the way. I never saw such luck as that young Schofield devil has. He won by half an hour. Poor Nat is heartbroken and swore something awful. He says he'll win next time or know why!"

"Just like old man Burns!" thought Code. "Pities and spoils his rascal of a son. But the boy loved him."

Code had not thought of that race in years. How well he remembered it now! There had been money up on both sides, and the rules were that no one in either schooner should be over twenty except the skippers.

What satisfaction it had been to give Nat a good trimming in the fifty year-old May. He could still feel an echo of the old proud thrill. He turned back to the log.

"July 1: Cloudy this day. Hot Light S.-W. breeze. Nat tells me another race will be sailed in just a week. Swears he will win it. Poor boy, what with losing yesterday and Caroline Fuller's leaving the Head to work in Lubec, he is hardly himself. I'm afraid the old M. C. won't show much speed till she is thoroughly overhauled. Note—Stmr. May Schofield's policy runs out July 20 See about this, sure!"

There was very little pertaining to the next race until the entry for June 6, two days before the event. Then he read:

"Nat is quite happy; says he can't lose day after to-morrow. I told him he must have filled the M. C. with wings, but he only grinned. Take the stmr. to St. John to-morrow to look after policies, including May Schofield's. She's so old her rates will have to go up. Won't be back till day after the race, but Nat says he'll telegraph me. Wonder what business that boy's got up his sleeve that makes him so sure he will win! Oh, he's a clever one, that boy!"

Here the chronicle ended. Little did Michael Burns know he would never write in it again. He went to St. John's, as he had said, and completed his business in time to return home the day of the race instead of the day after.

The second race was never sailed, for Code Schofield received a telegram from St. John's, offering him a big price for a quick lighterage trip to Grande Mignon, St. John being accidentally out of schooners and the trip urgent.

Though loath to lose the race by default, the money offered was too good to pass by, and Code had made the trip and loaded up by nightfall. It was then that he had met Michael Burns, and Burns had expressed his desire to go home in the May so as to watch her actions in a moderate sea and gale.

Neither he nor the May ever saw dry land again. Only Code of the whole ship's company struggled ashore on the Wolves, bruised and half dead from exposure.

The end of the old log before him was full of poignant tragedy to Code the tragedy of his own life, for it was the unwritten pages from them on that should have told the story of a fiendishly planned revenge upon him who was totally innocent of any wrong-doing. The easy, weak, indulgence of the father had grown a crop of vicious and cruel deeds in the son.

CHAPTER XXII
A RECOVERED TREASURE

For five days Code yawned or rushed through the greater part of Nat's stock of lurid literature. It was the one thing that kept him from falling into the black pit of brooding; sometimes he felt as though he must go insane if he allowed himself to think. He had not the courage to tear aside the veil of dull pain that covered his heart and look at the bleeding reality. He was afraid of his own emotions.

It was impossible for him to go lower in the scale of physical events.

Nat was about to triumph and Code himself was forced to admit that this triumph was mostly due to Nat's own wits. First he had stolen Nellie Tanner (Code had thought a lot about that ring missing from Nellie's hand), then he had attached the Charming Lass in the endeavor to take away from him the very means of his livelihood.

Then something had happened. Schofield did not know what it was, but something evidently very serious, for the next thing he knew Nat had crushed his pride and manhood under a brutal and technical charge of murder.

But this was not all.

His victim escaping him with the schooner and the means of livelihood Burns had employed a traitor in the crew to poison the bait and force him to come ashore to replenish his tubs. Once ashore, the shanghailing was not difficult.

Code had no doubt whatever that the whole plan, commencing with the disappearance of the man in the motor-dory and ending with his abduction from St. Pierre, was part and parcel of the same scheme. In this, his crowning achievement of skill and cunning, Burns had showed himself an admirable plotter, playing upon human nature as he did to affect his ends.

For it was nothing but realization of Peter Ellinwood's weakness in the matter of his size and fighting ability that resulted in his (Code's) easy capture. Schofield had no shadow of a doubt but that the big Frenchman had been hired to play his part, and that, in the howling throng that surrounded the fighters the crew of the Nettie B. were waiting to seize the first opportunity to make the duel a melee and effect their design in the confusion.

Their opportunity came when the Frenchman tried to trip Pete Ellinwood after big Jean had fallen and Code rushed into the fray with the ferocity of a wildcat. Some one raised the yell "Police," he was surrounded by his enemies, some one rapped him over the head with a black-jack, and the rest was done. It was clever business, and despite the helplessness of his position, Code could not but admire the brilliance of such a scheming brain, while at the same time deploring that it was not employed in some legitimate and profitable cause.

Now he was in the enemy's hands, and St. Andrew's was less than a dozen hours away: St. Andrew's with its jail, its grand pury and its pen.

Life aboard the Nettie B. had been a dead monotony. On the foremast above Code's prison hung the bell that rang the watches, so that the passage of every half hour was dinged into his ears. Three time a day he was given food, and twice a day he was allowed to pace up and down the deck, a man holding tightly to each arm.

The weather had been propitious with a moderate sea and a good quartering wind. The Nettie had footed it properly, and Code's experienced eye had, on one occasion, seen her log her twelve knots in an hour. The fact had raised his estimation of her fifty per cent.

It must not be supposed that, as Code sat in his hard wooden chair, he forgot the diary that he had read the first afternoon of his incarceration. Often he thought of it and often he drew it out from its place and reread those last entries: "Swears he will win second race," "Says he can't lose day after to-morrow," "I wonder what the boy has got up his sleeve that makes him so sure he will win!"

At first Code merely ascribed these recorded sayings of Nat Burns to youthful disappointment and a sportsmanlike determination to do better next time. But not for long. He remembered as though it had been yesterday the look with which Nat had favored him when he finally came ashore beaten, and the sullen resentment with which he greeted any remarks concerning the race.

There was no sportsmanlike determination about him! Code quickly changed his point of view. How could Nat be so sure he was going to win?

The thing was ridiculous on the face of it. The fifty-year-old May had limped in half an hour ahead of the thirty-year-old M. C. Burns after a race of fifteen miles. How, then, could Nat swear with any degree of certainty that he would win the second time. It was well-known that the M.C. Burns was especially good in heavy weather, but how could Nat ordain that there would be just the wind and set he wanted?

The thing was absurd, on the face of it, and, besides, silly braggadocio, if not actually malicious. And even if it were malicious, Code thanked Heaven that the race had not been sailed, and that he had been spared the exhibition of Nat's malice. He had escaped that much, anyway.

However, from motives of general caution, Code decided to take the book with him. Nat had evidently forgotten it, and he felt sure he would get off the ship with it in his possession. Now, as he drew near to St. Andrews, he put it for the last time inside the lining of his coat, and fastened that lining together with pins, of which he always carried a stock under his coat-lapel.

As Schofield had not forgotten the old leg of the M. C. Burns, neither had he forgotten the threat he made to Nat that he would try his best to escape, and would defy his authority at every turn.

He had tried to fulfil his promise to the letter. Twice he had removed one of the windows before the alert guard detected him, and once he had nearly succeeded in cutting his way through the two-inch planking of his ceiling before the chips and sawdust were discovered, and he was deprived of his clasp-knife.

Every hour of every day his mind had been constantly on this business of escape. Even during the reading, to which he fled to protect his reason, it was the motive of every chapter and he would drop off in the middle of a page into a reverie, and grow inwardly excited over some wild plan that mapped itself out completely in his feverish brain.

Now as they approached St. Andrew's his determination was as strong as ever, but his resources were exhausted. Double-guarded and without weapons, he found himself helpless. The fevered excitement of the past four days subsided into a dull apathy of hurt in which his brain was as delicate and alert as the mainspring of a watch. He was resigned to the worst if it came, but was ready, like a panther in a tree, to spring at the slightest false move of his enemies.

Now for the last time he went over little eight-by-ten prison. He examined the chair as though it were some instrument of the Inquisition. He pulled the bed to pieces and handled every inch of the frame. He emptied every compartment of the queer hanging cabinet that had been stuffed with books and miscellanies; he examined every article in the room.

He had done this a dozen times before, but some instinct drove him to repeat the process. There was always hope of the undiscovered, and, besides, he needed the physical action and the close application of his mind. So, mechanically and doggedly he went over every inch of his little prison.

But in vain.

PERSONAL.

St. Catharines, Ont.—"Two years ago I was in a very nervous, generally run-down condition, so that I awoke in the morning more tired than when I retired. The doctors thought I had heart trouble and treated me for it but I got no benefit. I heard of Dr. Pierce's remedies through a friend who had been to your Invalids' Hotel for an operation (which proved entirely successful) and I at once got the 'Favorite Prescription.' I took three bottles altogether and at the end of three weeks I felt entirely cured and have been well and strong since, without a single bad spell. I stopped taking it about three months ago and am glad to tell any one how splendidly your medicine has healed me."—Mrs. John Lewis, 53 Niagara St., St. Catharines, Ont.

The mighty restorative power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

It is a wonderful prescription prepared only from nature's roots and herbs with no alcohol to falsely stimulate and no narcotic to wreck the nerves. It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

Get it now! All druggists.

A Great Book Every Woman Should Have.

Over a million copies of the "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" are now in the hands of the people. It is a book that everyone should have and read in case of accident or sickness.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous, waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Power of Mind Over Matter

By MARGARET C. DEVEAUX

At eighteen I was a delicate girl in the doctor's care for some nervous affection the nature of which seemed to puzzle him. During this time I visited a friend of mine who lived in a city. On my arrival I was shown to my room, the two rear windows of which looked down into a back yard, but there was a side window which looked directly into another side window of the next house, the interval between being but a few yards. My friend threw open all these windows and left me to make my toilet.

As soon as she had gone I went first to the rear windows and looked out, then to the side window. There, starting, looking at me, was my counterpart—indeed, myself. I started, and she started. Then, covering my face with my hands, I turned away and buried my head in the pillows on the bed.

How long I remained there I cannot tell. It was probably but a few minutes, but it seemed a long while. I was sure that my nervous affliction had produced the apparition. I had seen myself once before in a dream, from which I awoke with a violent heartbeat, but I had not considered that a matter of moment. But now I had appeared to myself in broad daylight. I had before me the frightful prospect of passing into insanity.

Not for the world would I have my hosts learn of my infirmity. Some persons must tell of all their aches and pains and forebodings if only for sympathy; I concealed mine. As soon as I had pulled myself together I arose and without looking at the window where I had seen myself went downstairs without having changed my dress. I told my friend that I was a poor sleeper and hoped that in the morning I would not be awakened by too much light pouring into my room. She said at once that she must put me into another chamber, since the one I occupied faced the rising sun. This was exactly what I wanted, and I slept that night in an apartment facing the west.

I intended to make an excuse to go away the next day; but, seeing no further signs of myself, I was persuaded to remain. My friends, who knew that I was in poor health, were extremely kind to me, and nowhere else could I find rest and comfort as I could with them. As I grew stronger a desire came to me to look out of the window where I had seen my double and perhaps I would see her again. But so great was my dread that I dared not go into the room to make the trial. I made several attempts to conquer my fears, but they were failures.

My hosts had lived many years in the locality and knew several of their neighbors, all of whom owned their own houses. I was invited to different social gatherings among them and shortly before I left the place was asked to dine next door, in the very house where I had seen myself standing at the window. I scarcely dared accept the invitation, and yet how could I refuse, for those who had invited me were very dear friends of my hosts? I tried to think of some excuse that would not be considered such, but tried in vain. When informed of the invitation I pretended not to hear, and it was accepted for me, with other guests of my hosts, since we were all invited together.

As the time drew near I thought I should make pretense of feeling unable to go, but within me was a secret desire to see if the apparition would come to me there. Between this dread and desire I hesitated till it was time to dress for the evening, then went up to my room in such a state of indecision that when it was announced that it was time to be off I was but half dressed. Mechanically I completed my toilet and, going downstairs, suffered myself to be led out passively.

The room into which we ladies were shown to leave our wraps was on the opposite side of the house from that which stood beside the home of my hosts. This was a relief to me. There was no reason for me to dread the spot where I had seen myself; but, then, a nervous person is not amenable to reason, and I was in a condition of nervous weakness not far from a general breakdown.

With the exception of myself, there was a very homogeneous party, and even I after a glass or two of wine was sufficiently braced to enjoy myself. The dinner passed off so pleasantly and I felt so stimulated by the wine I drank that I began to have a desire to visit that part of the house in which I had seen my counterpart. When we went upstairs for our wraps I ran up ahead of the others and followed the hall in the direction of the place of the apparition. After turning at an angle I came to a door which I opened and walked into a bedroom. Facing a window which I knew looked out upon the side of the house of my hosts was a pier glass.

Never in my life have I experienced such relief as when the fact occurred to me that I had mistaken my reflection in this glass for myself. No wonder my image started when I started. Closing the door, I darted around the hall, reaching the robing room just as the others came up the stairs.

This episode showed me the power of the mind over the body. I realized that much of my infirmity I had produced on myself and made a resolution to give up doctors and medicine and brooding alike. This I did and gradually became strong again.

Frightened Huns Heard

One of the queer results of the war and the English blockade is that the thrifty German housewives not only try to hoard up all kinds of foodstuffs and other necessities, but also many things which will never become scarce. "To save for the worst" has become a craze with them. They even store away enormous quantities of salt, although there is not the slightest possibility that this article will ever be lacking. Some of the women have bought more salt than they can use in years and the money spent in these senseless purchases is wasted

"TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET--AH!

"Tiz" is grand for aching, swollen, tender, calloused feet or corns.

Ah! what relief. No more tired feet; no more burning feet; no more swollen, aching, tender, sweaty feet. No more soreness in corns, callouses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "Tiz." "Tiz" is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "Tiz" cures your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a 25-cent box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "Tiz." Get a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents. Think

Soldiers Struck Gold

Amongst other difficulties the colonials cheerfully faced was the great labor involved in conveying stores, ammunition, and, above all, water to the fire trenches. The whole position is arid, uncultivatable barren ground and stunted trees. There is a story that one old miner went on digging long after his comrades had abandoned all hope of tapping a spring. When asked why, he replied: "This bit of country is just like western Australia, and if there ain't water there's sure to be gold." And sure enough his trained eyes did discover gold amongst the sand, but not, unfortunately, in paying quantities

LAND FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

Jesse Collings Discusses Future of Men After the War.

That indefatigable friend of British farmers, Mr. Jesse Collings, in a letter to The London Times regarding the meeting at the Colonial Institute to consider the future of soldiers after the war, says:

"Sir Rider Haggard as the representative of the Institute is about to investigate the means by which our soldiers who return after the war can be settled in the Dominions overseas. Lord Curzon rightly stated that at the end of the war the men, after their military experience and life in the open air, will not be inclined to return to the factory, workshop, or the office stool, and that it was the duty of the Government to provide an outlet for the employment of such men.

"These sentiments are excellent and true, but the conclusion which Lord Curzon arrives at is very disappointing. It contains a suggestion that the returned soldiers should be sent overseas and settled on Colonial lands. It is certain that there will be no sufficient employment for them in the industrial world in England. The only outlet for them is on the land.

"If an investigation similar to that about to be made by Sir Rider Haggard were made with regard to the situation at home, it would be found that there is profitable employment for all the returned soldiers in cultivating the uncultivated and waste lands in our own country. There is something repulsive in the idea that after these men have fought so bravely in defence of the nation they are to be deported oversea, while the land of their own country is crying aloud for their service.

"The immense outlay required for sending these men away would be largely, if not quite, sufficient to pay the expenses of settling them at home.

"On these land settlements returned soldiers and their womenkind would be engaged in rearing strong and healthy families, and, what is most important, would be solving the question of our food supplies and adding to the economic and industrial strength of the country.

"Lord Curzon rightly states that after the war there will have to be a readjustment of the basic principles on which our public life now rests. That readjustment will, no doubt, involve an industrial and a social revolution, of which no one can foresee the nature and extent.

"It is certain, however, that our effete land system will be overhauled. That system, which exists in no other country in Europe, gives the control of nearly all the land—a prime necessary of life—into the hands of a comparatively small number of persons. It permits the land to be held up and put to inferior uses or to no use at all. No thinking man, with any foresight, can conclude that such a system, in view of the needs of the nation can continue for long.

"In view of the action, which is certain to take place, by bodies of men who hold extreme views with regard to the land—nationalisers, Socialists, and others—it becomes more than ever wise and necessary to create a numerous rural population, which at all times and in all countries has proved itself to be an element for safety and restraint in the economy of a nation. Our rural districts are already enough depleted without taking steps to turn them into a desert.

"I am as anxious as anyone to strengthen our Empire; but surely it is a poor way of doing it by weakening its heart and centre."

The Sleep of Seeds.

Oats, corn, fennel and some flower seeds were exposed during 118 days to a temperature of 40 degrees F. below zero. Afterward, when placed in suitable surroundings, nearly all of the fennel, oat and corn seeds and many of the others germinated. It is concluded that the protoplasm, or the principle of life, in a resting seed is in a state of inaction not comparable to that of a smoldering fire, but rather like that of a chemical mixture which is capable of forming a combination whenever the required conditions of temperature and illumination are present.

How She Was Named.

A little colored girl, a newcomer in Sunday school, gave her name to the teacher as "Fertilizer Johnson." Later the teacher asked the child's mother if that was right.

"Yes, ma'am, dat's her name," said the fond parent. "You see, she was named fer me and her father. Her father's name am Ferdinand, and my name is Lize. So we named her Fertilizer."

A WONDROUS LAND

The Yellowstone Region as James Bridger Saw It.

AND HE WAS A TRUTHFUL MAN

His Adventure With an Elk at the Famous Obsidian Cliff and the Effect of a Ride Through Alum Creek—Story of the Mountain That Was Cursed.

As a teller of tales Munchausen had a worthy rival in James Bridger, the celebrated hunter, trader and guide, whose name and career are part of the pioneer history of the west. Bridger was thoroughly familiar with the region now comprised in the Yellowstone park as far back as 1830.

In his book, "The Yellowstone Park," the author, Hiram Martin Chittenden, brigadier general United States army, retired, sets down some of the yarns Bridger told about that land of wonders. Many of the Yellowstone country tales ascribed to Bridger have survived to this day, probably because they have never been capped. The first story General Chittenden tells relates to the celebrated Obsidian cliff, a mass of black volcanic glass with which all the tourists are familiar. Its discovery by Bridger was the result of a hunting trip, and it happened in this way:

"Coming one day in sight of a magnificent elk, he took careful aim at the unsuspecting animal and fired. To his amazement the elk not only was not wounded, but seemed not to have heard the noise of the rifle. Bridger drew considerably nearer and gave the elk the benefit of his most deliberate aim, but with the same result as before. A third and fourth effort met with similar fate. Utterly exasperated, he seized his rifle by the barrel, resolved to use it as a club, since it had failed as a firearm. Rushing madly toward the elk, he suddenly crashed into an immovable vertical wall which proved to be a mountain of perfectly transparent glass, on the farther side of which, still in peaceful security, the elk was quietly grazing.

"Stranger still, the mountain was not only of pure glass, but was a perfect telescope lens, and, whereas the elk seemed but a few yards off, it was in reality twenty-five miles away.

Another of Bridger's discoveries was an ice cold spring near the summit of a lofty mountain, the water from which flowed down over a long, smooth slope, where it acquired such velocity that it was boiling hot when it reached the bottom. This, a later investigator of the Firehole river found, was a case in which a hot spring discharged into the river bed.

Alum creek, a tributary of the Yellowstone, received its name from an accidental discovery by Bridger. One day he forded the creek and rode out several miles and back. He noticed that the return journey was only a small fraction of the distance going and that his horse's feet had shrunk to mere points which sank into the solid ground so that the animal could scarcely hobble along. Seeking the cause, he found it to be in the astringent qualities of the water, which was saturated with alum to such an extent that it had power to pucker distance itself.

Bridger also found a fine place to fish: "Somewhere along the shore an immense boiling spring discharges its overflow directly into the lake. The specific gravity of the water is less than that of the lake, owing to the expansive action of heat, and it floats in a stratum of three or four feet thick upon the cold water underneath. When Bridger was in need of fish it was to this place that he went. Through the hot upper stratum he let fall his bait to the subjacent habitable zone and, having hooked his victim, cooked him on the way out!"

The visitor to the region of petrifications in the northeast corner of the park and to various points in the hot springs districts will have no difficulty in discovering the base material out of which Bridger contrived the following picturesque yarn:

"A mountain in the park was once cursed by a great medicine man of the Crow nation. Everything on the mountain at the time of this dire event became instantly petrified and has remained so ever since. All forms of life are standing about in stone where they were suddenly caught by the petrifying influences, even as the inhabitants of ancient Pompeii were surprised by the ashes of Vesuvius. Sagebrush, grass, prairie fowls, antelopes, elks and bears may there be seen as perfect as in actual life. Dashing torrents and the spray mist from them stand forth in arrested motion as if carved from rock by a sculptor's chisel. Even flowers are blooming in colors of crystal, and birds soar with wings spread in motionless flight, while the air floats with music and perfumes silliceous, and the sun and moon shine with petrified light!" It is denied, though, that Baldger was responsible for the story that even the laws of gravitation were petrified in the region.

LABOUR SHORTAGE IN CIRCUS

Barnum & Bailey "Razorbacks" Quit to Work in Munition Plants.

PATERSON, N.J., May 22 —The entrance of the Barnum & Bailey circus into the New Jersey "powder belt," as the northern section of the State has become known on account of the presence of so many munitions factories, caused the "big show" no end of inconvenience last week. Arriving in Paterson, following labour troubles at Trenton, where it is reported 150 labourers quit the circus to work in the munitions plants, the foreman of the "razorbacks" found that he did not have sufficient men to get the animals and waggons unloaded and the big tents erected in time for the show that afternoon. Although E. T. Cook, agent in charge of the circus, would admit that only fifteen men left the show "because of the cold weather," the shortage of labour was so manifest as to delay the street parade three hours and the afternoon performance two hours.

Walter Mather of 87 Mary street, an employee of the local office of the Adams Express Company, was arrested charged with larceny, for having removed a large number of circus admission tickets from a bundle consigned to the circus management. It was said that Mather distributed the tickets among members of his family and friends, all of whom attended the afternoon performance as his "guests."

His Real Complaint.—The proprietor of a newly-built suburban villa was waited upon by the tenant with a complaint. "You say," recapitulated the proprietor, "that you were standing on a stepladder fixing a hook on the picture-rail, that you asked your wife if it was safe to come down, and you heard a reply, 'Yes.' So you did come down, and consequently stepped on a valuable water-colour, which is ruined. It's a great pity, and I'm sorry, but you can't expect me to be responsible for the fact that your wife said 'Yes.'" "I don't," said the tenant. "What I complain of is the fact that I could be heard by the lady next door, who thought she was saying 'Yes' to her husband."

Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, and others of the American class of poultry, usually are the best for hatching purposes.

Back Was Lame and Ached; Could Do Very Little Work

Suffered Much From Kidney Disease for Years, But Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Doctors had tried to cure this man but failed to get at the cause of trouble probably because they relied on medicines which act on the kidneys only. The strong feature about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. In many of these cases the disease is so complicated that ordinary kidney medicines fail to be of much benefit. Under such conditions Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills usually touch the spot and effect a cure.

Had they been only moderately successful Dr. Chase would never have selected them for world wide distribution. As it was the demand for these pills resulted naturally from their superior merit and there was nothing else to do but supply them in large quantities.

Mr. Simeon Shieloff, Birchbrook Orchards, Birchbank, B.C., writes:

"For several years I suffered greatly from kidney disease. I was weak and could do very little work. My back was lame and ached and I suffered much from headaches. Tried doctors and obtained no relief. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended by a friend and after taking four boxes I think that I can say that I am cured for I feel as well as I ever did."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Harry Anderson, J.P., who writes:

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Simeon Shieloff and believe his statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S WORK DRESS AND CAP.

By Anabel Worthington.

To give the air of a business suit to a working outfit for service in the home is indeed art; this model proves it, with its belted blouse in Russian style and in the fashionable length that marks outer garments with to-day's date. The low neck is finished with a narrow banding, which extends down the front where the closing is made with buttons; this same finish is used for the cuffs on the short sleeves. A belt of the material to hold the fullness neatly is arranged at a normal waistline, passing through straps of the material that are tacked at each side.

The skirt is three gores and of full, comfortable cut. The dust cap has the outer edge gathered to an extended front piece that turns back on itself, and the banding used in the blouse is introduced as a finishing touch to the cap. In such an outfit the woman of activity in the home may be becomingly dressed.

The pattern of this is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. With 5⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide and 5⅛ yards banding, a duplicate of this set may be had in size 36.

By sending 2 cents to the office of this publication you can obtain the pattern.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell Spoke of Idealistic and Genuine Patriotism to Sons of England at St. Andrew's Church — Illustrated Supreme Confidence as a Patriotic Element.

That a new Canada, a new British Empire, a new Christendom, a newer and better world will issue from the present turmoil and flux of the nations, was the concluding thought the Rev. T. H. Mitchell conveyed in his sermon on "Patriotism" to the Sons of England at St. Andrew's church Sunday. "Our boys," he said, in his impressive appeal, "are leaving their homes, going out prepared to give their lives for this new and glorious thing that is coming. How much are you men and women preparing to put into it?" In this connection, Rev. Mr. Mitchell was referring to the patriotic element of hope which he illustrated by recalling the unshaken confidence of the Roman senator who when Hannibal was almost at the gates of Rome, bought the very land on which the Carthaginian army was encamped. Such was the hope and confidence of the senators in the future of this country, paralleled by the confidence of Jeremiah who with the Chaldeans at the gates of his city, purchased from his cousin his own ancestral home they were occupying.

Addressing the visiting society, Rev. Mr. Mitchell said he welcomed them first because of the honoured name they bore. The name England never stood higher than at this moment. It stood for fairness, freedom, democracy. "I welcome you in the second place because your objects are most worthy. As I understand them they are sociability, mutual support and British patriotism. I have learned that during the past forty years you have spent two million dollars for those in need.

Speaking particularly of patriotism which he termed a cosmopolitan virtue, Rev. Mr. Mitchell said it sprang form three motives, the first of which was innate, instinctive, something that was in the very nature of man. He who did not love his country was an unnatural man. The second was an outer motive, appealing, unfortunate, springing from a realization and appreciation of the privileges of citizenship. In Canada this motive was growing stronger every day and hour. Is there any country under the sun in which a man has better home conditions and greater privileges than in Canada. The whole power of a mighty Empire stands behind you and protects you. The speaker cited the incidents of the American woman in Mexico who recently gathered a British flag about her as a safeguard.

The third was an upper motive based on moral obligation. If a man loves his country he should seek honour among its citizens let this point Rev. Mr. Mitchell observed that these men who sing "God Save the King" and are apparently loyal, but day after day they trample the honour of their country under the very dust. Graft was the popular word at the present hour. It was on everybody's lips:

"If I had my way, anybody giving or receiving a bribe would be disfranchised forever. It might not make him more of a patriot, but it would make him more uncomfortable.

Mr. Mitchell uttered a word of caution against the extreme spirit of nationality. "I would make the love for my country an opportunity for uplifting every other country. Sir Oliver Lodge said the other day that the great cause of this war was materialism, but a less second is an exaggerated nationalism. The speaker quoted Amiel's statement that he had never seen a nationalism that was free from prejudice.

WORRIED AND SLEEPLESS?

NERVES ARE RACKED.
VITALITY IS LOWERED.
BRAIN IS CONGESTED.
HEALTH UNDERMINED.

Opiates, Sedatives, Narcotics, Worse Than Useless. Produce no Permanent Good.

Worry, overwork, over-study and indigestion cause Insomnia.

Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First, the blood circulation must be improved:

Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

It's because Ferrozone equalizes circulation, because it soothes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve; for instilling force and life into overworked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so sure as Ferrozone.

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep, or break down.

You can if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use.

Absolutely safe is Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To sleep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weak and wretched, a boon to the sleepless—sold everywhere in 50c. boxes.

Travellers will find a small package of borax useful on their journeys. On trains, as often in hotels, the water supplied for washing is hard and drying to the skin, and a teaspoonful of borax added to a basinful of water will make a wonderful difference.

TOMMY'S SLANG.

Some of the Phrases Which Are Current at the Front.

The following are some of the slang words used by the men of the British army on active service given by Thomas O'Toole, in his book "A Way They Have in the Army":

Atcha.—All right.

Badg-y.—An enlisted boy.

Baggies.—"Tobby's" name for sailors in the navy—obviously a reference to the sailor's wide trousers.

Blighty.—Home.

Bobtack—Powder mixed into a paste to clean buttons and brasswork on equipment.

Bobygee.—A soldier cook. In India a native one.

Bundook.—A rifle.

Bun-Wallah.—A soldier who drinks nothing stronger than tea, and is, in consequence, supposed to eat voraciously of buns.

Chips.—The "Tommy's" pet designation for the regimental pioneer sergeant, who is usually by trade a carpenter.

Chuckling a Dummy.—When a man faints on parade he is said to have "chucked a dummy." The term is also applied to men who report ill without reasonable cause.

Dog's Leg.—The first stripe a man receives on promotion.

Doolally Tap.—When a soldier becomes mentally unbalanced he is said to have received the "Doolally tap."

Gravel Crushers.—Infantry soldiers.

Muckin.—Bitter.

Quarter Bloke.—The irreverent way in which the officer holding the rank of quartermaster is referred to.

Rookey.—A recruit.

Root-y.—Bread.

Scrounger.—A man with plenty of resource in obtaining that which he wants.

Slingers.—A meal of bread and tea.

Square-Pushing.—Courting.

Square-Bit.—A best girl.

Stir.—Imprisonment in a military detention barracks.

Swinging the Lead.—This is the equivalent of the civilian expression, "Telling the tale."

Tin Opener.—This is "Tommy's" light-hearted name for his bayonet.

Vamping.—Eating heartily.

Yeb.—One who is easily fooled.

To Employ Soldiers.

Throughout Australia local committees are being formed to work under the direction of the War Council in the different States in connection with the scheme for finding employment for discharged soldiers and settling them on the land. An endeavor will be made to place the soldier-settlers in groups, so that it will be easy to appoint an overseer or expert agriculturist to supervise their work and give them advice. This will enable men to interchange farm implements and help each other in the preparation of the land and the gathering of the crops. The Sydney War Council have received a number of applications for land. Some of the returned soldiers merely ask for a poultry run, but some of the more ambitious desire grazing farms. One suggestion is that these soldier-farmers should not be put on the land without their fitness for the work being first ascertained, and that in order that the authorities might arrive at a decision on that point the men should be given a probationary period in the State experiment farms. In New South Wales recently steps were taken by a committee to clear an area of several hundreds of acres. It is intended to cut this land into "farmlets" of a few acres each, and to make the blocks, ready for settlement, available for the soldiers as they return from the war.

More Appropriate.

Sir George Alexander is drawing all London by his remarkable acting in that delightful comedy, "The Basker," at the St. James' Theatre. As many people are aware, Sir George's original name was Samson before he went on the stage, and apropos of this fact, a good story is told. A well-known theatrical manager was once discussing Sir George with a friend.

"By the way, Alexander isn't his right name, is it?" enquired the friend.

"No," said the manager. "It used to be Samson. It was a pity to change the name of Samson to Alexander."

"Oh, but Alexander conquered the world, you know!" laughed the other.

"Yes," answered the manager "but Samson is a more appropriate theatrical man. Have you forgotten that Samson was the first man who brought down the house?"

Old Barony Restored.

The Barony of Wharton has been restored after being in abeyance for nearly two centuries, and Lord Wharton recently took his seat in the House of Lords as the eighth holder of the title. The first holder of the title was born in 1495, and was summoned to Parliament as a baron in 1544. The fourth holder was the father of Thomas Wharton who was created Earl and Marquis of Wharton, and was the author of "Lillibulero," the song which sang James II out of three kingdoms.

As an Offset.

"That girl has been promised twice to my once. She has all the luck on this office."

"Well, I notice that she also has most of the work on her shoulders. So I guess she's entitled to the luck."—Washington Herald.

Some people have never tried Red Rose Tea because they think it is just ordinary tea put into packages.

WRONG!

Red Rose Tea is a "master" blend of more than a dozen high-grade Indian and Ceylon teas. It is a DISTINCTIVE tea—distinctive in flavor, in richness, in strength, in economy.

To prove it, try it.

An Ancient Superstition.

Superstition still survives in County Antrim, and an illustration was recently furnished by a remarkable incident which occurred at a place called Aghadalgan, near Crumlin. A few weeks ago a farmer was working in a field about 200 yards from his dwelling-house, when the latter was broken into and a sum of £50 abstracted. He advised the Crumlin police, who proceeded to make investigations, but were unable to find the slightest clue that would lead to the detection of the criminal. On the following day, accompanied by his brother, the farmer paid a visit to Belfast, and on their return in the evening a story got circulated that they had been in consultation with a witch, who produced a mirror, in which was reflected the guilty person, and that she assured them the lost money would soon return. And, behold, on the next morning, when the rural postman was coming in from his rounds, he discovered, on a window-ledge at the Rose's Lane Ends Post Office, a small parcel addressed to the farmer, which on being opened was found to contain £45 10s. It is stated that the farmer intends to consult the Belfast witch again about the balance not returned.

Sex Antagonism Stopped.

One of the most subtle results of the war is the far-reaching change in the relations of the sexes to each other. Before the scraps of paper came to be torn up there was a great deal of sex-antagonism about, but the declaration of war seemed to blow it away as if by magic. Instantly, the sexes fell into their proper places, the men to fight for their homes, the women to stop there and "carry on." Like all great things, it was wonderfully simple, and we never noticed it till months afterwards.

"But I doubt whether this happy state of affairs will last," says Mrs. Chirton Braby in a London, Eng., newspaper. "With all my heart I would it might so prove. But to me it seems that the most bitter war of all will be the sex war to come. Not, perhaps, quite in the near hereafter, but, roughly speaking, within a few years of peace."

Hometowners Plus.

Uncle George—Come here, Willie. Don't you know who I am? Willie—You bet I do! You are ma's brother, who stayed here two months one time and never offered to pay a cent for board. Oh, yes; I've heard pa speak of you often.

Argument Spoiled.

She—Too many men expect their wives to run their homes on practically nothing. They forget that no one can make bricks without straw. He—My wife does—out of flour.—Stray Stories.

Consoling Her.

Bess—I sometimes wish I might see myself as others see me. Nell—Oh, you poor dear! Why, you just couldn't believe your eyes!—Browning's Magazine.

No liberal man would impute a change of unsteadiness to another for having changed his opinion.—Cicero.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It If your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used a few months, do their eyes more injury than good.

Here is a simple prescription that every one should use: 5 grains Bon-Opto dissolved in ½ glass of water. Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Bon-Opto system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use.

It is good for the eye, and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Your own druggist can fill this prescription, or the Valmas Drug Co. of Toronto will fill it for you by mail. Try it, and know for once what real eye comfort is.

A prominent Chicago physician to whom the above article was submitted, stated: "Bon-Opto is a very powerful remedy. The ingredients are well known to druggists and the constituents are unobjectionable and entirely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few proprietary preparations that I have no hesitation in prescribing for my patients."

The Wernz Drug Co. fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will gladly fill yours.

EXHIBITION GROUNDS TO-MORROW MORNING AND AFTERNOON

THE FRENCH CONTINUE TO THROW GERMANS OUT OF THEIR POSITIONS

In All Night Fighting of the Most Furious Character French Have Expelled Enemy From All But the Northeastern Corner of Fort Douaumont---Heavy German Attacks on Both Sides of the Meuse Repulsed.

GERMANS ARE RESUMING MASS ATTACKS

PARIS (French Official), May 23.—In all night fighting of the most furious character, the French expelled the Germans from all by the northeastern corner of Fort Douaumont, the War Office announced to-day. Heavy German attacks on both banks of the Meuse were entirely repulsed, except north of Thiaumont Farm, on the east bank, where the Germans re-occupied a trench captured recently by the French. The battle on the Verdun front continued with the most extreme violence throughout last night, and was still in progress when official despatches were filed from army headquarters early to-day. The Germans are offering desperately heroic resistance amid the ruins of Fort Douaumont. Violent hand-to-hand fighting has been going on in the fort since the French entered the position yesterday, the French continuing to throw the enemy from his positions. The Germans who held the northern rim of the fort yesterday afternoon were driven from the northwestern corner in last night's fighting. The French are strengthening their positions in the rest of the work expecting immediate German counter attacks. On the west bank o fthe Meuse, northwest of Verdun, the Germans launched several furious attacks against Hill 304. By using liquid fire and gas, the enemy troops entered a French trench on the hill, but were immediately thrown out by a brilliant charge. East of Hill 304 the Germans again attempted to outflank French positions by a heavy attack, following intense artillery preparations. Grey waves approached the French works but were immediately halted by a curtain of fire. The most violent fighting continues east of the Meuse. On the whole sector from Thiaumont to Douaumont Fort, the Germans are resuming massed attacks and have suffered fearful losses, the French War Office stated.

The greatest French counter offensive since the battle of Verdun began three months ago, is carrying the French legions into a smashing drive against the German lines both east and west of the Meuse.

An official statement from the German War Office this afternoon admits that the French are on the aggressive in practically every sector of Verdun, but denies the French claim that practically all of what remains of the shall wrecked fort of Douaument is in French hands.

South of the ruins of Fort Douaument and south of the village of Douaumont an engagement is still going on, said the German statement.

BERLIN, May 23.—Either President Wilson or ex-President Taft would be accepable to German Socialists as a peace-maker, Philip Schiedemann, German Socialist leader, said to-day. "The Socialists are always for peace," said Schiedemann, who recently interpellated the Chancellar on the Reichstag on peace discussion. "I am positively convinced that the Chancellor desires peace. He has so indicated twice in his Reichstag speeches, and once in the note to America. Reichstag members believe that if Germany solves the food problem now, England will be compelled to make peace because in this manner the blockade problem will be solved."

There Will Be Plenty To Eat and Drink

Examiner Special:

Refreshments and the Exhibition Park to-morrow in charge of the Women's organizations will be of interest.

Four large tents, at which a variety of refreshments will be sold, hot and cold, substantial and dainty, at prices from 1 cent to 10 cents, will be in charge of the 57th Chapter I. O. D. E., the Otonabee Chapte rI. O. D. E., the Kitchener League, and St. Peter's Patriotic Club.

A very attractive Midway, including a clever fortune teller, is under the charge of the Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E. Admission to the grounds will be 25c for adults, 10c for children.

Admission to Grand Stand, same prices. Motors 25c.

A substantial meal, for those who wish to spend the day at the grounds, can be chosen from the varied menu at a very reasonable rate.

Come and have pork and beans, cooked in the 93rd field kitchen.

ANOTHER NOTE IS COMPLETED

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 23.—President Wilson to-day completed his note threatening against mail seizures by Great Britain. It was sent to Secretary Lansing for the latter's signature shortly after noon and was expected to be put on the cable immediately.

GERMAN OPERATIONS AROUND VERDUN

Special to the Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 22.—The Tribune this morning publishes an interview by its correspondent with an unnamed American military observer who has just returned from the Verdun neighbourhood. He said he looked upon the German operations around Verdun as the dying gasp of German operations on the western front.

WOMEN FOR SHELL WORK

Women are wanted for shell work. No previous experience necessary. Only qualifications needed are willingness to learn and desire to help on the supply of munitions.

We invite the attention of Patriotic Ladies to our need for help, to offset the very serious shortage of men. To those who have knitted socks and are willing and desirous of still furthering the cause of the Allies, we solicit your aid. Come and help us make munitions. Good treatment. Men's pay assured. Excellent shop conditions.

FOURTH DIVISION OF CANADIANS IS GOING TO FRONT

General Watson Who Early in the War Was Commanding Officer of the 2nd. Eastern Ontario Battalion, is to be at Head of New Division.

PROMOTIONS ARE MADE

OTTAWA, May 22. — The Fourth Canadian division will complete the forces which the Dominion is maintaining at the front, has now been so far constituted that its officers may be named. It will will commanded, as already intimated, by General David Watson, and will consist of the 40th Brigade, under command of Lord Brooke; the 11th, commanded by Brig.-General Loomis, of Montreal; and the 12th, commanded by Brig.-General W. St. Pierre-Hughes.

Brig.-General Hughes, formerly Lieut.-Col. Hughes, of the 21st Eastern, has won his promotion by the work he has already done at the front with the second division. He has been in the trenches with the battalion since it reached the firing line. His promotion makes him the fourth member of his family to attain the rank of brigadier-general or higher.

Brig.-General Loomis of Montreal, formerly Colonel Loomis, went over in command of the 18th Highlanders and with his regiment, went through the Battle of St. Julien, in which that battalion bore the front of the fighting and suffered heavily. He has done good work since then and his promotion also comes as a reward of service performed.

Lord Brooke, who was in Canada just previous to the war, has lately held a command in the "Corps Troops," which have been acting as an auxiliary unit to the army corps, already in Flanders.

Brig.-General, formerly Colonel F. S. Meighen, of the 14th Battalion, Montreal, will command a training division at Bramshott.

General McDougall remains at Shorncliffe in charge of the division in training there.

MOVING PICTURES FROM AN AEROPLANE

Sensational Feat of Camera Men Who Made "Britain Prepared" Film

How great and how thrilling a part the aeroplane plays in modern warfare may well be imagined after seeing the moving pictures of "Britain Prepared," the official film of the British Army and Navy, which has been secured for presentation in Massey Hall by The Toronto Daily Star. The spectator from his seat in Massey Hall sees the great birds rising from the ground and flying straight towards him as though they were passing over his head. Then of a sudden he has the sensation of being up in an aeroplane himself. He sees the earth falling beneath him. He enters the clouds and presently they, too, lie below him like a rumpled carpet. His machine sways and swerves and inclines at an angle as it makes a turn. He can almost feel the wind in his face, and instinctively he leans first to one side and then to the other as though to balance the machine as it sways and slants in its bird-like swoops.

These particular pictures were taken by a moving camera operator who went up in an aeroplane for the purpose. They illustrate not only the sort of work the military airman has to do, but the daring spirit of the men who made this wonderful film, and the determination of the British Government, once the policy was decided upon, to make a thorough job of showing exactly what the army and navy were doing.

"Britain Prepared" will be shown under Royal and vice-Regal patronage at Massey Hall during the week of April 17.

Don't dig too hard with the curry comb on the under side of the body of any animal unless you want to get into trouble. That's a pretty ticklish spot; go lightly there.

BIG PROGRAMME FOR THE HOLIDAY

The weather man promises fine warm weather for to-morrow, which is all that is needed to make the patriotic demonstration at the Exhibition Grounds one of the biggest successes in years. In the morning the review of the 93rd Battalion will be a spectacular feature that should not be missed, as it is the first and probably the last opportunity to see the battalion as a complete unit. In the afternoon the special military features will include, bayonet fighting, machine gun work, exhibition by the Signallers, and a physical drill squad, while in addition to a number of novelty races and a ball game the following events will be run off: 100 yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, Company relay race one mile, half-mile race, one mile race, broad jump, high jump, hop-step-and-jump. These events are open to all members of the battalion, and the entry list is a large one. The prizes have been donated by the merchants. The various women's patriotic societies in the city will have refreshment booths, meal tents and other booths on the grounds, and the entire proceeds will go to the battalion fund. The morning review will be at 10:30 o'clock, while the battalion will march to the grounds at 1:30 in the afternoon.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE 93rd BATTALION HAS BEEN POSTPONED

Owing to Wet Condition of Barriefield Camp Main Body of Local Soldiers Will Not Leave Until Next Week---Advance Guard Will Remain at Barriefield---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The 93rd Battalion will not leave for Barriefield on Thursday morning. This is the latest development in military circles. The change in the plans is necessitated on account of the condition of Barriefield camp. Yesterday's downpour of rain putting on the finishing touches. No definite time has been set for the departure of the battalion but it will not be until next week, according to the expectations now.

The advance party which went down to Barriefield yesterday will remain there until the arrival of the main body. Major Lech who was in charge of the men, returned this morning. He reports that the 146th Battalion of Kingston which had their tents up before yesterday's rain moved into camp yesterday afternoon.

An advance party of the 109th Battalion of Lindsay passed through Peterborough this morning on their way to Barriefield.

In a letter received by a member of the Examiner staff from Driver Morris Montgomery a former Peterborough boy who enlisted in Toronto with the Ammunition Column the writer says that his three brothers are now in France and they are looking for two more to join them soon. Pte. Ray Montgomery who enlisted in Toronto is also with the Ammunition Column while Pte. Owen Montgomery who joined the 8th C.M.R. here is now with the C. A. S. C. while Pte. Ray Montgomery who left here with the local detachment of the 21st Battalion is still with that unit. Driver Montgomery says that he has met more Peterborough boys at the front than he has acquaintances from Toronto where he enlisted. He says: The other night I ran into a battery to see if I knew any of the boys and I got a surprise. I was shaking hands there for half an hour. They were nearly all Peterborough boys.

Speaking of the death of Col. Marshall of the 48th Highlanders Battalion, the Toronto News says: "Of the officers of the old Battalion who were members of the Highlanders in peace times only Alex. Sinclair and "Pete" Campbell are left. The others have been killed, wounded or captured in the numerous engagements in which the Battalion has figured and made such glorious history during the past thirteen months."

"Pete" Campbell is a son of Mr. Peter Campbell, Peterborough.

Gunners Sydney E. Armstrong and Robert H. Thompson, Cobourg Heavy Battery, arrived home last evening on four days' leave. Orders having been received in Cobourg for the recruiting of fifty additional men for the Heavy Battery at Cobourg to leave shortly after June 1st for overseas. Gunners Armstrong and Thompson are looking for some likely recruits who want to get into the Battery and go overseas at once.

REGIMENTAL FUND IS NOW IN SIGHT

In Spite of the Bad Weather and a Bad Start Yesterday's Canvass Was Quite Satisfactory and To-day's Promises Much Better Results.

TEAMS HARD AT WORK

It was a welcome change for the canvassing teams from the wet streets and dripping eaves of the buildings to the warmth, light and generous prospect displayed by the abundantly laden tables at the recruiting headquarters. Cheerful thing to come in and find that supper was ready. Such a supper. Lashions and lavins'. Even the bread was buttered, the meat sliced and a culinary feature that drew attention, the potatoes cooked in or on or at the field kitchen at the Armouries. The kitchen is all right when handled by the regimental cooks if it affords facilities as shown in the boiling of the potatoes. The kitchen was voted the proper thing and tool. This feed is mentioned because it was a grateful conclusion to a world carried on under most troublesome circumstances on account of the weather.

The teams were to meet to undertake the canvas for the 93rd regimental fund. At nine o'clock a few turned up. By the half hour a few more were on hand. Rumours were insistent that so and so could not get off. Presently the Old Guard turned up and things looked much better. The chairman, Mr. Dan. O'Connell, began to stir things up, and a change was made in the propose procedure by using the lists prepared for the canvas for the Belgium Relief Fund. This seemed to make matters more tractable, and by eleven o'clock all were out on the canvas despite the rain and storm.

Six o'clock brought the team members to headquarters. Cheerful reports were promised. All seemed optimistic and hopeful as well. The tables were filled and supper despatched. Mr. O'Connell made the initial after-dinner address, promising that with renewed energy that the work of the morrow would pile up the desired amount for the fund. He pointed out that it was absolutely necessary that the regiment go away well equipped, especially as Peterborough could not well stand and let it be said that other regiments from other points were being sent out with generous regimental and battalion funds. While to some extent we might differ as to what was required it was well established that a fund to provide comforts and conveniences for the men was absolutely necessary. The townships to the east, and the villages of Norwood and Havelock were giving liberally considering their resources. To-night and on Tuesday night the townships of Smith, Otonabee, Ennismore, would be visited by the Mayor and the local member of the Provincial House, and he had no doubt that they would be successful. Then with the proceeds of the tag day sale, those from the 24th of May celebration, the citizens' subscriptions, and something substantial from the city in the way of a civic grant, the desired fund would be in sight. Tuesday would tell the tale, and he knew it would be a story of success.

Announcement by the several team captains followed, punctuated by applause. Ten teams, several of them teams only in name, for the members had not turned up to work. Several were so handicapped Business was pressing and detained many, so that considering the number of men at work the results per individual were very good.

Adjutant MacElheney reported that having the factory list in hand the time had been devoted to laying pipe for Tuesday's work. He expected

DEATH WAS FROM POISONING SELF-ADMINISTERED

Coroner's Jury Investigate the Circumstances Surrounding the Death of Mrs. Thebeau Who Was Also Known as "Dollie" Simpson---Deceased Was Legally Married to Thebeau

AUTHORITIES EXONERATED

"Good bye Martin I'm off" With these words Mrs. Edward Thebeau sank into a state of semi-consciousness while three epolicemen, two doctors and Martin Quigley a member of the 93rd battalion, worked desparately to counteract the deadly effects of carbolic acid poisoning which according to a coroner's jury was self administered at her home 139 Sherbrooke street, early Monday morning following her arrest for alleged disorderly conduct.

Martin Quigley was the man who was found in the house when the police raid was made. According to his own statements he had been living with Mrs. Thebeau for several weeks. He was present at the inquest which was held last evening but as not called upon to give evidence.

WAS LEGALLY MARRIED.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that Mrs. Edward Thebeau came to her death as a result of poisoning, self administered and that no blame was attached to anyone. The investigation also served to satisfy the authorities that the deceased was legally married to Private Edward Thebeau, now in a military hospital in France, suffering from a wound in the thigh.

Dr. C. H. Amys who was present when the woman died was of the opinion that deceased not only swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid but supplemented this with a dose of strychnine. Two bottles containing a quantity of each of these drugs, were found concealed in the left leg of her stocking.

A TELLTALE MARK.

When the jurymen were inspecting the body their attention was called to the imprint of the larger bottle which was burnt on the left leg indicating that the bottle had been used a short time before death.

The brand on the leg was caused by a small quantity of the fluid which had dripped out over the edge of the bottle after the cork had been removed.

The jurymen viewed the remains at Comstock's undertaking parlours after which they repaired to the Police Court Chamber where the evidence was heard.

The jury was made up as follows: J Maher, foreman, Messrs. J. Picard, T Meredith, G. Evans, F. Blasterah, M. Mayock and E. W. Moffat. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton appeared for the crown.

IDENTITY WAS ESTABLISHED

The first witness called was Detective Newhall who said that he had been in conversation with the deceased some days before her death and was informed by the latter that she had satisfied Mr. F. H. Dobbin of the Local Branch of the Patriotic Fund, that she was legally married to Pte. Thebeau and was on the list of those receiving money from the Fund.

She claimed to be the wife of Private Edward Thebeau, who a week ago, was officially reported wounded in France. Witness said that Thebeau himself had said that deceased was his wife, prior to his departure from Peterborough.

One of the jurymen was insistent that the identity of the deceased be established. There was some difference of opinion as to the correct name of the woman. Coroner Dr Green replied that the court was satisfied as to the woman's identity and that the purpose of the inquest was to establish how, when and where she came to her death.

SERGEANT REID'S EVIDENCE

Patrol Sergeant James Reid said he visited the house late Sunday night, armed with a warrant to raid the house. He knocked at the door and was admitted by Mrs. Thebeau. They found a member of the 93rd Battalion in the only bed that was occupied. He gave his name as Martin R. Quigley.

VICTORIA DAY.

We have been celebrating the Queen's birthday for four score years, less one, and we are at it yet. Human life ends, but character is eternal. The good Queen Victoria lives in her character to-day as really as she lived a score of years ago. She not only lives in memory, but she lives in the lives of her successors, who have, aside from her personal qualities, the official qualities that she stamped upon the responsibilities of sovereignty: She was the queen of the people; ruled in the interest of the people. Her sons have done the same, and are doing the same. The standard of sovereignty Queen Victoria established will be the standard of British monarchs for many reigns. When they cease to rule by this standard, when British government becomes untrue to this standard, the high place of Britain in the benign national influences of the world will become vacant. Not by physical might alone, not by physical power alone, but by moral might and power has Britain become the dominant influence for international good in the world; and in no reign of any monarch has this dominating moral force been so highly developed as in the reign and in the person and example of the Queen whose birthday we again commemorate to-morrow. For three-quarters of a century we prayed, God gave the Queen. That prayer has been literally heard. She has been saved to be an immanent benign influence in the moral and politic affairs of humanity.

ANXIOUS FOR PEACE.

We of the allied interests are anxious for peace; we are praying and fighting for peace; but we are not as anxious for peace as the German powers. Recently the United States Ambassador in Germany has been sending continuous messages to his government in regard to Germany's repeatedly expressed or hinted desires for peace. There is no doubt ground for the opinion that peace is becoming a matter of the greatest importance for Germany. We are not inclined to worry about what Germany wants; but are concerned over the fact that Germany, having precipitated the war, has had enough of it, and sees no way out of the trouble she has brought upon herself, except a premature peace and a cessation of the war. We all want peace; but we want it, and will have it, on our own terms. We shall only think of peace when we are in a position to dictate our own terms, and the least term we shall be satisfied with is the destruction of the military power of Germany to make trouble for the nations. There is little use for Germany to try to get peace on any other terms. The United States has no authority, except on abstract grounds, to ask for peace: she is not engaged in the war; she has no right, except on such ground to consider the terms of peace: that is a matter that concerns the warring nations alone. Germany's desire for peace is an encouragement to us; it is a sign of her exhaustion. To even obliquely moving for peace Germany abandons the high ambition, the great purpose she held in bringing on the war—"world dominion or downfall." She has failed in her passaging of world domination, and her downfall as a dictator of peace to Europe is at hand. We shall not cease to fight till that downfall becomes a fact. Then we shall consider peace terms—not before. If we do not do that we shall have lost all we have sacrificed in fighting for a permanent and assured peace—peace for ourselves and the world.

THRIFT AND MEAT.

When we consider the mounting scale of meat prices, we are confronted with the consideration of whether we shall not be forced to become vegetarians, and figuratively, if not literally, adopt the diet of Nebuchadnezzar. It looks as if "The Roast beef of old England," as applied to us in Canada, would become a mere memory. Beef stock is diminishing at a rapid rate. Official statistics tell us that in the years from 1910 to 1914, the decrease in the number of beef cattle has been nearly a million head. There were 992,263 fewer cattle in Canada in 1914 than in 1910. The logic of this condition suggests two things—produce more cattle or eat less beef. The former is a problem for the farmers to solve. With prices as they are, it seems to be true that beef production would be a profitable branch of farming. As to the other necessity that is being forced upon the people, we must school ourselves to eat more field and garden produce, and more fruit, and become more thrifty in the employment of the meat we buy. We must cease doing as many do, throwing the remains of the roast of beef into the garbage tin. We must make every ounce of it count, as may be done by making other palatable dishes of it. Do we Canadians eat too much meat? Official figures inform us that Canadians every year consume 136 3-4 lbs. of meat per head equal to six ounces of meat for every man, woman and child, every day in the year. If we ate less meat we should have more for export, and more money would come into the country; we should be practicing the highest form of economy—national thrift. It is something to Canada how much of the six ounces per head we use every day is actually consumed and how much wasted—that is, how much red meat, bone fat and gristle that could be tastily worked over, is thrown into the garbage tin. It is asserted that fully ten per cent. of the food prepared in hotels and restaurants is thrown—almost literally—to the dogs. It is a safe venture do say that with the French system of cooking—utilizing every scrap of what we treat as waste—a population equal to that of Canada could be fed upon the meats we wickedly allow to go to waste. It is both excellent thrift and Scriptural in spirit—"gather up the fragments that none may be lost" — to economize not only in the consumption of meats, but in the utilization of broken meats. We have seen how much money we can make by gathering and saving papers and rags. There is more money to be made—saved—by dealing thriftily and economically with the meat items of our table menus.

AN UNCONQUERABLE ALLIANCE

We are all convinced of the fact that in this war the British navy has been the controlling, the deciding factor in staying the onrush of Germany; holding her powerless to make progress. And it needs little argument to show that when peace comes the British navy will be a persistent force in preserving the great interests we have all been so strenuously striving to protect and promote. Hon. Mr. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, has, in disregard of long-time tradition, been talking to the newspapers. He has recently given an "interview" to the editor of a United States magazine, and has this to say, among other things, of what "freedom of the seas" means:

"But surely, even now, it is fairly clear that if substantial progress is to be made towards securing the peace of the world, and a free development of its constituent nations, the United States of America, and Great and Greater Britain should explicitly recognise what all instinctively know: that on these great subjects they share a common ideal."

In this, whether he intended it or not, Mr. Balfour shows that if the United States wants to be on the winning side of the forces of human freedom and all they stand for, they must range themselves in the ranks of the rest of the English-speaking world, and strive for, and share, all that it stands for. Sea power must be the dominating force of the world, and with Britain's magnificent preparedness with the possibilities of development of sea power in her outlying dominions, and with the tremendous possibility of the development of sea power by the United States, a union of force unconquerable in the interests of humanity and the highest interests of civilization need not be regarded as a dream. Thinking statesmen of the United States, thinking statesmen in Britain and in her overseas dominions must see and approve the possibilities of a union of interests and forces that will be dominating power for peace in the world. The English language, not on account of its intrinsic qualities, but on account of the ideals and realities it represents, is bound to become pre-eminent in the world, and an alliance amongst English-speaking nations will deepen conditions that involve and assure the good and welfare of the whole world. There is powerful racial and constitutional affinity between Great Britain and the United States, and in the highest interests of what both countries stand for—a closer alliance, especially in the matter of sea power, is a consummation not only possible, but desirable, if both are to fully realize the influence they can and should exercise, upon the good of the world.

THE FURTHER OUTREACH OF THE LIBERAL MOVEMENT

From the point of view of the practical politician, whose eye is ever on the fleshpots of office, Mr. N. W. Rowell is an enigma. The Liberal leader seems to regard it as his duty not to oppose, obstruct, and thwart the Government with the object of inducing electors to think Liberal rule would be an improvement on Conservative, but to earn public sympathy and support by doing everything possible to secure the adoption of constructive and ameliorating legislation.

Speaking before the Women's Liberal Association, he deprecated the idea that the removal of the prohibition issue from the party arena in Ontario was a matter calling for expressions of sympathy and condolence. Its retention might have aided the party fortunes — although as to that Mr. Rowell expressed no opinion —but its removal cleared the decks for a great advanced movement in the cause of social reform in the Province. With a forward-ranging glance the Liberal leader indicates the problems that await solution. A better distribution of wealth, the safeguarding of life and health in the home and the workshop, the guaranteeing of old age against the pinch of penury, the transformation of the educational system so that the children of Ontario will come to love the open air and country life, and their elders will gain a new view of the value of agriculture and its influence on the life of the nation — these are the things that seem more important to Mr. Rowell than party triumphs or personal aggrandizement.

It was not of superficial things that he spoke to the Women's Liberal Association. The home is founded in love, but its security and, in no small degree, the happiness of those within it depend upon the earning capacity of the husband and father. A heart-breaking and lifelong struggle to keep one's head above water financially may not quench love and destroy the home, but it makes the position of the home-builder far less happy than it would otherwise be. The unequal distribution of wealth is a great problem bristling with difficulties, as Mr. Rowell and all thoughtful students of economics admit, but wherever the Legislature can give direction to changes in industrial and social conditions it is clearly the duty of members to do so, remembering the amazing facts brought out by the Committee on Industrial Relations of the United States Congress that two per cent. of the people of the United States own sixty per cent. of the wealth, thirty-thre per cent. own thirty-five per cent.; and sixty-five per cent. of the population own but five per cent. of the nation's wealth.

Put in that form, the problem cannot be ignored. But Mr. Rowell shows the relation of this problem of the distribution of wealth to the life of the home by a far more startling illustration. A special inquiry conducted in the city of Johnstown, Pa., proved that babies whose fathers earn less than $10 per week, die during their first year in the appalling proportion of two hundred and fifty-six per thousand, while in the case of babies whose fathers earn $25 or more per week the deaths during the first year number only eighty-four per thousand. Ignorance has doubtless much to do with this result, but poverty also bulks largely in bringing it about. There are in Toronto and other urban centres of Ontario to-day thousands of families in which pure and adequate food for the baby is a financial problem.

There may not be much glory in it for the political leader who declares that every child should receive a fair chance to make the best of life's opportunities and that every toiler should be protected from want during sickness, unemployment, and old age, but that Commonwealth is on the forward way whose leaders ponder over problems of social reform with a view to their solution rather than to their use as stepping-stones to office.—The Globe.

ORPET TO WED IF FREED.

Sweetheart Visits Youth in Cell and Pledges Love.

CHICAGO, aMy 23.—Miss Celeste Youker, of Maywood, will marry Will Orpet, if he is acquitted of the murder of Marian Lambert at his trial in Waukegan.

The University of Wisconsin undergraduate has had this assurance from the lips of the young woman for whose love he cast aside the pretty Lake Forest High school girl, who died at his feet from cyanide of potassium in Hehn's Woods last February.

Once during the trial Saturday young Orpet, as he sat between his father and mother at his lawyer's table, drew from his pocket furtively a letter, from Miss Youker. One is delivered at the jail every day.

Miss Youker's visit to her sweetheart had been kept secret. It occured Tuesday evening, but news of it only leaked out yesterday.

Sheriff Griffin escorted her to the cell tier. She slipped quickly to the bars and stood waiting in silence. The sheriff called Orpet. He lounged forward to see what was wanted, when his eyes fell upon the silent figure in the corridor. He had not seen Miss Youker since last Christmas.

"Celeste!" he cried, rushing toward her with open arms.

Despite the iron bars, they embraced and kissed each other as happily as if no tragedy ever had cast its shadow over their romance.

WAR RIGORS RELAX FOR QUEEN'S PARIS GOWNS.

PARIS, May 20.—One hundred and twelve cases of gowns, hats and perfumes for the Queen of Rumania known as "the most beautiful Princess in the world," have been allowed to cross by Austria, as the result of the new Austro-Roumanian agreement for the exchange of merchandise.

The Austrians held up the Queen's "vanity train" because it would facilitate French commerce. The Queen's demand for her gowns is said to have influenced the negotiations.

A Good Buy For the City

The Hilliard Property Has Proved a Splendid Investment

Owing to several typographical inaccuracies which appeared in the following on Saturday, it has been re-printed in a corrected form to-day:

Many of our citizens who were at the time concerned about the wisdom of the purchase of the Hilliard property by the city some years ago will be interested in learning that the transaction has proved to be one of the best paying investments the city ever made.

In a recent interview with a member of the City Trust Commissioners it was learned that the property has already paid for itself in the road metal, gravel, and sand which it has yielded for streets and other purposes. There is yet as a further credit to the city, nearly sixty-three acres of land, which has become more valuable every year since its purchase.

The property has also furnished excellent sites, practically free, for three of our public institutions, viz., The House of Refuge, The Children's Shelter, and the Isolation Hospital. There still remains as a further asset to the city the Water Street frontage, half a mile in length, adjoining the river, within easy reach of water, drainage, and railways, and which will yet prove to become eligible sites. The City Trust is also in receipt of about $300 for rentals from certain portions of the property.

This property was purchased by the city for $10,000 about twelve years ago, as the result of a vote of the freeholders, and at a time when our City Fathers were more cautious than they are now. The principal credit for this investment belongs to Ex-Mayor H. Rush. He it was who fathered the investment, and was largely instrumental in having it carried through, and that too in the face of considerable opposition.

Mr. Rush, who was then a member of the City Council, and after wards Mayor of the city, had personally secured an option on the property from Mr. Hilliard for $10,000. He had been strongly impressed with the advantages that would accrue to the city from this property, looking at it from the viewpoint of one who had some knowledge of the needs of the city at the time.

Mr. Hilliard subsequently wrote to Mr. Rush, hoping the town would not accept his offer; but Mr. Rush's advocacy of the scheme fortunately prevailed.

Throughout the whole negotiations Mr. Rush acted in a straightforward manner, and without any selfish regard for his own interests. He had been approached by one citizen with an offer of $2,000 for his option on the property, which he promptly declined — so anxious was he that the city should secure the benefits he felt sure was in the deal. At another time a property owner offered to put up $6,000 if Mr. Rush would put up $4,000 for the purpose of securing the property as an investment for themselves, but this also Mr. Rush refused to do.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is musty and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

CANNON PLANT FOR MUNICH

BERLIN, May 20.—The tract of land near Munich purchased recently by the Krupps will be used as the site for a cannon factory. The guns manufactured at this plant will be supplied to Germany's allies.

The amount of ground purchased is nearly 700 acres. The municipality of Munich, in connection with a syndicate of banks, has taken up an adjoining tract of the same size, on which industrial establishments will be located. Both ventures are connected with the plan of the Bavarian Government to erect a great electrical plant at Walchensee, in the Bavarian mountains.

This plant will supply electrical power for the Krupp and other establishments.

Applying This Paste Actually Removes Hairs

(Beauty Notes)

Merely applying an inexpensive paste to a hairy surface, say beauty specialists, will dissolve the hairs. This paste is made by mixing a little water with some powdered delatone; after about 2 minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed. This simple method not only removes every trace of hair, but leaves the skin free from blemish. To insure success with this treatment, be careful to get real delatone.

A clever idea is to give an old window shade a fresher appearance by turning it upside down. Take out the roller and the stick at the lower end. Then cut off your upper edge in order to remove the tack holes and then sew the stick in. Then tack the other end to the roller, and when hung it will look like a new shade.

Balls for cleaning clothes may be made by taking some fuller's-earth and drying it till it crumbles to powder, then moistening with the juice of a lemon, and adding a small quantity of pear ash. Work and knead carefully together till it forms a thick paste. Make into balls and dry them in the sun. Moisten the spot on clothes with water, then rub with the ball, and wash the spot out with clean water.

The Aster

In many respects the aster is an ideal plant. It is of the easiest culture succeeding well in almost any soil and doing well under conditions which would work against the welfare of most annuals. It is a wonderfully profuse bloomer, and it has the merit of coming into full bloom late in the season after most annuals have passed their prime, and continuing until the coming of cold weather.

Indeed we often have it in excellent condition after heavy frosts have killed nearly every other plant in the garden. Its range of colors is so wide that all tastes can be suited, and there are so many more or less distinct types of it that it is often a difficult matter to make a choice among them, as all of them have special features which make them desirable for garden decoration and for cutting use.

The best all around variety is, in my opinion the "branching" type. The flowers of this class are charming in form and color and bear so close a resemblance to those of the chrysanthemum that they are often mistaken for them.

The flowers of the branching type are borne on long stalks, and are therefore better adapted for cut flower work than those of any other class, as they can be arranged more gracefully. The most desirable colors are the soft, pale pinks, the pure whites, and the delicate lavenders. The bright pinks, the crimsons, and the dark blues are fine for garden decorations, but they are not as satisfactory for use in the house.

The 'comet' aster has fluffy flowers something like those of the ragged Japanese chrysanthemum. The "ostrich feather" variety has flowers of great size, with long, loosely arranged petals, and flowers that have little regard for formality.

The 'coeardeau' or crown type, has flowers of medium size, double and borne in such profusion that each plant seems a bouquet in itself. The 'rose perfection' class is probably the finest of all for garden use, as its flowers are ideal in form and its range of colors includes all that are desirable. The 'king' aster has petals more or less quilled and will be prized by those who like flowers that are rather out of the ordinary.

Two new varieties are announced this season. One is the "enchantress" with large, double, wide petaled flowers, almost globular in shape, of the soft, pale pink color which characterizes the popular carnation of that name. The other is introduced as the 'royal' which closely resembles the late branching variety in form and color, but has the merit of coming into bloom much earlier in the season.

This plant should be given a soil of rather heavy loam, which has been enriched with a liberal quantity of bone-meal or some other good commercial fertiliser. It is a good plan to change their location yearly, also to make liberal applications of wood ashes or air slacked lime to the soil in which they are planted, as these have a tendency to prevent the attacks of a worm which sometimes does great injury by boring into the root immediately below the surface of the soil.

Sometimes they are attacked by the same black beetle which does so much harm to chrysanthemums. This is a most voracious creature, and it will do a vast amount of harm in a short time if not fought promptly.

Be on the lookout for it, and as soon as the first one is seen, spray the plants with an infusion of tobacco. Let it be strong, and apply it twice a day until the enemy is routed.

We have no flower that keeps better after cutting. If the water in which they are placed is changed daily and a bit of the stalks is clipped off each time a change is made, they will retain their freshness for two weeks.

For church decoration the aster stands at the head of the list.

It is important that this plant should go steadily ahead from start to finish. When flowers for cutting are desired set the plants not less than a foot apart in the row, with rows two feet apart. When wanted for garden decoration only they may be planted nine inches apart and the best effect will be secured by setting them in a mass.

For the whole of Canada the average value of farm land held for agricultural purposes, whether improved or unemproved, and including the value of dwelling-houses, farms, stables, and other farm buildings, is returned as $38.80 per head.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Mr. Miller Willing To Undertake Duties of Two Offices at $1,000

Would Combine Work of Relief Officer and Sanitary Inspector, According to Report of Sub.-Committee—Property Committee Decides to Wait Until Council Opens Up the Question.

Although a sub-committee of the Property Committee reported in favour of Mr. Finch W. Miller as successor to Sanitary Inspector Spence, the committee itself decided last night that it could not take any further steps in regard to the appointment until Mayor Duffus had called a meeting of the Council, which will likely be held on Thursday night, and empowered the Committee to deal with Mr. Spence's resignation.

Alderman Edgar stated that the sub-committee favoured Mr. Miller for the position at a salary of $1,000, the city to provide a girl for the office work, Mr. Miller to continue as Relief Officer, and provide out of his salary for the transportation incidental to the duties of the Sanitary Inspectorship. Mr. Miller had not formally applied for the position, but had expressed his willingness to undertake the dual duties if such was the Council's wish, and in the event of him not giving satisfaction that he continue as Relief Officer at the present salary

Alderman Edgar explained that the city was now paying Mr. Miller $700 a year as Relief Officer. Mr. Spence's salary as Sanitary Inspector is $900. The two offices are thus costing the city $1,600 a year. Owing to the fact that there are few requests for relief just now, Mr. Miller felt that he could perform the duties of the two offices providing he did not have to make the monthly collections in connection with the city's new scavenging service. Under the proposed arrangement his salary would be $1,000, a girl could be engaged for about $800 and telephone service would add another $50. Alderman Edgar estimated that the city would thus be able to save at least $370 a year.

Alderman Edgar suggested that the citizens concerned could pay the 15c monthly for the scavenging service by calling at the Inspector's office, but Alderman Langford felt that the sum was too small for such a monthly trip. Alderman Edgar replied that it could be paid with the light and water bills.

Alderman Saunders expressed the opinion that there would be a certain number of persons who would not call. He thought that giving Mr. Miller the two duties was placing too much work on his shoulders. The job was too much for Mr. Spence, who, the chairman said, was regarded as a good man. Mr. Miller might take a chance and try to do the entire work, but Alderman Saunders was dubious of the success of this plan.

Other applicants were mentioned, and Alderman Edgar remarked that the whole police force wanted it.

Alderman Duncan remarked that the committe had better wait until the Council had met and received Mr. Spence's resignation.

COATS FOR MOTOR WEAR ARE LEGION THIS SEASON

"I'm glad that Enrich liquid's green,
That saves the coat of gasoline;
"Twill go so well, said Blanche Marie,
With my new motor coat, you see."

NEW YORK, May 23.—A lady enveloped in an emerald-hued motor coat of duvetyn with an emerald satin jockey's cap and a floating length or two fo emerald chiffon veil isn't as green as she looks. She is decidedly smart, according to the latest thing in motor modes.

The coats for motor wear are legoin this season and the time is fortunately, long since past when the lovely motor maid had to disguise herself like a gargoyle in order to dress the part.

The duvetyn coats are, of course, the richest and it takes the richest to buy 'em. They come in wonderfully brilliant shades of rose, raspberry, emerald, ochre and saphire blue.

Flaring Models.

Either in the long, loose, flaring models or the belted-in effects they are very stunning indeed. They are becoming to all figures but they become yours only for several figures.

Other soft woollen materials that have the general effect of the duvetyn in a speeding motor as on a galloping horse make up equally stunning and less costly togs.

One of the gold colour is cut a la militaire, with capacious buttoned hip pockets and smaller buttoned breast pockets. It has a wide buttoned belt, raglan sleeves and a wide, rolling collar that can be worn open or turned up snug and close and tight, to fasten with a disk of jade the size of a silver dollar. This coat is lined throughout with the same shade of gold satin.

Hide Gay Interior.

Many of the coats, however, like many people, hide a gay and frivolous interior under a sedate and drab exterior. Slate coloured, plainly tailored coats, adorned solely with self-toned buttons are lined with exotic crepe and silks of ultra futuristic designs, as are most of the other tans and fawns.

Buttons galore you find on all of them and a Jenny model that is shown in serge, shepherd plaid wool, or natural pongee, is buttoned straight down the front from the top of the choker collar or the bottom of the hem, and shows further button symptoms on the deep cuffs, big slash hip pockets and the belt which only confines the front, the back being left loose and flaring.

RECRUITING LESSON FOR LORD DERBY

Moving Pictures Show That It Takes Time to Make a Soldier

Among those who have seen the moving picture from "Britain Prepared," which is being presented at the Grand on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, is Lord Derby, who organized the registration scheme adopted by the British Government to regulate recruiting for the army. Lord Derby was much taken with the production, and he gave it his unqualified approval. The pictures show the work of training the men for modern warfare exactly as is now being waged on the continent of Europe in the various theatres of war, and impress upon the observer the necessity of training troops thoroughly and under actual war conditions before they are sent into the field. This was the chief point impressed upon Lord Derby from his first view of the pictures, and he valued them most from their educational value to the general public along this line.

"Everybody ought to see these pictures," said Lord Derby. "They offer a striking lesson upon the necessity of training men before they are sent to the theatre of war, and impress upon us the fact that it takes time to make a soldier."

For that reason he has argued that men ought not to hesitate about coming forward now to enlist, as they cannot hope to be called upon for active service until they have gone through a considerable period of training. The sooner they make themselves fit and learn the game the more ground the nation will have for its confidence in the outcome, whatever incidents event."

"Britain Prepared" shows the result of the appeal to the manhood of Great Britain in a way that must ever remain a source of pride to the British race throughout the Empire. It is a page of British history which, thanks to the moving picture camera, will be graphically and indelibly preserved for all time.

The sale of seats for the production of "Britain Prepared" opens at the Grand on Monday morning.

A New Seam Philosopher.—"Papa," said the hopeful youth, "can you tell me what is natural philosophy?" "Of course I can," said papa, proud and relieved to find that there was at last something he could tell his offspring. "Nature philosophy is the science of cause and reason. Now, for instance, you see the steam coming out of the spout of the kettle, but you don't know why or for what reason it does so, and——" "Oh, but I do papa," chirped the hope of the household. "The reason the steam comes out of the kettle is so that mamma may open your letters without you knowing it."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

How They Work

VICTORIA, B.C.

For several years I have been troubled with Kidney and Bladder Trouble caused by uric acid and the pains caused by the intermittent stoppage of urine was very severe. For this I was taking something or other continually with but little or no relief. At last a friend handed me a sample package of your Gin Pills. The contents of this sample gave me relief that I had not experienced in a long time. Since then I have been taking Gin Pills occasionally and have had no return of my former trouble. (Name on request).

The above letter is from a popular and well-known commercial man in Victoria.

Gin Pills are 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 at all druggists. Sample sent free if requested.

The Standing in the Next Quebec Legislature

MONTREAL, May 23.—The standing in next Quebec Legislature will be 74 Liberals and 7 Conservatives.

Many home sewers when stitching the hem of a sheet or towel on the machine tie the threads at the ends. A better way is to turn the material and stitch back an inch; in this way a neat finish is made and there is no danger of ripping.

There is no end of things that alcohol is good for. It should be kept in the house. It is excellent to rub on the head for headache, and it is an excellent tonic to rub on the skin if you are tired. It will almost always remove medicine stains.

Fall Wheat Is In Good Shape

Information Concerning Agricultural Conditions Prepared by the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture

The following information concerning agricultural conditions in this Province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon information furnished by a large staff of correspondents under date of May 15th:

Fall Wheat: This crop so far promises excellent returns, except where affected by frequent spring rains on low spots or on trailed land. Some correspondents mention a comparative lack of sunshine so far this season, which, with the prevailing cool weather, has retarded growth; but the general tone of the reports is more or less cheerful, as less fall wheat land than usual will be ploughed up or re-sown. There also have been fewer complaints of injury from insect pests.

Clover: Hay and clover, judging from the present outlook, should be one of the best crops for years. The fields, especially those of last year's seeding, came through the winter in fine form, and there was but little heaving or other injury from spring frosts. As in the case of fall wheat, a small portion of the crop, owing to the very wet spring has been drowned out on low-lying places where the fields were not well drained.

Alfalfa: Alfalfa looks more uneven than clover at present, not having wintered so well as the sister crop. However, there are some reports of splendid fields, and an average general yield is looked for.

Vegetation: The cold, backward spring weather has delayed vegetation fully a week later than usual for the middle of May, and about a fortnight later than for the same period of last year. Pastures were farthest on relatively than orchard leaf or blossom. Some live stock had been turned on to the grass, but many cattle were yet in the stable. With warm weather a rush of growth is anticipated, as the ground has been thoroughly saturated by frequent spring rains.

Spring Sowing: Reporting on conditions existing on the 15th of May it may be said that not half the expected area of spring grain seeding had yet been done. While a few fortunate individuals on high, light or well-drained soils had finished the job, many had not been able to even get on the land, and were anxiously waiting for a few days of continuous dry weather. The ground, particularly heavy clays, suffered from the very wet summer of the preceding year, as well as from the rains of the present season, and its condition was variously described by correspondents as 'soggy,' 'sticky,' 'tough' and 'sad'.

HAD WEAK HEART HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Jim Larkin Pounces Upon British Irishman

Leaps From Stage of Chicago Theatre and Tackles One Who Speaks Out.

CHICAGO, May 23.—James Larkin, the Irish labour leader and founder of the Irish "citizen army" who has been living in Chicago for some time, leaped from the stage of a downtown theatre, cleared a brass railing and landed in the orchestra pit Sunday and attacked Matthew Thomas Newman, at a mass meeting called to protest against the execution of James Connolly and thirteen other Irish revolutionists.

Dr. K. A. Zurawski, of the Polish Federation was speaking. Larkin, billed to speak later, sat near. When Zurawski said: "The English certainly murdered the Irish in true Russian fashion," Newman, who sat near the front shouted, "I am as good an Irishman as there is here to-day. I have lived in Ireland and my mother came from a long line of Ireland's best; but such ballyrot makes me ill. I say, why do you try to put over such ridiculous drivel?"

Mr. Newman's further remarks were smothered by the flying tackle of Mr. Larkin, who hustled Newman out into the lobby.

I'll be glad when early vegetables begin to come in," declared the country editor. "They will be a welcome change." "You bet. Especially to a man who has been subsisting mainly on contributions of wedding cake all winter."—Louisville Courier-Journal

THE BIGGEST GARAGE IN CANADA

21,000 Square Feet of Flo or Space Leased by Charley Banks

Peterborough can claim to have the biggest garage in Canada. Mr. C. B Banks of the Banks Garage, has leased for a term of years, for use during the months of April, May, June, July August, September, October and November, of the Peterborough Curling Club building, in the rear of his present show-rooms. This gives the Banks Garage the largest covered Garage in Canada, the floor space being over 21,000 square feet. On account of the large space, it is possible to make a complete turn with a car without the necessity of backing. The lighting is of the best, both day and night. Entrance to the Garage is through the present show rooms

Included in the equipment is a large pit, 14 feet long, 3 feet wide and 5 feet deep, which makes it possible to make any repairs in the shortest time possible.

Storage for cars can be secured for 50 cents a day, and visitors to the celebration on May 24th are cordially invited to make use of the Banks Garage. 2d

JAPAN PROFITS BY WAR

Twenty Million Dollars Monthly Put Into New Industries.

Washington, May 19.—Japan's industries are receiving a powerful stimulus from the war. Consular advices reporting this to the Department of Commerce to-day said industrial investments during the first of the present year had been heavier than at any time since the industrial revival of 1906. New investments largely are for iron works shipbuilding, paper milling, dye and drug manufacture and other chemical industries.

Business slumped in Japan for a time after the war began and, according to the consular reports, investments in business enterprises began to increase only last October. Since that time more than $20,00,000 monthly has been put into business extension and new enterprises.

Prohibition by the British Government of importation of luxuries is said to have hurt certain lines of manufacturing in Japan.

"TO MEET THE TREACHEROUS FOE"

Good luck to you men of the 93rd,
Who have answered the country's call;
You have promised by actions, very well spent,
To ne'er let the old flag fall.
Your faces, familiar to each passer-by
Portrayed eagerness, long, long ago;
Now comes the chance, you've waited for long,
To meet the treacherous foe.

Not many months will elapse ere we know
You have crossed the ocean deep,
And many of you will shout "Hip Hurrah!"
When at the "old homestead" you peek.
For many a mother is waiting to see
The son she missed long ago.
She is proud that her boy is in khaki now,
Ready to meet the treacherous foe.

To the sons of this, the land of your birth,
A welcome is awaiting each one,
For England herself never lacks to praise
"The Canadian's Duty Done."
You've "Langemarke," "St. Julien," and "Festubert"
To create the vim and the go,
To extend a welcome with shot and shell,
When you meet the treacherous foe.

But don't forget your wives at home,
And you lads your sweethearts true,
For a moment will never pass in the day
But what they will think of you.
And the children, the babes you claim your own,
When they kiss you "Good-bye," you know,
Spur on the instinct, that made you dare
To meet such a treacherous foe.

You'll give credit to some who are working
All night, and sometimes all the day,
To turn out munitions, shot and shell,
For those now in the fray.
And the boys and girls need some of your praise
When they work their systems so low,
Helping to fit you with khaki cloth,
To meet a treacherous foe.

Your city's behind you in every way,
The individuals a unit so strong.
That his only wish, and her wish too,
Is to help "The Ninety-Third" along.
Good luck to you men of the 93rd,
Who have answered the Empire's call;
You have promised, "every soul be true!"

TOY MANUFACTURER SAYS CANADIANS WERE PASSED BY

"A Toronto manufacturer," says The Financial Post, "who makes as many shells in a week as anybody else and who can sell goods or borrow money in several of the capitals of the world, made the following rather remarkable statement to The Post this week:

"'I am a Tory, but I sincerely believe that those who were responsible for the letting of munition contracts in this country deliberately passed by Canadian manufacturers and dealt with Americans for one single reason, namely that the boodle or profit or commission or whatever you may call it would so pass beyond the jurisdiction of the people of Canada. And furthermore, I believe that John Wesley Allison only figured in the business to hold the basket for others.'

"The facts of the investigation at Ottawa are being obscured from the public by the quibbling of clever lawyers and the political bias of newspaper reporters. But a statement such as that above given from a man who would naturally side with the Government and who is in a position to know is significant. The present knowledge of unprejudiced manufacturers will be the knowledge of the people of Canada to-morrow."

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

The best substance for blacking coloured shoes is cobbler's finishing ink. A pennyworth will be sufficient to blacken a couple of pairs. Two coats should be given, the first being allowed to dry before the second is put on.

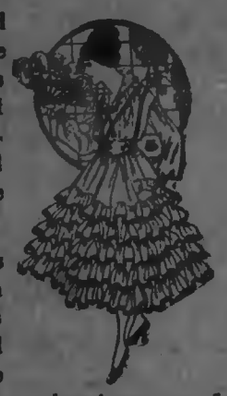
Captivating Array Of Wash Materials at Cressman Store



THE NEW WASH MATERIALS are indeed beyond compare and far superior to the designs of former seasons. The designers must have stumbled upon some fresh source of inspiration. The exquisiteness of shade and elegance of the flimsy airy textures and winsome floral effects will roll away the fastidiousness of the most exacting shopper.

Now, if you are interested in Wash Goods as we suppose you are "every woman is at this season of the year" why a phenomenal array of materials await you. White and colored grounds, floral and striped patterns, fine Voiles with cunning little French knots worked into the material. The comprehensive range of textures is only exceeded by the almost innumerable patterns.

Quigley appeared to be half asleep. He was awakened and questioned as to his identity. The warrant was then read to Mrs. Thebeau, charging her with keeping a disorderly house. The couple were then instructed to dress and prepare for the trip to the police station. The woman dressed in a room, adjoining that in which the soldier was sleeping. Sergeant Reid then left Sergeant Kidd in charge of Quigley and went downstairs with the woman. Deceased took a couple of drinks of water, then returned to the bedroom upstairs and spent about an hour dressing. She asked the police officer to leave the room so as to enable her to finish dressing.

SECOND TRIP WAS FATAL

Deceased again went downstairs, accompanied this time by witness and Police Constable John Desmard. It was after the woman had made the second trip to the toilet that Sergeant Reid first detected the odour of carbolic acid. Medical aid was summoned and first aid treatment applied. A jug of milk was obtained and the fluid forced down the woman's throat. Later Dr. Green and Dr. Amys arrived. The woman was dead within a few minutes after their arrival. A search was made and two bottles, one said to contain carbolic acid and the other strychnine, were found concealed in the left leg of her stocking. The bottles were located by Dr. Amys. They were produced in court. The only time the woman was out of the Constable's sight was the two occasions that she visited the toilet; about two minutes each time. The smell of carbolic was apparent after the second visit. Just before her death, Mrs. Thebeau waved her hand to Quigley and said—"Good bye Martin I'm off."

WAS ON THE LIST.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, executive officer for the local branch of the Patriotic Fund, was the next witness called, Mr. Dobbin said he knew Mrs. Thebeau to be on the list of names receiving money from the Fund. Witness received information to the effect that the deceased was not married to Pte. Thebeau. Mr. Dobbin called deceased into the office and told her that in order to continue as a beneficiary of the fund, she would have to produce a marriage certificate. She went out and produced the certificate in about fifteen minutes. The certificate showed that the marriage ceremony had been performed in Lakefield in 1913 and the minister officiating was the Rev. H. A. Ben Olied of that village. The witnesses were Capt. Bygott and Mrs. Ben Olied. Witness told of a child which Mrs. Thebeau had and which was the child of a girl who had been unfortunate a short time ago.

AN HONEST TRAIT.

The girl who was living in Detroit was about to be married. She sent for the child and agreed to care for it. Mrs. Thebeau surrendered the child and notified Mr. Dobbin of the occurrence. She said that the allowance should be lessened. This Mr. Dobbin referred to as "an honest trait". It was at first thought that the child belonged to Mrs. Thebeau.

The next witness called was Dr. C H. Amys. The latter related the circumstances connected with his summons to the home of Mrs. Thebeau during the early hours of Monday morning. When witness arrived the woman was lying on the floor in a semi-conscious condition. The stomach pump was used and restoratives applied. The woman died about ten minutes after the arrival of the witness.

FOUND TWO BOTTLES.

Dr. Amys found two bottles inside of the stocking of the left leg. The smaller bottle was labelled strychnine and the larger bottle contained a few drops of carbolic acid. Witness was under the impression that the woman took a quantity of both poisons. The mouth was burnt and the blood that come from the arm during the process of administering a hyperdermic was dark indicating that the woman had taken carbolic acid. The imprint of the bottle containing the carbolic acid was burned on the leg. This was caused by some of the fluid that had flowed over indicating that it had been used a short time before death. Dr. Amys tasted a portion of the powder in the bottle labelled "strychnine" and recognized it as the poison indicated by the label.

Patrol Sergeant A. Kidd corroborated the evidence given by Patrol Sergeant Reid.

Sergeant Kidd held the woman's mouth open while milk was poured down her throat. He also applied other means of first aid.

DRUGGIST'S TESTIMONY

Mr. W. J. McDermid, druggist, 321 George street gave testimony relating to the sale of carbolic acid and strychnine. Witness produced a record of the sale of the carbolic acid which was made on April 8th, 1915. The sale of the strychnine was recorded on February 25th, 1916. When purchasing the strychnine, deceased said it was to be used to destroy rats. Mr. McDermid remembered the woman asking how much it would take to kill a rat. "We turn down more strychnine sales than we make" said the witness. "We usually recommend something else. Ten and fifteen grain sales are common, clerks are never allowed to sell strychnine. They refer prospective customers to me" said the witness.

"Your duty is quite simple," said Coroner Dr. Greer in presenting the case to the jury. The latter, after being out for the best part of an hour, returned a verdict exonerating from blame all who had anything to do with the case.

She alleges that she was riding in an automobile with the defendant. Percy Lingard, when the car collided with a post about three miles west of Cobourg and with the other occupants of the car she was thrown into the ditch, with the result that she claims to have received permanent injuries.

City's Coal Supply of 130 Tons For Next Winter at Price of $7.50

Six Local Dealers Tendered at the Same Price But Contract Was Apportioned Among the Three That Did Not Get It Last Year.

$7.75 TO ISOLATION HOSPITAL

The Property Committee of the City Council recommended last night the following purchase of coal for next winter at $7.50 a ton with 25c extra for the haul to the Isolation Hospital:

R. Hicks & Co. Ltd.—50 tons to the Hospital, 28 tons to the City Buildings; total 53 tons.

Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Co.—50 tons to the Hospital, 23 tons to the City Buildings; total 73 tons.

A. Low & Co.—25 tons to the Police Station.

This makes a grand total of 130 tons.

Identical tenders, as to prices, were received from W. Scott & Co., J. E. A. Fitzgerald and H. B. Taylor and Son, but as the contract for last year's supply was divided among these three companies, and as all six had tendered this year, the committee decided to share up the business. The supply to the Isolation Hospital is 12 tons of nut coal and 48 tons of "egg." This year's current price of $7.50 is 50c higher than last year. It was stated that the city will be able to accommodate all the supply immediately, the current price being thereby effective.

Alderman Saunders presided at last night's meeting with Aldermen Duncan, Edgar, Evans and Langford present. The recommendation for the coal purchase was moved by Alderman Edgar, seconded by Alderman Evans.

Lieut. Who Insisted On Going Overseas Is Killed as Aviator

Lieut. Bateman One of Two Subalterns Whom Gen. Hughes Allowed Go With 39th Batt.

BELLEVILLE, May 23.—Lieut. George S. Bateman, reported killed in an aeroplane accident at Gosport, England, was a native of Springbrook, Rawdon Township, and was 22 years old. He was attached to the 39th Battalion in Belleville last spring. He was one of two subalterns who, when transferred to the 59th Battalion, boarded the train carrying the 39th, and begged to be allowed to go overseas as privates. Their case was brought before Gen. Hughes, who, after reprimanding the pair, attached them to the 39th on shipboard, allowing them to retain their rank. Late last December Bateman was transferred to the Flying Corps.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three of four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Big Bill At The Royal For the 24th

"England Expects"—Stirring Military Drama of 1915—Think of Your Country—Be Patriotic—"Enlist To-morrow" — Other Strong Attractions at the Royal

The stirring patriotic story of "England Expects" in three parts, will be put on at the Royal Theatre to-morrow as an extra attraction for the holiday. Mr. Pappas has selected this drama, as being appropriate for the occasion to help in stimulating new recruits to join the 39rd Battalion before leaving the city.

There is a splendid lesson in this drama, showing how the young men respond to the call to arms and become "Sons of the King."

Germany declares war on England and the news comes into one English home like an imperious bugle call. In this family are four generations — the great-grandfather, whose medals commemorate the occasion on which he saved the colours in the Crimean War; the grandfather, a veteran of the Boer War; the father, a prosperous business man, his brother, an unmarried volunteer officer, and the children of the business man. The two veterans have regretfully to admit they are too old for service at the present crisis, but the younger one is consoled by the fact that he has "two sons for the King." The volunteer officer rejoins his regiment and leaves for the front, but for the business man matters are not so simple. He has a wife and children to think of, and there are other good reasons for acting with deliberation. His wife sees his hesitation.

"You are thinking of me," she says; "you should only think of your country."

There is almost accusation in her attitude. Still the business man hesitates. Everywhere around him he hears stirring calls to action.

"Your Country Needs You," the posters shout. His own clerks shut their desks and hurry off to enlist. In his own home his grandfather is telling his children how he saved the colours, and teaching them how to lead their leaden soldiers against the wooden fortifications of the Germans. He feels that he must get away from the electric atmosphere, and he decides to vanish for a few days. He hastily packs a small bag, puts a cap in his pocket and prepares to set out but even yet he has no escape from the influences around him. He goes to his desk to get money for his immediate needs, and his hand disturbs a packet of old love letters from his wife. The very first one catches his eye: "I cannot tell you how proud I am to be marrying into a family that has served their country as has yours." He stiffens, and doubt comes to him. His hand mechanically falls on a book and he sees that it is "The Life of Nelson." He goes, torn by indecision, to take a last farewell of his children in their nursery.

"Will Papa save the colours, too?" he hears one of them naively asking. He can hold out no longer. He sees that there is no course open to him save one, and he looks up to his eager, expectant wife with a smile. "I enlist to-morrow," he says.

At the Royal to-morrow at 10 a.m. 1 p.m., and 6 p.m. Admission—Morning and afternoon only 10c. Evening 15c., which includes the war tax.

PRIVATE MUIR WAS ATTENDED BY THE KING'S PHYSICIAN

Returned Home Last Night With His Jaw Muscles Stiffened By Effects of a Head Wound

INJURED ON JAN. 26th

Private R. H. Muir of the 21st Battalion, wounded on January 22nd, arrived home yesterday afternoon and was received at the G.T.R. station by a number of his friends and a civic delegation composed of Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Stratton and Dobbin and City Clerk Armstrong. He was one of the first men of his battalion on the wounded list, having been shot in the head. As a result, the muscles of his jaw have been so affected that he is unable to chew solid food and can eat only with a spoon.

At his home, 210 Dublin street, Mrs Muir had prepared a festive meal for her husband, whom the war had taken from her nearly two years ago. While she had a general idea of her husband's injuries she was unaware of his inability to eat real food. Soups, custards and similar preparations compose Private Muir's present prandial limits.

In his hospital experience, Private Muir was attended by the King's physician, who advised that no further attempts be made to ameliorate the injury, from which there might be a gradual recovery by natural process. Private Muir received the best of treatment in a number of hospitals in both France and England. His disability is confined to the effects of his serious head wound.

Cows that produce large amounts of butter fat are good to contemplate, but it requires time, effort and persistence to get them, and in the getting a good many blanks will be drawn; but the prizes make the effort worth while.

Methodist Clergymen Warn Soldier-Parson About Smoking Habit

ST. THOMAS, May 24. — The St. Thomas district meeting of the London Methodist Conference was held here Saturday for the purpose of discussing the case of Lance-Corp. Elgood of the 91st Battalion, who resigned his pastorate at Munsey to fight for king and country, and since that time has joined his fellow soldiers in "a good smoke."

The minister-soldier was cautioned in regard to his newly-developed acquaintance with the weed by Rev. Mr. Willson of St. Thomas, chairman of the district, and reminded that in smoking he was going contrary to the teachings of the church, and that he was violating the vow he had taken when he became a probationer. Lance Corp. Elgood is now in his fourth year of probation. The matter was fully gone into. All the ministers of this district were present, the public and lay delegates being excluded. It was said Lance-Corp. Elgood agreed to respect the terms of the vow in future, and was recommended for probation. In all likelihood the matter will be taken up further when Mr. Elgood comes before the conference for final approval.

LOAN TO HELP REBUILD.

Campbellford Ratepayers Endorse Proposal by Very Large Majority.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 23.— The by-law authorizing the loan to the Northumberland Paper & Electric Company of this town of the sum of $30,000 to assist it in the rebuilding of its paper mills recently destroyed by fire, which was voted on to-day, was carried by a very large majority. The vote was the largest ever polled on a by-law here. There were only 46 votes against the proposal. The company is proceeding with the erection of a much larger plant than their former one.

The magnificent pictures taken by the Roy Studio on Friday of the 93rd Battalion will be on exhibition in Warne's to-night. The large picture of the whole battalion is five and a half feet long and every man can be easily picked out. Two magnificent pictures of A and B company of the Battalion will also be on exhibition.

"Britain's Girdle of the Globe, or the Empire of the Seven Seas," is the alluring title of a picture lecture to be given by Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, in the Armouries as part of the Victoria Day programme under the auspices of the 93rd Battalion.

Mr. Yeigh's panorama of the Empire, by means of a hundred stereopticon views, and the eloquent accompanying lecture, will ensure a treat for the crowd that will no doubt fill the Armouries in honour of Victoria Day. Silver collection to pay expense.

W. O. W. MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT

Splendid Address by Dr. Harrison, the Head Councillor Commander

A fine and very encouraging meeting was held last night in the Woodmen Hall.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of Clair Jarvis, head clerk, who was advertised to be here, Dr. Harrison, the head councillor of the order, came down from Toronto and gave a splendid address. He assured the members that W.O.W. policies are as good as gold, and also that the membership is steadily growing and financially sound. Lawyer Gordon then gave a bright instructive address, which was much appreciated, and matters of great importance were here discussed. Applications for membership were then received, and prospects locally are looking very bright.

MR. YEIGH'S LECTURE AT THE ARMOURIES

"The War in Picture and Story" Dealt With in Interesting Fashion by Well Known Lecturer.

WILL BE HERE TO-MORROW

A large proportion of the 93rd Battalion, and a number of citizens had a thoroughly enjoyable evening last night in the armouries when, in addition to several selections by the band, Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, gave his popular War Travelogue, entitled, "For King, Country and Empire," illustrated with a splendid set of coloured stereopticon views.

The first part of the evening was of magnificent Canadian scenes, covering New Ontario, the prairies and the Rocky Mountains to Prince Rupert. The lecturer then dealt with the part Canada is playing in the war, both here and overseas, with the naval and aerial fleets, the Red Cross and Y.M.C.A. work, and finally our troops at the front and on the actual battlefields. The patriotic enthusiasm of the audience was frequently aroused and as the striking panorama was unfolded.

Mr. Yeigh will repeat the lecture to-night in Lakefield for the benefit of the battalion fund, and will appear again in the armouries here on Wednesday night, with an entirely new set of slides and a new subject of "The British Empire in Picture and Story," when this and other features will make the final good-bye to the troops a memorable one.

BANQUET TO KNOX MEMBERS OF 93rd

The Ladies' Aid of Knox Church is arranging to tender an informal banquet to the members of the 93rd Battalion who have made their church home at Knox Church during the stay of the battalion in the city. The event will take place this evening from 6 to 8 o'clock in the lecture hall of the church. An invitation is also extended to the wives or parents, as the case may be, of the soldiers concerned to be present on this occasion. Will the soldiers referred to kindly look upon this announcement as their invitation and oblige Knox Church officials?

Where Rain Is a Boon

May of This Year is Similar to May of 1897

While rain in this section has been of almost daily occurrence, in some other sections of the Dominion, the need is great. The following is clipped from a New Brunswick newspaper, (Victoria Co., News, Perth, N.B) of last week.

Wednesday's night's rain came as a boon to the farmers, who have complained that this is one of the driest spring seasons on record."

A research of old weather records shows that May of this year is similar in some respects to May of 1897 (the year of the Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee), May of that year had 22 days of rain and a total for the month of 3.67 in this section. June also was unusually wet and cool. It was with difficulty that the farmers were enabled to get in their crops at all. While the seeding was late, the results ing harvest was a fair average, due largely to the more favourable weather conditions prevailing later.

The trees are somewhat later than usual in donning their summer apparel. Usually the maples are in full leaf several days before the "24th".

At this date they are little more than half-dressed. Other varieties show but slight effect as yet of the spring season. But as the most promising conditions in early spring sometimes fail to materialise in bountiful harvests, there is reason to trust that things are not as bad as they look and that the wise man will continue to hold optimistic views as to the future.

Empire Day Celebration

The annual celebration of Empire Day at the Peterborough Normal School was held this morning in the Assembly Hall of the school. The programme was patriotic and was very suitable for the occasion. The chair was occupied by the principal, Mr. Walker.

The principal features of the programme were as follows:

National Anthem; Song "for Canada—Miss Rutherford.

Essay—Miss Curran.

"It's only a small bit of bunting"—Chorus.

"England"—Miss Ralph.

Rule Britannia—Chorus

Address—Rev. Mr. Mackenzie.

The Land of the Maple—Chorus.

"Our Fathers"—Miss Pye.

National Hymn—Miss Eason.

O' Canada—Chorus.

The main feature of the celebration however, was an address by the Rev. Mr. Mackenzie. In the course of his address he appealed to the students to look forward with hope and consolation to the time when our banners will be united under the one great ensign of love. He showed that money and men were at the disposal of every British citizen to liberate him if his freedom was threatened. The programme was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

VERSES BY A YOUNG POETESS

To The Editor.

Dear Sir—Below you will find written a poem entitled "When I See My Dad." It is the first time I have written, because I am only fourteen years of age, but I have long had a feeling to write.

Just yesterday, afternoon, after being out for a short walk, I felt sick, and hurried home. There was no one at home, and I felt cold and dreary. A thought came to me! I said "I will sit down and write." I did so and this is what I wrote:

Oh! I am so lonesome!
Lonesome as can be;
My heart is yearning
For some one "dear."
And that some one is no boy;
But he is a man I love, so well;
And he is my dad!

When I see my dad;
Yes, he is my dad,
The man I love so well;
He is far away from me;
Oh, away across the sea!
Where the war is raging now;
Where the Huns are shooting hard
And where the Canucks, in return, shoot back.

And when the war ends;
Then I shall see my dad;
Oh, when shall the blessed time come?
God only knows.
Then my heart shall stop yearning
For the man I love
And I shall rejoice when I see my dad.

Some Canadian Prisoners To Be Exchanged By Germany

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 23.—Sir George Perley will be the chairman at the opening ceremony of the Massey-Harris Concalescent Home the 1st of July, when the Lord Mayor of London will declare the institution open.

The High Commissioner's office is watching Canadian interests respecting the transfer of sick prisoners from German prison camps to Switzerland. This arrangement will be made entirely according to physical conditions, but it is believed that there will be a fair share of Canadians recommended for transfer.

Gen. Lake's Force Reaches Kut On South Bank of The Tigris

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 23.—A despatch received from Lieut.-Gen. Sir Percy Lake, commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia, shows that the forces of Lieut.-Gen. Sir George Gorringe, operating on the south bank of the Tigris, have now virtually reached Kut-el-Amara, having cleared the country of Turks up to the junction of the Shatt-el-Hai River with the Tigris at Kut. On the north bank of the Tigris to the east of Kut-el-Amara, however, the Turks still occupy Sannayyat. An official communication issued last night concerning the operations in this region says:

"Gen. Lake reports on May 20 that the right or south bank of the Tigris is clear of the enemy as far as the Shatt-el-Hai, except for small rearguards covering the bridge over the Hai some 500 yards below its junction with the Tigris. Our main force on this bank has reached the line of Nagasis Dujailam.

"On the left, or north bank, the enemy is reported still occupying the Sannayyat position. The weather is intensely hot and trying. The temperature during the last few days was over 100 degrees in the shade."

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR CAPTIVES OF KUT

Most of the British Prisoners to be Confined on a Marmora Island.

LONDON, May 23.—The American Embassy at Constantinople, which has charge of British interests in Turkey during the war, sent word to-day of the disposition of the British forces captured by the Turks at Kut-el-Amara. This information is contained in the following official statement from the British press bureau:

"Ambassador Page states that the American Embassy at Constantinople has been informed by the Ottoman Government that Gen. Townsend (who was in command at Kut-el-Amara) and his staff will be brought to Constantinople and probably would be assigned to the Island of Prinkipo (in the Sea of Marmora) where they will be allowed full liberty. Most of the officers and men are still at Kut-el-Amara and Bagdad. Some will be sent to Damascus."

REBELS ESCAPED HIDDEN IN COFFINS

LONDON, May 23.—In the first excitement of the round-up by the military authorities of the participants in the Dublin uprisings, after the leaders began to surrender, a number of Sinn Feiners escaped in coffins, according to a report that has reached here through the Sinn Fein underground railroad." The escapes are said to have been facilitated by the momentary relaxation, in the tumult, of the usual rules concerning death and burial certificates.

The method was simple. The supposed corpse would be placed in a hearse and followed by a few friends to the burial ground. After the service at the grave the priest would be called away and engaged in conversation, thus giving the grave diggers an opportunity to surround the coffin and lift the 'corpse'. The released man was able to walk to a secluded end of the graveyard and thus to liberty.

France Pays Honour To Belgian Queen

PARIS, May 23.— President Poincare is making another visit to the Belgian front. The ceremony will take place at two o'clock in front of the Grand Stand.

WOMEN WANTED FOR MUNITION WORK

Henry Hope and Sons Feeling the Shortage of Men

In another column in this issue appears a somewhat unique advertisement from the Henry Hope and Sons' firm, asking for assistance from the patriotic women of the city in making munitions. The shortage of men is making itself felt to such an extent that the firm is of the confident that the women of Peterborough will have to come to the rescue. No previous experience is required for the work and men's wages will be paid. The women who are anxious to do their bit for the Empire are now offered an opportunity.

Free Gasoline for Thirty-three Hundred Miles--the Ford Owner's Saving in One Year

The light, economical Ford with its smooth running engine averages about twenty-five miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Compare this with the gasoline consumption of the Sixteen-Mile-to-the-Gallon car.

Then figure the difference, having an eye on the present price of gasoline.

Six thousand miles is a fair season's travel. The Sixteen-Miles-To-The-Gallon car, going six thousand miles, burns up one hundred and thirty-five more gallons than does the Ford going the same distance.

This means that the Ford owner saves enough during a single season to pay for his gasoline for an additional thirty-three hundred and seventy-five miles.

You can travel a year and a half in a Ford for what it costs you to travel one year in the Sixteen-Miles-To-The-Gallon car.

SWEDEN DISCOUNTS MARK 30 PER CENT.

STOCKHOLM, May 11 (Correspondence)—The American dollar has been steadily declining in value on the Scandinavian bourses and on May 10, the drop represented a loss of 12 per cent. more than half of which has occurred in the last two months. The normal value of the dollar in Stockholm and the other Scandinavian capitals is three kroner and 73 ore. It was quoted to-day on exchange at 3.23, whereas only 3.20 was paid at banks on American dollar drafts.

This condition is partly accounted for by the fact that the Germans have recently dumped a great quantity of American money and bills receivable on the Stockholm market. It is believed, however, that it is principally due to the falling off in American trade during the past six months, owing to the difficulty and danger in transferring money caused by the tightening of the British blockade. The seizure and holding up of mails is also a factor.

The English pound sterling has also declined. From the normal 18 kroner and 20 ore, it was quoted to-day at 15.42, while still less was paid on exchange, a loss of more than thirty per cent. They have dropped from a normal price of 20 kroner per hundred to 60.80. The Russian ruble and the Austrian crown are worth to-day about half their normal value and the French franc is 25 per cent. under par.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

The Virtue and Value of Sport in Regard To War Is Now Recognized

"The interest in all forms of sport, and the facility to take part in it, is the true basis on which the modern army has been built up."

With the above declaration from Reginald F. Healey as the text, "An Old Blue" has a most interesting contribution in a recent number of London Sporting Life, in the course of which he says:

One of the most striking features in connection with this awful war is the all-round acknowledgment of the virtues of sport. It is little short of amazing. Thoughtful men of all persuasions, many from most unexpected quarters, have unhesitatingly emphasized Mr. Healey's dictum—as above. Such testimony is the most surprising because, previously, not a few of these gentlemen were, if not antagonistic to sport, somewhat prejudiced as regards its moral advantages. Now, apparently, they have found salvation on this and other points germane, and do not scruple publicly to say so. One welcomes their co-operation, and hails with satisfaction their conversion Particularly, one rejoices that they no longer consider our national devotion to sport a national peril.

Very rightly, our modern army is dubbed a democratic one. It is composed of men of every walk or gallop of life. Soldiers of every type, patrician and plebeian alike, hobnob together on the best of terms and for the common weal. Our officers of course, are mainly recruited from the public schools, universities, and similar centres of learning, but privilege and caste are no longer the only passports to military preferment. The road to honour is open to all. And there is not the slightest doubt as to the success of our modern officers, despite Mr. Bernard Shaw's earlier sneer. Whatever faults there may have been in the conduct of the war, everybody is agreed that the British officer has done, and is doing, superbly well. This point cannot be too strongly emphasized, because in the main, they are the product of our public schools, with their devotion to sport and athletics.

Before the war, Mr. Edwin Pugh, the famous novelist, was inclined to quarrel with the saying about the playing-fields of Eton and the battle of Waterloo. So were countless others but now they are not so sure good things, as all proprietors were more than sympathetic and most of them really helpful. A gratifying thing to find was that there was plenty of employment for all. Lists and cards had been left in the several shops to be called for on Tuesday. The foremen agreed to appeal to the men, in line with the display card left, which said: "We will work and pay for the boys who fight." Two fine subscriptions were those of the Matthews-Blackwell Co., of $150.00, and the Wives' and Mothers' Club of $25.00. After hearing these announcements everybody felt better.

Chris. Graham, who is one good worker, announced $192.75, and cheers were given. Things were going off to a good start. And with only three men working. Very good, indeed.

Mr. Pennefather, of the Union Bank, self and two men, pulled out $126.25 in solid cash, and brazenly counted it in sight of all hands. So much wealth excited envy, to be dissipated when Mr. Dunsford, of the Bank of Commerce, calmly laid out in sight $215.19. Walter Stocker secured $91.25 during the afternoon, having to take the morning to dig up and annex a team of himself and three others. Mr. Gillespie, who tore himself away from business that followed him all over the city by telephone, working single handed secured $61.75. Mr. F. Whitehouse stated that he had been able to canvas only one street, Mark Street, assisted by Mr. Sedgwick, from end to end, and took in $55.55. Mr. Oke kept up his reputation in other ventures for the Patriotic and Belgium Funds and added $121.30 to the proceeds. Mr. J. Picard, who is esteemed a very good scout modestly claimed $137.00, and stated it was all in small subscriptions.

Scattered among the subscriptions were nice amounts, just mentioned here as a stimulant to others, of F. J. Might, $25.00; Lech and Sons, $15.00; W. G. Morrow, $25.00; Coleman Bros., $15.00; W. H. Hill $25.00; Bonner-Worth Co., $25.00; Bishop O'Brien $20.00; Mrs. J. Wood, $25. The total takings were $1082.94, a very fair beginning. Then the tabler began to hum with the mathematicians getting up their estimates. Taken by and large and lumping together what had been realised and promised and expected, they had the fund pretty well placed. So it will be quite respectable at any event. Tag day, celebration day, township grants, subscriptions and civic grant will all unite to swell the amount. The regiment will get its fund and the word of the city hold good.

Short addresses were given by several members, and it was decided to take a list of names, ring these up get them to come out and give a day's work on the teams, and the thing would be done.

Expressions of thanks to the ladies who had taken on the work of serving the lunch were given. The lunch is for the purpose of keeping the men together until returns are in and to promote the spirit of comradeship and helpfulness. Local caterers were so busy, what with a couple of weddings, preparations for the 24th and other engagements that none would undertake to handle the job. So a committee of ladies undertook and accomplished the detail in fine shape. Quite to the King's taste. A lunch worthy of the Chateau Frontenac, or Villa de Picard. Those of the ladies who gave assistance were Mrs. Alf. Lehane convenor, Mesdames W. B. Morris J. A. Sharpe, J. A. Aylmer, A. E. Coulthard, T. B. McGrath, Robert Harstone, Joseph White, and Misses Lillian Hurley, Helen Denison, Annie Simons, Nora Shevlin, Marjorie Hatton, and Margaret McGrath Lunch will be served this evening at the rooms.

Two or three cars would be very useful in reaching outlying points and if any would volunteer for duty appearance at the recruiting rooms Simcoe Street, would be sure of an appreciative welcome.

INVALID 30 YEARS, ENDS LIFE

BOTHWELL, Ont., May 23.—Richard Ralph, who has been an invalid for thirty years, put an end to his life at his home here by thrusting the muzzle of a 22-calibre rifle down his throat and pulling the trigger. The barrel of the gun was still in this position when the body was discovered and had to be pulled from the throat. For thirty years Ralph had lived with a broken back, resulting from a log rolling over him when he was in his teens.

FRANCE TO LEVY NEW TAXES.

Finance Minister Proposes Heavier Impost on Alcohol.

PARIS, May 20.—M. Ribot, the Finance Minister, presented to the Chamber of Deputies on 19 reassembling to-day a measure covering the credits for the third quarter of the year. The credits aggregate 8,310,000,000 francs.

The Finance Minister accompanies the measure with a statement showing a satisfactory condition of the Treasury and of the Bank of France and outlining the steps taken to remedy the exchange situation.

M. Ribot called attention also to the necessity of providing now, before the end of the war, for interest charges on new loans, and he proposed, to that end, increases in direct and indirect taxes that will increase the revenue 900,000,000 francs annually on alcohol, wine, beer, cider, sugar, and tobacco. The tax on alcohol is increased to 400 francs per hectolitre.

The Finance Minister added that the declarations of the revenues under the new income tax law totalled 2,-869,000,000 francs from 163,000 persons.

The measure submitted by M. Ribot would double the tax on horses, carriages, automobiles, billiard tables clubs, hunting preserves and mines. I would tax house dogs ten francs each and hunting dogs five francs each.

The measure also would increase from 6 to 8 per cent. the tax on unlisted foreign securities and increase from 25 to 40 francs per hundred kilos the customs duties on sugar.

Official statistics for the month of April show that France exported goods to the value of 33,300,000 francs more than for the same month last year. Its importations the amount was 10,700,000 francs more than for April, 1915.

LOCAL SECRETARY AT INTERMEDIATE Y.M.C.A. CONVENTION AT CLEVELAND

Interesting Reports of the Y.M.C.A. Work Among the Soldiers Featured Big Gathering Held Last Week.

MR. MESERVE THERE

The 30th International convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of North America was held at Cleveland, Ohio, May 12-16. General Secretary Meserve of the local Y.M.C.A. represented the Peterborough of the convention was the reception International committee is the legislative body of the Association and through this committee the several State committees and National Councils are co-ordinated. The extension work of the Y.M.C.A. as represented by its military, foreign, railroad, college work, etc., etc., is directly under the supervision of this committee.

The convention held at Cleveland was perhaps the most important Association gathering that has been held in recent years for the re-adjustment and enlargement of the policies of the Association have been found necessary to meet the ever widening scope of the movement. Various commissions that have been at work rendered their reports to the convention and much important legislation which was enacted was based on these reports.

The convention met in one large body at Gray's Armory for its morning and evening sessions and during the afternoon sectional conferences were held in the interests of various branches of Association work. Dr. John R. Mott appeared for the first time in his capacity of International General Secretary, succeeding Richard Morris who for 20 years has held this position. One of the pleasant features country like this, why not let them with Secretary Mott and Morris and the officials of the convention as guests of honour. Mr. Meserve was honoured by being selected to present the resolution providing for the reception mentioned which he did in a short address from the platform before the 4,000 delegates and friends gathered there.

Rev. George Adam of London, Eng., who presented work among the soldiers of Canada proved to be a most popular speaker and while the delegates had the inspiration of scores of other strong addresses it might be helpful for us to note some of the things Mr. Adam said. Mr. Adam described the flooded conditions of Salisbury Plains where the first contingent arrived. The roads to and from Salisbury soon became rivers of muddy water under the heavy traffic. One Canadian was heard to remark, "Why fight to prevent Germany taking a take it and drown?" Mr. Adam stated that the condition of the Canadian soldiers was one of privation if not actual suffering until well fare work of the Y.M.C.A. was started. He described the huts erected by the Association as being buildings 75 x 150 feet in size. The Canadian boys when off duty would fill the Y.M.C.A., but almost to the point of suffocation to enjoy the music and games provided and to attend the meetings and entertainments held. The little service rendered by the Association in providing stationery for the soldiers had been the means of many letters home and has prevented rivers of tears on the part of lonely mothers. One little incident related by Mr. Adam showed the Y.M.C.A. as doing a preventative work for the boys who are bound to undergo great temptations. He said, "One of the Association workers noted considerable amusement among two soldiers seated at a correspondence table. When the writer of the letter appeared at the counter to purchase a stamp the Association worker said, 'I hope that is a nice letter to your little girl in Canada.' The soldier flushed and immediately tore up the envelope and threw it into the fire. He said, "Secretary, that was not a letter to my little girl in Canada, although I have one there. My friend whom you saw with me at the correspondence table has just returned from leave of absence spent in London and I was just making a date with a woman with whom he spent a week, but Secretary, I am not going to make a date, I am going to be true to my little girl in Canada."

It was reported that as a result of Mr. Adam's visit to Canada and the meetings held by him, Major Birks of Montreal and our National Secretary, C. W. Bishop that a fund of $300,000 has been raised for the military work of our Association in Canada, in England and at the front. The International committee also voted to raise a special fund of $600,000 for work to be done in the prison camps and among the Russian, French and Indian troops which work is not covered in the Canadian movements. Every government represented in the war, with the exception of Turkey has given official sanction for Y.M.C.A. work to be conducted among soldiers.

The importance of the work done in prison camps can be noted by the description of these camps given by Dr. John R Mott at the closing session of the conference. He said that the prisoners in Berlin were confined inside wire enclosures surrounded by armed guards, also that machine guns were mounted in towers commanding a view of the whole camp. The Russian and British soldiers were walking in these enclosures "like caged animals and were actually giving way to insanity under these conditions. The Y.M.C.A. was admitted to these prison camps, and is permitted to erect buildings and provide entertainments as well as conduct a educational programme of physical, educational and religious work.

The work of the Y.M.C.A. among troops from India was well described by E. C. Carter, National Secretary to India. This work has not come to the attention of Canadians in the past as our work for our own soldiers has absorbed our attention, but the work done for the Indian soldiers is fully as great as being done for our Canadian boys. The National Council in England is caring for the soldiers recruited in the Motherland.

It was the concensus of opinion of the Canadian delegates, as they met in sectional conference, that in view of India's work in behalf of the Empire, the missionary funds raised by the Association in Canada should for the present at least be invested in India.

The Association movement is worthy of study by any person who is desirous of healing wounds in the world as large for the Y.M.C.A. can no longer be considered a society or even an Association, for it now looms up as the one large movement of the laymen of the world in behalf of their fellows.

Sacrifice was the key word of the conference and it was impressed upon the delegates that as Christ gave His life for the world, the consecrated Christian men must do likewise. Every phase of the Association work presented showed the rapid strides that the Association work is making. The main fact that impressed the Canadian delegates was the larger degree of consecration on the part of the business men, captains of industry (like John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who was present) and others, to the work of presenting Jesus Christ to the world as the one solution to its difficulties and the one balm for its sufferings.

TO CANADA.

(Verses suggested by the proposal to plant maple trees over the graves of Canadians who have fallen on the fields of battle.)

Oh, land of gold and snow and across the sea,
Through every changing season of thy year
War reaps her harvest of thy chivalry,
And claims her victims of thy loved and dear.

They lie at rest, and there still roars across
Their narrow graves the cannon's deafening boom,
Yet o'er those mounds already creeps the moss,
And with the soft warm rains fair flowers shall bloom.

With the long years to rise and pass away
Shall emblems of the land they loved be born.
In beauty burst, in fire shall end their day,
Each spring a glorious resurrection morn.
—Charlotte Pidgeon, in the Empire Review.

TO ——

(Killed in Action the First Week of Spring.)

What to us the dawn of Spring waking through the valleys—
All the woods a'stirring, let with daffodils—
Since he returns not . . . Ah! since he returns not
With April's glory fair across the hills?

What may it matter now, that the sweet birds sing so—
That the showers and sunshine on the meadows dance?
Ah! Spring, November, all our heart to welcome you
Lies far and broken in a grave in France.

With the splendid laughter—generous as the Spring-time—
Loth to blame—swift to praise—gayest of the gay—
So joyed to live . . . Ah! all our heart for loving you Follows him, Oh Spring forward—into deaths silent Way.
—Marjorie Wilson, in the Westminster Gazette.

Blinks—"Did you have anything in your garden this spring?" Jinks—"Oh, yes, several varieties." Blinks—"What, for instance?" Jenks—"Oh, Plymouth Rocks and Leghorns." Judge.

Scavenging By-law Must Be Observed

Property Committee Will Get Some of the Money of Those Who Fail to Comply With It

Ald. Saunders, as Chairman of the Property Committee, to whom the Sanitary Inspector is to a certain extent responsible, is determined that the new scavenging by-law which Mr Spence put into operation shall be fully observed by the people for whom it was planned as a convenience. The success of this work largely depends upon the co-operation of that section of the public whose homes are without sewer connections. The by-law makes certain in demand upon these residents and their fulfillment largely contributes to the contractor's successful work. The Property Committee is convinced that this bylaw will make for a better, and cleaner city, also that it is decidedly favourable to the citizens concerned, and for these reasons Ald. Saunders and his assistants are determined that the contractor shall have the co-operation the by-law calls for. It is unnecessary to go into the details here, but in a general way it may be said that the Committee stands behind the contractor in his demands that the provisions of the by-law be fulfilled. Those who fail to comply with them will be touched in the pocket, the surest and swiftest of corrective measures.

An Easy Way to Increase Weight

Good Advice For Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods, rubbing on useless "flesh creams" or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which consistently embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh builders. Sargol aims through regeneration, re-construction powers to make the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about the neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. All leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied as per the guarantee found in every package.

If you had a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 76 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you prepaid, in plain wrapper.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

One of the new plays recently put on in London failed to draw well. "I suppose," said the author, "it's on account of the war." "No," replied the manager, "I think it's on account of the piece."—Boston Trankcript.

In Knox church vestry this morning at 6.30 Miss Genevieve Gibbs, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gibbs, London street, and Mr. Alexander Lyons, only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lyons, Park street, were united in marriage by the Rev. Mr. McKenzie. They were attended by Miss Hazel Shannon, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Harold Gibbs, brother of the bride.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the young couple motored to the bride's home, where breakfast was served by Hooper's. Mr. and Mrs. Lyons left on the 8.10 train for Toronto and New York.

Numerous friends will extend congratulations and best wishes.

OBITUARY

C. B. MURPHY.

The death occurred last evening of Carmel B. Murphy, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Murphy of Ennismore.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock to St. Martin's Cemetery, Ennismore.

JOSEPH HUTCHINSON.

One of the pioneer residents of Peterborough passed away a few minutes after 12 o'clock Sunday night, at the Ross Memorial Hospital, in the person of Joseph Hutchinson. Sixty-nine years and four months ago the deceased was born in the now City of Peterborough, where he resided until about 24 years of age, when he started out in business for himself, taking up the calling of a tiller of the soil. He settled on a farm near Downeyville, where he remained for a few years, afterwards moving to what is called the homestead on Lot 24, in the 9th Concession of Ops. About a month ago he took ill and a week ago was removed to the Ross Hospital, where he could get the very best of medical attention.

The late Mr. Hutchinson was a Methodist in religion and attended Queen Street Church, Lindsay. He was a staunch Conservative, and also took an active interest in municipal affairs, at one time being a school trustee.

He is survived by the following sons and daughters: Robert and Burton Hutchinson, in Ops Township; Mrs. George Downey, of Reaboro, and William, on the homestead. One brother, George, resides in Peterborough, and another brother, Thomas, in the United States.

The funeral took place this afternoon from the family residence in Ops, at 2:30 o'clock, with service one hour earlier. Interment at Riverside cemetery.

New War Loan Asked For

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 23.—Premier Asquith this afternoon moved in the Commons a new war credit for one and a half billions, bringing the total appropriations since the beginning of the war to nearly twelve billion dollars.

In urging the passage of new credits the Prime Minister declared that without loans from England the Allies would be unable to continue their combined operations successfully. He said that England cannot hope at this time to even diminish her loans to her allies or to her Dominions, and declared it would be unwise to count on England's war expenditures falling below thirty-five millions a day.

The balance of the last vote of credit will be used up by June 2nd, the Prime Minister said. He estimated that the amount asked for to-day will meet expenses until the first week of August. Col. Winston Churchill, former First Lord of the Admiralty, in discussing the proposal for new war credits, told the Commons that it was unreasonable to expect the war to turn suddenly decisively in favour of the Allies. "The contending armies are too evenly matched, said Churchill.

Churchill in the Commons this afternoon urged that every available man be used in the prosecution of the war.

He said there were a quarter of a million allied officers' servants and grooms who should be on the firing line. Churchill declared Britain is not doing as much as she should do on land. From one to one and a half millions of British forces being kept at home, which he considered excessive by half a million.

WEATHERMAN SAYS RAIN HAS CLEARED ATMOSPHERE

Yesterday's rain has cleared the atmosphere, the weatherman stated and the probability is that Victoria Day will be warm and clear. The weather prophet would make no positive guarantee, however, that there would be fine holiday weather. Yesterday's heavy storm came from the west, and it was rather unusual that it was not accompanied by thunder, he said.

"The weather will be clear to-morrow," the official observer said late last night. "The rainfall has been two and a half inches thus far this month. That is about normal. The fall last May was below normal. The chances are that intending holiday picnickers will not be disappointed on Wednesday."

OWEN SOUND GIRLS HAVE DISAPPEARED

OWEN SOUND, May 23.—Great anxiety has been caused the relatives of Ella Wardell and Vivian McLean, two young girls under seventeen years of age, who on Monday morning left town and no information has been received as to their where abouts, though diligent search has been made for them. Representing to their parents that each was going to spend the night at the home of the other, they went to a station restaurant, where they took a room leaving on the 6.20 a.m. C.P.R. express on Monday. They purchased their tickets on the train, and left no trace as to their destination. The police have not been notified. Their departure was not made known for several days after they had left town.

Girl Finds Fiance Laid in Morgue After Five Months

WINDSOR, May 23.—The mystery surrounding the sudden disappearance of Robert Swann, 25 years old a young Scotchman, of Walkerville, who dropped from sight December 27 last year, almost on the eve of his marriage to Miss Isabel McKay, an estimable young woman, is believed to have been solved by the partial identification here to-night at the Janiese morgue of the body of a man taken from the Detroit River near Fighting Island, yesterday.

In company with her uncle, Robt. Leishman, superintendent of the Canadian Bridge Works, Walkerville, Miss McKay called at the morgue this evening and asked to be shown the body of the stranger. She had read of the finding of the body, and believed it might be that of her affianced husband.

The remains were in such a condition that close inspection was impossible, but Miss McKay was almost certain the body was that of the man she loved. The hair, teeth and clothing were similar to Swan's. A torn piece of newspaper found in one of the pockets told of the attempted suicide of a man in Windsor lock-up.

The story told to authorities by Miss McKay strengthens the theory of suicide, but no reason for the act yet appears. On the night of December 27, two days before he was to have been married, Swann, who was employed at the Dodge Bros. plant in Detroit, said good-bye to Miss McKay, saying he was going to attend a lodge meeting. An hour after he had left she received a telephone message from Swann saying he was despondent, could not marry her and had decided to end his life. The following day she received a letter in Swann's hand-writing telling her she would never see him again. The wedding ring and marriage license had been purchased, the bridal robes were ready and the bride-to-be, certain that her lover was only playing a joke on her, refused to believe the ominous warnings. Tonight after nearly five months agonizing suspense, Miss McKay is sure her lover is dead.

BULLET HIT HER CAMERA.

Queen of Belgium Has Narrow Escape from Death.

PARIS, May 22.—Queen Elizabeth of Belgium narrowly escaped being killed Friday, when she made a visit to the first line trenches, accompanied by Col. Roy re Blicquy.

Queen Elizabeth took a camera with her. She photographed a soldier and then placed the camera on the parapet of the trench, while she got the soldier's address, that she might send the finished picture to his family.

Just then a bullet from the German trench, less than 1,000 yards distant, shattered the camera. Her Majesty promised the soldier she would return and make another photograph of him.

Germans Have Again Taken the Ruins of Fort Douaumont

FRENCH EXPECT TO RETAKE IT IN COUNTER ATTACKS

Sir Roger Casement and His Confederate Are Indicted For High Treason

By the Grand Jury After a Brief Consideration of Evidence in Their Preliminary Hearing—Greatest Crime Against English Law

LONDON, May 25.—Sir Roger Casement and Daniel Bailey, his soldier confederate, were to-day indicted for high treason by the Grand Jury after a brief consideration of the evidence in their preliminary hearing.

In charging the Grand Jury, Lord Chief Justice Baron Reading, declared that high treason was the gravest crime against English law. He directed careful consideration of the testimony presented at the Bow Street Police Court hearing, connecting two conspirators with the Irish rebellion.

PARIS, May 25.—Germans have again captured the ruins of Fort Douaumont. The French expect to retake it in counter attacks to-day.

ROME, May 25.—Austrians have now penetrated Italy for a distance of eleven miles.

The Germans Admit Lack of Sufficient Food For Her People

Number of Cattle Fit For Butchering Very Small---Sweeping Powers Are Given the Dictator

BERLIN, May 25.—"The adequate nourishment of our population is fully assured, and will not me rendered doubtful by any blockade regulations of enemy States," says the semi-official North German Gazette in an announcement of the creation of a food dictatorship with sweeping powers.

"However, the short harvest of 1915, together with reduced imports, have resulted in a food scarcity in some directions which makes itself acutely felt, and efforts to better conditions have been hindered by the fact that each federal State has been able to make independent regulations. This will now be corrected by a centralization of power."

DICTATOR'S SWEEPING POWERS.

Probably never before have such sweeping powers been concentrated as are now granted Herr von Battocki, the new food dictator. Various counsellors will be assigned to him, representing agriculture, industry, trade, the military and consumers, and representatives of the federal States and of associations connected with the war also will aid him. Final decision on all questions, however, rests solely in Herr von Battocki's hands. The regulations of the Federal Council will not be affected by th appointment of the dictator, but in case of pressing necessity the dictator is even empowered to issue contrary regulations, but these must be immediately laid before the Federal Council for approval.

FIX PER CAPITA RATIONS.

The dictator will be able to expropriate all foods and fodder, any may even establish fixed per capita rations, if necessary. The only express limitation of the dictator's powers is contained in the provision that the new department's measures will take into consideration orders of the military commanders. The date in which the new order of things will become effective is to be announced shortly.

The surrender by the federal States of their prerogatives indicates a realization that existing conditions demand such surrender. Adequate breadstuffs are on hand, and it is even likely that the bread and flour ration for physical workers wil shortly be increased.

Enough potatoes also are available to carry the country through until the early crop is harvested, although it is possible that the allowance must be somewhat reduced. It cannot be denied, however, that Germany is likely to approach the condition of a vegetable Eden in the coming months.

DAILY WAR COST IS $15,000,000

Premier Asquith Asks For Another Vote of Credit of $1,500,000,000

LONDON, May 25.—In moving the vote of credit for £300,000,000 in the House of Commons to-day, Premier Asquith commented that this was the eleventh vote since the beginning of the war and the second for the current financial year. The total granted this year, he added was therefore £600,000,000, making a grand total of £2,282,000,000.

The Premier said that the expenditure of £241,000,000 between April 1 and May 20—a daily average of £1,930,000—was the highest rate reached by Great Britain in any such period during the war.

Mr. Asquith's estimate that the £300,000,000 asked would last until the middle of the first week of August was based on an estimated daily expenditure of £4,780,000, the lowest rate at which it was safe to place it. He said the balance still held from the last vote would keep the Government in funds until June 2.

In proposing the vote of credit Premier Asquith laid before the House of Commons an account in some detail of the Government's recent financial operations. He took up the period between April 1 and May 20, stating that the actual outlay during those fifty days was £241,000,0000.

Expenditures for the army, navy and for munitions in that time accounted for £140,000,000, loans to the allies and dominions for £74,500,000, and outlay for food supplies, railways and miscellaneous items for £78,500,000.

Eliminating the payments to the Bank of England in respect of advances abroad, for which allowances had been made in the previous votes, the daily average expenditure had been reduced to £4,600,000. There had been no increase, but a slight decrease, in expenditures for the fighting forces. The total outlay was somewhat larger, mainly on account of loans to allies and dominions.

Italians Faced By Two Tasks

They Have to Fight Upgrade Against the Austrian Forces

LONDON, May 24.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Milan says: "There are two facts which cannot be overlooked in judging the present situation in Southern Tyrol, and which ought to be borne in mind in order to understand and appreciate the very serious task of the Italians. The first is that in the portion of the front attacked the Austrians now occupy a line from which ground gradually descends to the Venetian plain and that constitutes a great advantage for them.

"This is contrary to what happened at Verdun to the French, who in retiring, were falling back on better and stronger positions. The Italians have now at their back only the lower and naturally weaker positions.

"The second fact, which every day makes more and more evident, is that the Austrians possess an overwhelming superiority in heavy artillery. There is, however, the comfort ing consideration that the Austrians in advancing lose the support of the bigger guns, which are placed on high mountains behind them, and it will take a long time to move them forward."

The immediate objective of the Austrian offensive in the Trentino like the German offensive at Verdun, consists of forestalling the enemy's offensive, thus gaining the so-called freedom of initiative.

Since the outbreak of the war the Italians have been facing a most difficult and strategic problem, which has been successfully solved. Despite the fact that the geographical position of the Trentino enabled the Austrians to invade Italy easily, while the bulk of the army was advancing against the Isonzo, still during the year the Austrians have been powerless to attempt an invasion owing to the precautions adopted by the Italians, who corrected the disadvantages of the frontier and averted the threatened invasion.

"If the Austrians were compelled to abandon the plan of invasion during the year it may be doubted that they will win success by the delay, since the Italian position has been considerably improved.

"Since the entire Italian army is available against the Austrians, the numerical superiority of the Italians is assured. Sufficient reserves are being held in readiness to resume the offensive along the entire front, hence the Austrian offensive is unlikely to be prolonged more than a month.

Bagpipes Much Better.—A genuine Highlander was one day looking at a print from a picture by one of the old masters, in which angels were represented blowing trumpets. He inquired if the angels played on trumpets, and being answered in the affirmative made the following pithy remark: "They maun be easily pleased wi' music! I wonder they dinna borrow a pair o' bagpipes!"

News was received last week of the death of Mr. Robert Alexander Strickland, eldest son of the late Col. Strickland, of Lakefield, which took place at the residence of his son-in-law, Rev. John Taylor, Marmondsworth Vicarage, West Drayton, England. He passed peacefully away on April 28th at the age of 86. Mr. Strickland was one of the early pioneers of Lakefield, and was much beloved by all who knew him. He removed with his family to England in 1886, and has resided at West Drayton ever since. He was laid to rest in Harmondsworth graveyard on his birthday, May 2nd.

I'll Do It—

The ability—to do things worth while is almost always limited to the fortunate combination of a well-balanced mind and body.

Food—right food, and right living play an indispensable part in the program.

Unfortunately the usual dietary consists of too many heavy, indigestible foods, often lacking the mineral elements, phosphate of potash, etc., which are absolutely essential for physical well-being.

Grape-Nuts

(Made in Canada)

is a food especially designed to correct these faults of the modern dietary. Made of whole wheat and barley, it contains all the nutriment of these grains, including the mineral salts stored by Nature in these cereals. Grape-Nuts combines readily with other food, and is a wonderful help in restoring and maintaining healthy balance of body, brain and nerves.

Thousands have found the "Road to Wellville" by cutting out improper foods and using Grape-Nuts as a daily ration. Ready to eat, nourishing, appetizing, economical.

"Golfer's Foot" New Rival Of The Housemaid's Knee

NEW YORK, May 12.—Somebody's always willing to dig and find out something about that which one likes most. For instance, there are those who discourage ice cream, beer, highballs, cocktails and so forth. But up to the time of the current issue of the Medical Record there were few who discouraged any particular line of sport beyond, perhaps, mentioning that a person might overtrain.

One needs a brand new breath to tell this. Dr. Charles Cross, of San Francisco, Cal., after millions of men and women have advocated golf as the healthiest of exercises, despite the fact that it may encourage a bit of fibbing now and again, has declared that he has discovered the golf foot. Here's an extract of the discovery:—

"Golfer's foot is a term I have applied to a very troublesome affliction which may occur to any golfer. It is an acute condition due to the distortion of the foot as a result of broken arch in the anterior metatarsal curved area." Understand?

The whole sum and substance of it is that in driving or making some shots properly, one—a right handed player for instance, may get too much weight on the toes of the left foot. But how many persons are there who drive properly or who use their footwork at all in golf except the good players?

"Some players," said Dr. Cross, "turn on the inside of the foot, resting the weight on the anterior portion on the fulcrum of the great toe. Players of this class are very likely to develop a large callus on the inner side of the great toe about opposite to the bed of the nail. This is especially liable to occur if shoes are a bit short or tight. The cause of the callus appears to be irritation put on the side of the toe, and the toe overriding the edge of the insole. Careful palpation on the inside of the shoe usually reveals the insole slightly prominent at the point of impact."

"Dr. Cross recommends that the greatest care be taken of one's feet.

WHAT BRITAIN IS DIONG.

London Express: France looks to England not only to keep a considerable portion of the fighting line filled with British troops, but she also looks to us for a hundred and one manufactured articles which must be supplied from this country by British hands. Russia looks to England for assistance in a dozen ways. Italy demands British ships, British gold and British manufactured goods. It is unnecessary here to elaborate our obligations to the Serbian army, consisting of a hundred thousand men, who have to be fed, supplied and paid. This also applies to the Belgian army. We have to pay our heavy portion for the Salonika enterprise, for East Africa, for Egypt, for Mesopotamia. Above all things, we have to control the seas. The British Fleet makes it possible for us, even in the face of heavy losses by submarines, not only to supply this country with necessary foodstuffs and raw materials, but also to keep the Russians, the Italians, the French, and the other Allied forces in constant touch with their bases of overseas supply. Of course, the French and Italian fleets are doing their part, but, on the whole, it is the British Fleet which dominates the seas.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms urio acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLMARS

The roof and walls were of heavy planking and were old. They were full of wicks as well as wood-knots, and the appearance of some of the former gave Code an idea. He went carefully over the boards, sticking his thumb-nail into them and lifting or pressing down as the shape of the nick warranted. For they resembled very much the depressions cut in sliding covers on match-boxes whereby such covers can be pushed in their grooves.

At any other time he would have considered this the occupation of a madman, but now it kept him occupied and held forth the faint gleam of hope by which he now lived.

Suddenly something happened. He was lying across his immovable co, fingering the boards low down in the right rear corner when he felt something give beneath his thumb. A flash of hope almost stifled him, and he lay quiet for a moment to regain command of himself. Then he put his thumb again in the niche and lifted up. With all his strength he lifted and, all at once, a pane, pushed up and stuck, revealing a little box perhaps a foot square that had been built back from the rear wall of the old storeroom.

That was all, except for the fact that something was in the box — a package done up in paper.

For a while he did not investigate the package, but devoted his attention to sounding the rest of the near by planks with the hope that the right give into a larger opening and furnish a means of egress. For half an hour he worked and then gave up. He had covered every inch of wall and every niche, and this was all.

At last he turned to the contents of the box that he had uncovered. Removing the package, he slid the cover down over the opening for fear that his guard, looking in a window, might become aware of what he had discovered. Then, sitting on the bed, he unwrapped the package.

It was a beautiful, clear mirror bound with silver nickel and fitted with screw attachments as though it were intended to be fastened to something.

At first this unusual discovery meant nothing whatever to him. Then, as he turned the object listlessly in his hands, his eyes fell upon three engraved letters, C.A.S., and a date, 1908.

Then he remembered.

When he was twenty years old his father had taught him the science o navigation, so that if anything happened Code might sail the old May Schofield.

Because of the fact that a position at sea was found by observing the heavenly bodies, Code had become interested in astronomy, and had learned to chart them on a sky map of his own.

The object in his hand was an artificial horizon, a mirror attached to the sextant which could be fixed at the exact angle of the horizon should the real horizon be obscured. This valuable instrument his father had given him on his twenty-first birthday because the old man had been vastly pleased with his interest in excellence of which he himself knew little or nothing.

Code remembered that, for a year or two, he had pursued this hobby of his with deep interest and considerable success, and that his great object in life had been to some day have a telescope of his own by which to learn more of the secrets of the heavens. But, after his father died, he had been forced to take up the active support of the family, and had let this passion die.

But how did it happen that the mirror was here?

He recalled that the rest of the paraphernalia had gone to the bottom with the May Schofield. It was true that he had not overhauled his equipment for some time, and that it had been in a drawer in the May's cabin, but that drawer had not been opened.

He pursued the train of thought no farther. His brain was tired and his head ached with the strain of the last five days. His last hope of escape had only resulted in his finding a forgotten mirror, and his despair shut out any other consideration. He had not even the fire to resent the fact that it was in Burns's possession and concealed.

It was his, he knew, and, without further thought of the threat in his pocket just as heard the men outside his little prison talking together excitedly.

"By George, she looks like a gunboat," said one. "I wonder what she wants?"

"Yes, there's her colours. You can see the sun shinin' on her brass guns forward."

"There, she's signallin'. I wonder what she wants?"

Code walked idly to his window and peered out, but could not see the vessel that the men were talking about.

"She wants us to heave to, boys," sun gout Nat suddenly. "Stand by to bring her up into the wind. Hard down with your wheel, John!"

As the schooner's head veered Code caught a glimpse of a schooner-rigged vessel half a mile away with uniformed men on her decks and two gleaming brass cannon forward. Then she passed out of vision.

"She's sending a cutter aboard," said one man.

CHAPTER XXIII.
Surprises.

Fifteen minutes later a small boat, rowed smartly by six sailors in white canvas, came alongside the 'midships ladder of the Nettie B. At a word from the officer the six oars rose as one virtically into the air, and the bowman staved off the cutter so that she brought up without a scratch.

A young man in dark blue sprang out of the stern-sheets upon the deck.

"Nettie B. of Freekirk Head?" he asked. "Captain Burns commanding?"

"Yes," said Nat, stepping forward. "I am Captain Burns. What do you want?"

"I came from the gunboat Albatross," said the officer, "and represent Captain Foraker. You have on board, have you not, a man named Code Schofield, also of Freekirk Head, under arrest for the murder of a man or men on the occasion of the sinking of his schooner?"

Nat scowled.

"Yes," he said. "I arrested him myself in St. Pierre, Miquelon. I am a constable in Freekirk Head."

"Just as we understood," remarked the officer blandly. "Captain Foraker desires me to thank you for your prompt and efficient work in this matter, though I can tell you on the side, Captain Burns, that the old man is rather put out that he didn't get the fellow himself. We chased up and down the Banks looking for him, but never got within sight of as much as his main truck sticking over the horizon.

"And the Petrel—that's our steamer, you know—well, sir, maybe he didn't make a fool of her. Payson, on the Petrel, is the ugliest man in the service, and when this fellow Schofield led him a chase of a hundred and fifty miles, and then got away among the Islands of Placentia Bay, they say Payson nearly had apoplexy. So your getting him ought to be quite a feather in your cap."

"I consider that I did my duty. But would you mind telling me what you have signaled me for?" Burns resented the gossip of this young whippersnapper of the service who seemed, despite his frankness, to have something of a patronizing air.

"Certainly. Captain Foraker desires me to tell you that he wished the prisoner transferred to the Albatross. We know that you are not provided with an absolutely secure place to keep the prisoner, and, as we are on our way to St. Andrews on another matter, the skipper thinks he might just as well take the fellow in and hand him over to the authorities."

"Well, I don't agree with your skipper," snapped Burns. "I got Schofield, and I'm going to deliver him. He's safe enough, don't you worry. When you go back you can tell Captain Foraker that Schofield is in perfectly good hands."

The pleasant, amiable manner of the subaltern underwent a quick change. He at once became the stern, businesslike representative of the government.

"I am sorry, Captain Burns, but I shall deliver no such message, and when I go back I shall have the criminal with me. Those are my orders, and I intend to carry them out." He turned to the six sailors setting quietly in the boat, their oars still in the air.

"Unship oars!" he commanded. The sweeps fell away, three on each side. "Squad on deck!" The men scrambled up the short ladder and lined up in two rows of three. At his belt each man carried a revolver and cutlasses swung at their sides.

"Now," requested the officer amiably, "will you please lead me to the prisoner?"

Nat's face darkened into a scowl of black rage, and he cursed under his breath. It was just his luck, he told himself, that when he was about to triumph, some of these government loafers should come along and take the credit out of his hands.

For a moment he thought of resistance. All his crew were on deck, drawn by curiosity. But he saw they were vastly impressed by the discipline of the visitors and by their decidedly warlike appearance. If he resisted there would be blood spilt, and he did not like the thought of that. He finally admitted to himself that the young officer was only carrying out orders, and orders that were absolutely just.

"Well, come along!" he snarled ungraciously, and started forward. The officer spoke a word of command, and the squad marched after him as he, in turn, followed Nat.

Of all this Code had been ignorant, for the conversation had taken place too far aft for him to hear. His first warning was when the sailors marched past the window and Nat reluctantly opened the door of the old storeroom.

"Officers are here to get you, Schofield," said the skipper of the Nettie B. "Come out."

Wonderingly, Code stepped into the sunlight and open air and saw the officer with his escort. With the resignation that he had summoned during his five days of imprisonment he accepted his fate.

"I am ready," he said. "Let's go as soon as possible."

"Captain Schofield," said the subaltern, "you are to be transferred, and I trust you will deem it advisable to go peaceably."

Catching sight of the six armed sailors, Code could not help grinning.

"There's no question about it," he said: "I will."

"Form cordon!" ordered the officer, and the sailors surrounded him — two before, two beside, and two behind. In this order they marched to the cutter.

Code was told to get in first and take a seat looking aft. He did so, and the officer dropped into the stern-sheets so as to face his prisoner. The sailors took their position, shipped their oars smartly, and the cutter was soon under way to the steamer.

Arrived at the accommodation ladder, and on deck, Code found a vessel with white decks, glistening brass work, and discipline that shamed naval authority. The subaltern, saluting, reported to the deck-officer that his mission had been completed, and the latter, after questioning Code, ordered that he be taken to confinement quarters.

These quarters, unlike the pen on the Nettie B., were below the deck, but were lighted by a porthole. The room was larger, had a comfortable bunk, a small table loaded with magazines, a chair, and a sanitary porcelain washstand. The luxury of the appointments was a revelation.

There was no question of his escaping from this room he very soon discovered.

The door was of heavy oak and locked on the outside. The walls were of solid, smooth timber, and the porthole was too small to admit the possibility of his escaping through it. The roof was formed of the deck planks.

He had hardly examined his surroundings when he heard a voice in sharp command on deck, and the running of feet, creaking of blocks, and straining of sheets as sail was got on the vessel. His room presently took an acute angle to starboard, and he realized that, with the fair gale on the quarter, they must be crowding her with canvas.

He could tell by the look of the water as it flew past his port that the remainder of the trip to St. Andrews would not take long. He knew the course there from his present position must be north, a little west, across the Bay of Fundy.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Words of Encouragement to Childless Women.

Motherhood is woman's natural destiny, but many women are denied the happiness of children simply because of some curable derangement.

Among the many triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its marvelous power to overcome such derangements, as evidenced by the following letter:—

Worcester, Mass.—"I suffered from female ills, and was advised to have an operation, but a friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound told me to try it. It has helped me so much that I am now well and have a baby boy who is the picture of health, and I thank the Vegetable Compound for my restoration to health." (Mrs.) Bertha Harvey, 39 Hacker St., Worcester, Mass.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice—it will be confidential.

ROSY CHEEKS

The Ambition of Every Woman —Pale People Read This

Hollow cheeks with dark lines, sallow complexion—how a woman hates them.

But rosy cheeks, clear skin, bright eyes—give them to a woman and she is happy.

In the blood is found the first sign of trouble.

It grows thin and watery, its color fades, and increasing pallor and sallowness give the outward evidence of the change within.

Soon the nerves weaken, the heart easily tires and palpitates, strength declines.

The delicate mechanism of the womanly functions is interfered with, and pleasures, activities and even duties are loaded down with the burden of declining health.

Why is it that women neglect the first warnings?

Usually she waits until she is ready to drop—often then it is too late.

These conditions are easily checked, easily cured at the beginning—but even when long established Ferrozone will remove the cause and cure the trouble.

Ferrozone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood—this gives good color.

By perfect assimilation, Ferrozone supplies nutrition—this gives strength vim and stability.

Elimination is assured because Ferrozone quickens the actions of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one that leads to health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance—not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. Try it yourself—sold everywhere in 50c boxes.

Forced To Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance

Astonishing Cure of This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 28 Waterloo street, Fredericton, N.B. writes:—

"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefiting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her tonsils and tongue became so swollen that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, steadily growing better. Three years later a severe fright brought on the nervous trouble again, and she suffered everything a human being could endure. Her mother bought a dozen boxes of Nerve Food, and with this treatment she was fully restored. I wish you could see her now, a strong, healthy, robust woman with two lovely babies. She still uses the Nerve Food when she feels out of sorts, but has had no return of the old nervous trouble."

For weak, puny, nervous children there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood, restores the starved nerves and start them on the way to health. When they fail to get proper nourishment from the food they eat, this food cure presents the necessary ingredients in condensed and easily assimilated form, and strength and vigor is restored. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

Income Subscribed in Britain in March is a Goodly Sum.

LONDON, May 23.—The total income for March of the Bishops' Western Canadian Fund was twelve thousand pounds, including three thousand for special purposes. It is interesting to note how this special fund for the Anglican Church in Western Canada is supported by the English dioceses. London heads the list with a total subscription of £1,598; Oxford is next with £1,588, but this includes a special gift of £1,000; Southwark, which has as much poverty in its midst as most English dioceses, contributes £538; Winchester, £920; wealthy Birmingham, only £125; and Sheffield, merely £29. Considering that the sword of disestablishment is hanging over the Welsh Church, Llanlaff does well with £88; St. Asaph, with £30; St. David's, £28; and Bangor, £7. Scotland contributed £85 and Ireland £10. All expenses of the missions were paid and £3,495 reserved to form a nucleus for maintenance when the Western Canada Fund in England will be closed four years hence.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE ISLAND CAVE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

We were washing the decks on the 30th day of October, 1900, when a man who had been sent aloft to examine a sail which had been damaged in a squall during the previous night shouted down to the mate that he could see a man on a raft about a mile away and almost directly in our course.

We rescued the castaway, who was neither overgrateful nor greatly surprised at being picked up.

The name of the rescued sailor was William Scott. He was second mate of a Ceylon schooner called the Happy Day. Three months before we found him the schooner set out from some port on the India coast for Batavia, but encountered a typhoon and was blown a long distance to the west and finally wrecked on a coral reef surrounding an island. Of the crew of eight men Scott alone escaped. It was an island about a mile in circumference, rocky and barren, but having plenty of fresh water on it.

The castaway had explored this island several times, but as the ground was much cut up and difficult to get over he had not examined it closely. Entering the island from the south side was a narrow bay, being not over twenty feet wide, though very deep. This bay came near cutting the island in two, as it ran within a hundred feet of the north end. It was in the still waters of the bay that Scott constructed his raft and only when it was finished that he made a strange discovery. He poled it along one day to the head of the bay, and as he reached the end he saw the mouth of a cave fifteen feet above him on the right.

He found the opening large enough to admit a hogshead, and there was every reason to believe that it once had been blocked up with stones squared for the purpose and cemented. These stones had been shaken loose by some great jar and had rolled down into the bay. The cave was thirty feet long, twenty feet wide and ten feet high, dry and airy, and a far better house than Robinson Crusoe had. Now comes the astonishing part of the story. According to Scott, he found 210 elephant tusks stacked up in the cave, together with five jars of gold dust. Two jars were emptied of their contents that he might use them for food and water. He had samples of the gold and the ivory on the raft.

It was a queer story, but with proofs at hand to back it what could we do but believe? Our captain was a Scotchman, and he took a whole day to think the matter over and assure himself that the stuff before him was actually gold and ivory. Then he made Scott a proposition. The matter was talked over, and it was finally agreed that Scott should pilot us to the island and take another jar of gold dust for his share.

At the close of the fourth day, sailing back and forth across a sea supposed to contain no land for hundreds of miles in every direction but the west, we sighted Scott's island. He identified it as soon as it could be seen from the deck, and we ran in and came to anchor for the night within a mile from the beach. Had the night not been so dark I believe the captain would have had a boat down, but as it was he dared not chance it. Such was the excitement aboard that no man slept for an hour, and as soon as daylight had come and the men had had a bite to eat we set off to secure the treasure.

We soon found the opening of the bay and rowed into it. Scott had been on the island for over a year, and the hut he occupied and the flagstaff he erected were in plain sight. At the end of the bay we came to the cave, and, leaping out of the boat, the captain was first to enter. A moment later he reappeared, and for the next quarter of an hour he cursed as I never heard a seaman before or since. The cave had been plundered. One broken tusk had been left behind, and there was perhaps an ounce of gold dust lying on the spot where Scott had emptied the jars. That was proof enough that he had told a straight story. When we landed and went up to the hut we soon solved the problem. Some whaler had touched there for food and water. For wood they had used all the wreck stuff lying about, and had also partially pulled the hut to pieces. They had filled their casks at the spring, and we could still see the marks where they had been rolled down hill to the boats.

Then the Scotchman did a mean thing by the rescued sailor. He made a great ado of how he had deviated from his course and lost a fortnight's time and insisted that Scott divide with him. I believe he threatened to leave him on the island if he didn't. There was trouble for a few hours, and then the sailor came to terms, but not so much as a penny's worth was ever handed over to the owners or distributed among the crew. Scott was trimmishipped to a craft bound for Java and that was the last I ever saw or heard of him. A year later, however, I met an American runaway sailor in Batavia, and he told me that his craft, the Rosie Herrick of Marblehead, put in at the island, remained for two days, and her captain discovered the cave and the treasure while fishing in the bay. He gave every man aboard $100 in cash as a present, but kept the dust and the ivory and turned them into cash at Singapore. It was a rich haul of treasure, and the captain must have been made independent for life.

Fleets in the Baltic.

The correspondents of the Petrograd Telegraph Agency has forwarded an account of the visit to the British Grand Fleet of a party of Russian publicists, from which the following is an extract:

At the luncheon on the Iron Duke Sir John Jellicoe, after proposing the health of the Emperor of Russia, made the following speech: "It is a great pleasure to me to welcome you to the Grand Fleet. I am sure we are very obliged to you for coming so far at such a season, and I hope you will take away pleasant memories of your visit. We know and appreciate the great work done by the Russian army. It saved us at the beginning of the war. It is saving us now. I need only refer to the splendid victory of the Caucasus army at Erzerum.

"The Russian navy, too, has won our admiration by its efficiency. Nothing would give us greater pleasure than to be able to fight side by side with Russian sailors against our common foe. It would be difficult for us to go to the Baltic, but not impossible, and I hope the day may come when our ships will engage the enemy together. Let me raise my glass to the health of our Russian guests, associating with it that of the Russian army and the great Russian fleet."

Kitchener's Threat.

An amusing story which does not seem to have got into print yet is being told about Lord Kitchener. It concerns a famous poster, issued some time ago, with an appeal in his handwriting for more men and yet more men.

He had, of course, to write the original appeal from which the facsimile on the poster was made, and he did so, and it went to the department concerned with such things. His writing was found to be too small for poster-size reproduction, so the sheet was sent back to him with a cautious explanation in this sense, and the request would he rewrite it. He did, but again it was too small, and he wrote it a third time, and with that third draft sent that grimly humorous message:

"Don't ask me to write this again, for rather than do it we'll have conscription!"

Had Palpitation OF THE HEART ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of bitter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel it is this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. C. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TACT AND A SPEECH.

Why Disraeli Changed His Mind About Speaking in French.

In Lord Redesdale's "Memoirs" there are some stories of Lord Beaconsfield. The following is particularly characteristic:

"There was one amusing incident in connection with the Berlin congress. One day it was announced that on the morrow Lord Beaconsfield was to address the assembled statesmen and that he would speak in French. Lord Odo Russell, who was a master of tongues, heard this with no little alarm, for it was well known that Lord Beaconsfield's French was very much of the Stratford-atte-Bowe type. Lord Odo, always clever, went to him and adroitly turned the conversation on to the next day's conference. Lord Beaconsfield announced his intention of speaking.

"'In what language do you propose to speak?' asked Lord Odo.

"'In French,' was the answer.

"'I am afraid that will be a very great disappointment to the colleagues,' said Lord Odo. 'You see, they know that they have here in you the greatest living master of English oratory, and of course they are longing to hear you.'

"The great man smiled his pleasure, and the speech was delivered in English. Lord Odo was wont to declare that he never knew whether Lord Beaconsfield took the hint or accepted the compliment."

The Measure.

The ancient judge sat before the scales of worth.

"Bring forth the royal treasure!" he cried, and the hurrying slaves poured into the huge pans sacks of golden metal, caskets of sparkling gems until it seemed as if all the wealth of earth were there. Yet the balance never stirred.

"Let the learning of the ages be added," came the order, and tons upon tons of the wisdom of sages, philosophers, scientists and poets was heaped upon the pile. And still the great arm of the scales remained high in air.

"Add now the men of power and high position," said the judge, "and the scale will fall." But all in vain.

"But what is on the other side that outweighs all these?" asked one.

"It is character," said the judge.—Portal.

Walter Was Puzzled.

This is a true story. Little Walter, whose father is a professor in a middle west university, was scrutinizing his parents closely and said: "Father, you have such heavy eyebrows, and mother has hardly any. What are eyebrows for?" The father replied, impromptu, "Why, eyebrows are—er—eyebrows are to keep the perspiration from getting into people's eyes when they work hard." "But, father," protested Walter, "I don't see how that can be, for mother's would need to be many times heavier than yours." And father was lost in thought.

Over the Mark.

"Does he aim at realism in the stories he writes?"

"He may aim at it, but he doesn't hit within a million miles of it."

"How's that?"

"The hero of his last story is a 'spendthrift Scotchman.'"

LONDON'S BRIDGES.

The First of These Historic Structures Named a Juvenile Game.

Can you remember when you were a little tyke and played "London bridge is falling down" during recess or at children's parties when the girls were not too much dressed up? The game always ended with a vigorous pull of the opposing sides, with the result that usually both forces went down in the dust. Did you know that that childish game was one of the genuine antiques and that it could trace its origin to a real historic fact? The first bridge over the Thames, at the headwaters of navigation, about half a mile above the Tower, was so old that the story of its construction is lost in a maze of myths. Its fall, however, is a matter of record. It happened on the 16th of November, 1019, and it was the result of the most devastating storm and the most terrific and sudden flood that London had ever seen.

That first bridge was entirely of wood. It was not rebuilt for almost a century, and the second bridge consisted of stone arches, resting on deep piling. It was forty feet wide and almost a thousand feet long. Houses were built along the bridge, also resting on piling, until the bridge looked like a city street. Those buildings were swept away by fire in 1666. In the middle of the bridge was a drawwith a tower, on which were exhibited the heads of Englishmen who were executed for treason against the kings of England. The present London bridge was begun in 1824, a little way above the old one, and it is of such massive construction that there is little danger of its ever "falling down."

Nature the Healer.

The influences of the forest and anything in nature that is needful to man that is in the lowest functions it means to him on the footings of commodity and beauty. To the body and mind which have been cramped by anxious work or complex duties in mediæval and renascent town. The tradesman, the attorney comes out of the din and grit of the street and sees the sky and the woods and is a man again. In their eternal calm he finds himself. The health of the eye seems to diminish a jealous. We are never tired so long as we can see far enough.—Emerson.

Our Friends of Fiction.

It is well to balance the influence of one's transient mortal associations by acquiring a peaceful intimacy with those ever living men and women whose deeds, aspirations, love and courage are recorded in books, who are never against us, who never despise us, nor fail us, nor betray us, being stripped now of that mortal part which renders all men uncertain, liable to hypocrisies, conceits and a sort of human fatuousness which life in the flesh never quite escapes.—Cerra Harris

GAINED 20 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Marlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy, bad nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 20 pounds in weight.

Clever Reasoning.

Rather an original lesson in political economy was that once taught by the Japanese nobleman Awoki and thus translated by Sir Edwin Arnold in "Seas and Lands:"

One evening as he was going to the palace to take his turn in keeping the night watch he let 10 cash drop out of his tinder case into the street, and then bought 50 cash worth of torches to search for the lost coin. His friends laughed at him for spending so much in order to recover so little, and he replied, with a frown:

"Sirs, you are foolish and ignorant of economics. Had I not sought for these 10 cash they would have been lost forever—sunk in the bottom of the Namerigawa. The 50 cash which I have expended on torches will remain in the hands of the tradesman. Whether he has them or I is no matter, but not a single one of the sixty has been lost, and that is a clear gain to the country."

Watch Your Shoulders.

When standing before a looking glass notice if your shoulders are the same height. Generally the right is higher than the left. The reason for this unevenness lies in the way one sits. You get into a comfortable chair at your desk, and at once you rest your right elbow on the arm of your chair or your desk, thus throwing one shoulder higher than the other. This is especially the case where one writes a great deal. When you notice that one shoulder is higher than the other the thing to do is to change your way of sitting at your desk. Two simple exercises will be beneficial. The arm of the lower shoulder should be extended upward, the hand grasping a dumbbell. That of the higher shoulder should be lowered and made to support a heavy weight.

Madagascar.

The great island of Madagascar, in the Indian ocean, lying off the east coast of Africa, was officially recognized as a French colony in 1896 after a war of occupation. The majority of the natives are not Africans, the Malayan element predominating in their greatly mixed blood. Of the total population of more than 2,250,000 by the last census, the Hovas, the dominant race, numbered about 850,000, and they are regarded as belonging to the Malayan stock.

The Sakalavas, whose negro affinities are strongly pronounced, rank next in numbers, and besides other indigenous tribes there are many persons of Arab and Indian descent. The seat of the government is at Tananarive, which has a population of about 60,000.

Have you a small kitchen?

And have you big meals to prepare, too?

Surely that is a double problem worth simplifying right away. You should see what an abundance of cooking you can do on our style E.S. range in a small corner of your kitchen.

McClary GAS Ranges

The main top has three regular, one giant and one simmering burner; and there are two long burners on the oven and the broiler. The broiling oven has also a large round burner. That means you can crowd on pots, kettles and pans to your heart's content. And you needn't worry about the gas. Every inch of gas turned on is earning every cent you pay for it, for McClary burners don't waste, and every bit of heat in the oven does work.

No matter how many stoves you may have seen, you should see McClary's Style E.S. before you decide. It combines all those features of convenience, capacity, compactness and good appearance you want for a small kitchen. Ask your nearest dealer to show you McClary's Style E.S. SHIPMENTS FROM GERMANY

Total $1,000,000 a Month Under Special Permit it from British.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—American purchases in Germany, though but a fraction of what they were before the war, have not ceased entirely, as shown in statistics compiled in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Shipments from Germany to the United States still amount to more than $1,000,000 a month.

Goods are permitted to come only under special permit and in limited quantities. Before the British Orders in Council went into effect, a year ago, about $10,000,000 worth of imports came through monthly.

Figures covering the last six months of 1915 show that toys valued at slightly more than $2,000,000 comprised the largest single item. Leather goods and chinaware fell slightly below $1,000,000 each, and laces and paper came through in values of about $500,000. Raw skin shipments were valued at nearly $500,000 and furs at about $200,000.

Shipments of photographic papers in the period given reached a value of $280,000; musical instruments, $120,000; gelatine, $241,000; glassware, $160,000 knit goods, $133,000; clocks, $125,000; books, $29,000; postcards, $10,000. Cremical and drug shipments reached a value of only $116,000.

BRITAIN MAY RETALIATE.

Treat German Prisoners as Germany Treats British Captives.

LONDON, May 20.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, stated in the House of Commons this afternoon that representatives of the United States Government had been refused permission to visit home industrial camps in Germany where British prisoners were employed. The Minister added that the treatment of prisoners in Germany was somewhat better than formerly, though the situation at some of the working camps and industrial establishments left much to be desired.

A suggestion made by Rowland Hunt, Unionist member for the Ludlow Division of Shropshire, in a question, that German prisoners in England be subjected to a most rigorous treatment short of actual cruelty, would not be lost sight of, Lord Robert Cecil said, but the Government was anxious to avoid reprisals if possible.

A Touch of Vernicol—and Your Furniture Is New Again

THERE is many an old piece of furniture about most houses that is dingy and battered; that doesn't match the prevailing tone of the room, that is still useful, but far from ornamental. It's a pity that someone doesn't bring out the good points of such pieces and make them really worth while. It can be done easily.

You can make wonderful changes in a few minutes with Lowe Brothers Vernicol. And it's mighty economical. Vernicol comes in convenient cans of all sizes and in colors to match the usual wood finishes.

TO LOOK TALLER.

Here are a few hints for the woman who would be a little taller:

Avoid girdles.

Never under any circumstances wear a belt of contrasting colour. You can think it gives a smart note to your dress, but it shortens you.

Let all your lines run up and down.

Do not wear a yoke.

Have your gown all of one material, and not too short.

Wear long gloves and carry a long umbrella.

Hold your chin up, to lengthen your throat line.

Carry your head straight, never tilted to one side.

Wear high heeled shoes, laced.

Do not effect short, wide coats.

Dress your hair high as fashion permits.

Avoid all plaids, even to small checks.

CANADIAN HUSBAND

Norman Ancestry and Haughty Mien Too Much For Her Democratic Nature.

CHICAGO, May 23. — Anna Fitzhugh Hardy, who during her stage career brought entertainment to thousands of Americans and much fame upon Oregon, Ill., the place of her nativity, has sued her husband, John J. Hardy, a Canadian millionaire, whose family is said to trace back to the days of the Norman conquest, for a divorce.

Her attorneys, Charles E. Erbstein and Ada M. Cartwright, have prepared the bill which she will file, in which it is charged that Mr. Hardy was a trifle too chilly in temperament and disposition to suit his wife.

Hubby Too Haughty.

The bill says that April 26, 1906, the plaintiff married Mr. Hardy, who is the son of Hon. William Hardy, M.P. of Pingston, Ont. It relates that Mrs Hary is an "American woman by birth and training, and as such is endowed by nature with that spontaneity of feeling that inborn love of freedom and instinct of democracy peculiar to one bred in the ideals of a new world, but that the defendant is a man of cold, reserved and haughty mien and bearing justifying the same by reason of his descent from a long line of noble ancestors."

The bill further alleges that shortly after their marriage she was taken to the home of her husband in Canada where she was assured she would be welcomed in a style befitting a foreign princess rather than the simple American girl that she really was. The welcome, she states, was extended to her, but only in outward appearances.

Made Her Humble.

She says that almost immediately "her husband, by a course of cool, calculated and studied hauteur of bearing, and a neglect of even the ordinary courtesies, sought to impress upon his wife her inferiority of birth and descent in comparison with the exalted station of the family into which she had been permitted to enter by marriage with its son and heir.

"Shortly after their marriage," the bill continues, "Mrs. Hardy became ill and was removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., for an operation, and being without funds, her father-in-law forwarded to her the sum of $1,000. This sum, however, fell into the hands of the defendant. He bought two blooded great Dane dogs with the money and went to his home in Canada with the hounds, leaving Mrs. Hardy ill in the hospital without means to meet her expenses therefor."

Gave Her Yacht.

Mrs. Hardy declared that her husband owned seven automobiles, a hydroplane and an aeroplane. Shortly after her marriage, he presented her with a yacht, naming it the opitsa which Mr. Hardy told her, is an Indian term meaning "Sweetheart."

She charged in the bill that she was deserted July 2, 1911. She further states that although in receipt of an income herself, she should be entitled to receive from her husband sufficient money to carry on this suit and for her support.

Mr. Hardy is said to be immensely wealthy, and is connected with the Canadian Locomotive Company, now engaged in making munitions for the Allies. The bill is filed with references to the splendor of the Hardy estate at Kingston, Ont.

If a man owes you money he is always ready to laugh at your weak criticisms.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

LABOUR MEN AT THE FRONT.

11,972 Unionists Have Come With Canadian Units.

OTTAWA, May 23. — Canadian trade unionists to the number of 11,972 have joined the Canadian expeditionary forces, according to inquiries made by the Labour Department. In addition, 458 union men who were British reservists in Canada went back to join their regiments at home.

Of the reported enlistments, the trade unions in Ontario are credited with approximately 54 per cent. Local branch unions in Toronto reported 2,137 recruits and 83 reservists, which is almost one-half of the enrolments in the province and more than one-fifth of the total reported from all parts of the Dominion. Nova Scotia, with 1,800 union enlistments, stands in second place, the miners contributing over 1,000, while Alberta is a close third with 1,805. Montreal enlisted 670 trade unionists and 38 reservists; Hamilton, 394 and 11 reservists; Winnipeg, 1,300; Calgary, 598; Edmonton, 461, and Vancouver, 426.

E. COLLINS MENTIONED AS CHICAGO MANAGER

CHICAGO, May 24. — Rumours were afloat in Chicago yesterday that Charles Comiskey, president of the White Sox, is contemplating a change of managers. The old Roman, it is said, is discouraged at the miserable showing of the White Sox, who on paper stack up as probably the best team in the American League. If a change of managers is made, a thorough and complete reorganization of the South Side Club will also be effected, according to reports.

Whether the reported change involves elevating a man from the ranks to the managership was not learned, but it is rumoured that Eddie Collins is being looked on with favour for the job.

HOT FIGHTING CONTINUES AT VERDUN

FRENCH GAIN ON THE WEST BANK OF MEUSE

THE FRENCH TROOPS MAKE GAINS ALONG WEST BANK OF THE MEUSE

Positions Won by French Expose Germans to a Flanking Attack If They Attempt to Push Southward---Germans Capture a French Trench North of Haudremont--Violent Artillery Duels Continue Through the Night.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 25.—French troops advanced last night along the west bank of the Meuse, just east of Cumieres village, in grenade fighting, the War Office announced this afternoon. The Germans by a strong attack, captured a French trench north of Haudremont Quarries on the east bank. Though violent artillery duels continued throughout the night there were no important infantry struggles either around Fort Douaumont or Dead Man's Hill front west of the river.

The French gain was made in a small wood between the river and the village of Cumieres. Though the advance was slight the positions won by the French expose the German's to a flanking attack if they attempt to push southward from Cumieres. The southern exits from Cumieres are under the fire of the French artillery and little fear is felt here over the possibility of an advance from this quarter.

Lloyds Betting On the End of the War

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 25.—Responding instantly to Sir Edward Grey's declaration that peace talk is idle, Lloyds to-day were wagering 3 to 1 that war would not end in 1916.

Other odds posted were seven to three that war will not end before April, 1917. Twenty to one that the war will end before 1919. Two to one that Germany and the United States will not be at war this month. The odds quoted on possibilities of a German-American clase reflect strong feeling in English circles that a German submarine commander by attacking the settlement reached by President Wilson and embroil the two nations in war immediately.

Lloyd George Will Have Charge

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 25.—David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, has been given full charge of the Irish situation, Premier Asquith announced in the Commons this afternoon. Lloyd George was the unanimous choice of the Cabinet, the Prime Minister announced. He will devote his time and powers in an effort to effect a settlement between the conflicting elements in Ireland.

The Prime Minister appealed to all sections of the house to refrain from discussing the Irish question while Lloyd George conducts negotiations. John Redmond, replying for the Irish party, said that if the plan failed the fault would not lie with his party.

Lloyd George's selection was a surprise to the Commons. In the lobbies of the House of Commons it was pointed out that the appointment of the Welsh leader was a positive indication that British munitions problems have been settled for the time being at least.

LONDON, May 25.—Practically all French military critics agreed today that this week's fighting at Verdun has been the bloodiest in history. The Germans have lost more than in any other week of the war.

LONDON, May 25.—Sir Roger Casement will go on trial June 26.

LONDON, May 25.—British steamer Washington, 5,000 tons, largest U-boat victim in several weeks, has been torpedoed.

CHEMONG WAS A DESERTED VILLAGE

Relatives and Friends of the Men in Khaki Were in For the Farewell

The Indian village at Chemong was deserted yesterday. With a platoon of men from the reserve in the 93rd Battalion there was a general trek to the city for the big farewell, and of course to see the Chemong boys at their best in khaki. One auto livery alone brought in six touring cars full of the expectant relatives of the Chemong boys, and it is needless to say that they had eyes only for their own. By the way, Harry Buch of the 18th Battalion, 4th Brigade, recently writing in the Guelph Mercury, dwelt upon the advantage of a keen vision at the front. A letter to his brother included the following passage:

"George, I charge you teach those five boys to shoot. Any weapon, so they get eye training. Let them spend all possible time in the woods and observe things. One of our city bred men was observing through a glass and reported nothing doing. A Rice Lake Indian with naked eye took his place, and bang, bang, bang— three Huns less. Just a little thing, but a service to our country worth 15,000 pounds."

SIGHT IS PRECIOUS.

Don't let the matter of expense be as precious to you as life itself, and as precious to you as life itself, and our charges are moderate. Let us show you how to cure that headache. See Dr. Lacey and see better, 416 George Street.

Charged With Ill-treating Child

Judgment Was Reserved in Case of Local Woman Charged With Abusing Infant

Judgment was reserved in the case of a local woman who appeared in this morning's police court on a charge of ill-treating a seven months old child. The child was removed to Nicholls Hospital where it was treated by Dr. C. H. Amys The doctor found the child to be in very emaciated condition and also suffering from a broken arm sustained three or four weeks before its removal to the hospital. According to the report of the hospital authorities the child has improved during the few days that it has been in the hospital.

Mr. W. J. Hatrick Gets Degree of B.A.

Graduates From St. Michael's College, Toronto

The many friends of Mr. W. J. Hatrick will be pleased to learn of his success in obtaining the degree of B. A. in the recent examinations. "Bill" started his early school training in the Separate School here, from thence to our Collegiate, and from there to St. Michael's College, Toronto. It was there he began to show the versatility that distinguished him throughout his course. A clever student, an athlete of undoubted ability, and a ready mixer, he soon won a place of prominence in all the activities of the college.

The many friends of Mr. Hatrick in Peterborough unite in wishing him a bright and successful future.

PROPER EQUIPMENT FOR 93RD BATTALION IS NOW ASSURED

Canvass of the City Closed on Tuesday Night—Fund Will Close Around $8,000 Mark, With Something for the Battery

GOOD WORK BY OLD GUARD

Tuesday night saw the closing up of the canvas for the 93rd Battalion Fund. It closed up among congratulations, good 'eatins, compliments and cheers. Those who had worked had done well. Those who had not worked approved, at any rate. So all were pleased. The battalion heard the news with pleasure and knew that it would go out into the mobilization camp as well provided as any other, which is saying about all that is required.

Supper was served and enjoyed, the ladies again providing a generous and acceptable spread. Quite the best yet. After there is something really fine and in advance of the professional caterer when the ameteur dexterity is to the fore. A touch that seems wanting and which is recognized. To the ladies large thanks.

Reading of the returns brought cheers. The sums realized by the canvas of the day are as stated following. A summary is made. This is not to be taken as accurate, for all returns are not in, but certainly the avails will not be less than stated. The townships are yet to close up and the city grant is to be announced. But safe to say that the fund will hover around the figurg of $8,000.00, with something for the battery boys, say an average of $6.00 each for the 60 men. They should not be forgotten nor ignored. While it would not be possible to take funds subscribed for the 93rd and give it to the battery men, the city grant might be divided in some way to overcome the difficulty. This is suggested, and possibly the Council will consider and approve something of the kind.

Among the many fine subscriptions of the day was one from Mrs. J. R. Stratton for $200.00. The team that secured this got a plum. Mr. Gillespie reported that he secured $50.00 in cheques at one house.

One of the surprises of the canvas. Adjt. McElheney reported that one or two factories had made returns, but that the bulk of the givings would be realized during the next few days, and after the respective pay days at the factories, also, while not counted in, a substantial sum is expected from such sources.

Mrs. James Wood handed the welcome and fine subscription of $250, which was another surprise. Said she was proud of the regiment, and wished all luck and success. Mr. R. M. Waddell added $25.00 and Mrs. Waddell another $25.00 to keep the first company. Mr. Chris. Graham reported that the schools, both Public and Separate had done fine in the matter of subscriptions. The figures for each are not at the moment of writing available. Cheques for $60.00 from Mr. R. R. Hall, Dr. Robinson $25.00 and several amounts of $10.00.

In addition to his work on Tuesday, the team of Mr. Picard handed in

LOCAL BOYS ON THE LIST

Pte. A. E. Bartley and Harland Martin of Peterborough, Who Left With the Mounted Rifles, Are Suffering From Shell Shock

CAPT. SNEATH WOUNDED

Official word was received yesterday that two more Peterborough boys are on the Canadian casualty list.

Mrs. Isabella Bartley, 338 Aylmer street, was notified yesterday that her husband, Pte. Albert Bartley, a well known Peterborough boy who left here with the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, is reported admitted to hospital on May 12th suffering from shell shock. Pte. Bartley is the son of Mr. W. G. Bartley, 128 Ethridge street.

Mr. Harry Martin, 90 Ware street, also received word yesterday that his son, Pte. Harland Martin, also of the Mounted Rifles, is suffering from shell shock and was admitted to hospital on May 12th. Pte. Martin has two brothers in the Canadian expeditionary forces.

Capt. Sneath Wounded.

His many local friends will regret to learn that Capt. T. D. Sneath, of Napanee, who was an officer with B squadron, 8th C. M. R., during their training here last year, has been wounded. Capt. Sneath, who recently was promoted, and who has three times been mentioned in despatches, made many friends here.

THE WHITE PEARL AT THE EMPIRE

Marie Doro To-night and Balance of the Week in a Splendid Photo Play

"The White Pearl" is a fanciful romance of the orient, with which drama and mystery are absorbingly interwoven. In this unusual story, the strong attachment between two young American lovers survives and triumphs over the machinations of a band of Japanese geisha traders, the influence of a Hindu legend of death which for a time threatens the life of the girl, and the caprices of destiny itself. Throughout the entire production Miss Doro, the star proves herself thoroughly captivating and dramatically effective.

There will be a recital given on the NEW EDISON DIAMOND DISC Phonograph, in the Recital Hall of the J. M. Greene Music Co., Ltd. Charlotte Street, to-morrow (Friday) evening at 8 o'clock. Full programme will appear in to-morrow's issue. You are invited.

FAREWELL CONCERT BY 93RD BAND

Khaki Clad Musicians Will Play Attractive Programme in Victoria Park on Sunday

By permission of Lt.-Col. Johnston the band of the 93rd Battalion will give a farewell concert in Victoria Park on Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. As this will be the first open air concert of the season, as well as the last concert of the 93rd Band before leaving for Barriefield, there will undoubtedly be a big crowd on hand. The band, under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes, will play the following programme:

March, "Dragoon Guards"—Brophy.
Overture, "William Tell"—Rossini.
Trombone solo, "The Death of Nelson" (Brahms)—Bandsman Gilbert.
Grand selection, "Reminiscences of Verdi"—Verdi.
Cornet solo, "A Perfect Day" (Bond)—Bandsman Waine.
Gavotte, "Les Cloches de St. Malo"—Rimmer.
Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah"—Handel.
March, "Stars and Stripes"—Sousa.

Victoria Day Demonstration Yesterday a Grand Success

BACK FROM EUROPE FOUR MORE LOCAL BOYS HAVE REACHED HOME

Pte. Cripps, Sturgeon, Underwood and Williams Arrive ---Field Kitchen Demonstrated Its Usefulness Yesterday---Balance of Sports to Be Run Off To-morrow --To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Four more of the boys who enlisted here last year for overseas service, and who have been invalided home, reached Peterborough yesterday. Pte. Chas. Sturgeon, Pte. Fred Underwood and Pte. W. J. Williams of the Mounted Rifles and Pte. A. Cripps of the 39th Battalion. Ptes. Sturgeon and Cripps were among those who were tendered a reception at the Exhibition Grounds, yesterday, while Ptes. Underwood and Williams only reached the city on the afternoon C. P. R. express from the East, being met at the station by Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin. Mayor Duffus took Pte. Underwood and his family to the Exhibition Grounds and afterwards saw Pte. Williams off. The latter's home is in Springville. He enlisted in the Mounted Rifles here last August, when the last draft of forty-five men left for Barriefield camp.

The boys who returned yesterday have been invalided home on account of physical ailments.

Jack Sutherland, the ever popular secretary of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, signed up with the 93rd Battalion on Wednesday. Jack will no doubt instill the boys with his never-say-die spirit. The Club did not expect to lose the services of its valued officer at such an early date, but when duty calls one must obey. The best wishes of the Club go with "Johnnie" and they will always retain a hearty welcome until "Johnnie" comes marching home

Members of the 93rd Battalion and local friends, generally, will sympathize with Q. M. S. King, Orderly Room Sergeant of the 93rd Battalion, in the bereavement he has sustained in the death of his brother, Trooper Henry Wardale King, a member of the Yeomanry, who has been killed in action. He was first reported wounded and missing.

Hospital Sergt. Maguire, Corp. Bradley and their staff of Red Cross men were on parade with the 93rd Battalion yesterday, and were ready for casualties However the day passed off very nicely without the slightest accident and the hospital staff had an easy time.

Two members of the 93rd Battalion who have been in poor health, were sent to the Kingston Convalescent Hospital, yesterday, to recuperate.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Battalion Orders by Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Headquarters, Peterborough, May 25, 1916.

DUTIES.

Orderly Officer for to-day, Lieut. R. N. Payne.

Orderly Officer for to-morrow, Lt. W. G. Worth.

Orderly Officer for Saturday, Lieut. J. Ketchum.

Battalion Orderly Sergeant for to-day, Sergt. Stanley.

Battalion Orderly Sergeant for to-morrow, Sergt. McIntyre.

Battalion Orderly Corporal for to-day, Coporal Pollock.

Battalion Orderly Corporal for to morrows, Corpl. J. Miller.

PARADES—Friday.

6.30 to 7.00, Physical Training.
8.30 to 10.00, Section and Platoon drill.
10.00 to 10.30, Orderly Room.
10.30 to 12.00, bayonet fighting and Physical Drill.
2.00 to 3.00, Company Drill.
3.00 to 4.30, March Out.

STRENGTH, taken on.

The following men having enlisted are taken on the strength of the Battalion and posted to the Companies placed after their names from the date mentioned:

No. 195934, Pte. J. M. Dugis, 'D' Co., May 24th.
No. 195935, Pte. F. S. Campbell, 'D' Co., May 23rd.
No. 195932 Pte. F. Diron, 'D' Co., May 23rd.
No. 195926 Pte. V. E. Tobin, 'B' Co., May 24th.

E. R. MUNRO,
Captain,
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

In yesterday's orders the following were taken on the strength:

No. 195933, Pte. R. H. Sandys, 'B' Company, May 23.
No. 195930, Pte. C. H. Cheverell, B Company, May 21st.

Pte. J. M. Luther of the cooks staff of the 93rd Battalion has received word that his son Bombadier Sidney Luther of the 4th Battery, C.F.A. has been enjoying leave in England. Bombadier Luther has been at the front since February of last year and this is the second leave he has had in England.

"A" company is cheeky to-day because its representatives made almost a clean sweep of the winning events at the Exhibition grounds yesterday, although Sergt. Miller of B company took second in the 220 dash. Incidentally A company uncovered three good winners in Ptes. Peerter and Freeman who showed fine sprinting ability and Pte. Sam Taylor who exhibited good form in the half mile run.

Private J. E. Rich, of the 39th Battalion, who left here about a year ago, and was transferred to the Machine Gun Section, and has been in action for several months, has been promoted to Lance-Corporal.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Carveth, Hall's Glen, have received the following letter:

May 2, Billets.

Mrs. and Mr. Carveth,—Just a few lines expressing the deep sympathy of all the boys of the Eighth and Fifth Canadian Mounted Rifles, in your bereavement.

I have been a close chum of Gordon's ever since he enlisted in Peterborough, and I was right there when he met his death, and I thought that you would like to know the full particulars about his death.

It was on the morning of the 24th April at half-past-three in the morning. Gordon was just going to get up on the firing step as a bullet came through the sand bags hitting him in the head. The bullet went in the left temple, and out over the right eye. His death was instantaneous. He was buried the same day in a military cemetery about a mile and a half behind our front line, by four of the Eighth, one of the Fifth Mounted Rifles, and myself. We are all in his platoon. Gordon was well liked, both by the N.C.O.'s and men of the three regiments he has been in. His grave has al been fixed up. I am sure that it is the best around there. It has a beautiful white cross on top, and a row of white daisies and violets at intervals down the centre of it, and I'll see that it is kept in good condition, and anything you would like putting on forward it to me and I will do my best. I remain,

Yours truly,
Pte. J. SYKES, No. 111592,
7th Platoon B Company,
8th C.M.R., France.

The following letter has been received from Harvie Stanton, a well-known Peterborough boy:

Belgium, May 8th, 1916.

Dear Folks,—Well here I am again and feeling fine and dandy. I had been ill for a week, but fought it out and did not go to the hospital. I

Thousands of People at the Exhibition Grounds---Work of 93rd Battalion and Reception to Peterborough Boys Back From Overseas Were Features of a Most Successful Event.

VISITORS FROM OUTSIDE

Favoured by ideal summer weather after weeks of rain and cold the Victoria Day patriotic demonstration, arranged by, and under the auspices of, the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, Speakers' Patriotic League, and the various women's patriotic organizations was a splendid success. From all parts of the district there was an influx of visitors eager to see their friends in the 93rd Battalion and to view the battalion as a whole. The early morning trains brought big crowds and the steamer Rainbow carried many visitors from river and lake points, while in spite of the pressure of work on the farms, the farming community in all parts of the county was well represented.

The crowd at the Exhibition grounds in the afternoon was a huge one. Many gathered in the morning to witness the review of the battalion and remained on the grounds for dinner, but the real rush commenced about 12.30 o'clock and continued until after 3. The Radial Railway Company had every available piece of rolling stock in commission, and every south bound car from Lakefield was at the maximum. It was an enormous crowd of happy, good-natured holiday makers in the warm sun and blue sky after the bad weather of the past few weeks, and eager to see the work of the soldiers. The attendance was a fine tribute to the 93rd Battalion, and Lt.-Col. Johnson's battalion, by way of showing their appreciation, acquitted themselves nobly in their work throughout the day.

Much of the success of the day is due to the untiring efforts of the members of the various women's patriotic organizations, who had the arduous task of providing meals and refreshments as well as conducting a number of midway features. It was a hard-working holiday for the scores of patriotic women who assisted in the work, and it is a pleasure to be able to announce that they were rewarded by a most liberal patronage. Many people partook of dinner on the grounds, and the different refreshment booths were surrounded by crowds, while during the afternoon there was record business in ice cream and soft drinks. Refreshment booths were in charge of the 37th Chapter, I.O.D.E., the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E., the Kitchener Club, assisted by the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, while the midway, including the clever fortune tellers, was in charge of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. The ladies are to be congratulated upon the success of their work and deserve the heartiest thanks of the 93rd Battalion and the public generally.

The Morning Review.

The 93rd Battalion marched to the Exhibition grounds shortly after 10 o'clock in the morning, making a splendid showing as they marched down George street, which was lined deep with people. The battalion looked trim and business-like in their khaki uniforms and equipment. Two of the new field kitchens brought up the rear. At the Exhibition grounds Major Chas. Ackerman of the headquarters staff, reviewed the battalion, which marched past, first in column of companies, making a good showing in spite of the rough ground and the little opportunity they have had of practicing battalion drill. Later the battalion marched past, the saluting point in column of platoons in splendid style. The appearance of the battalion was very satisfactory.

The Afternoon Programme.

The afternoon's proceedings opened promptly with the arrival of the 93rd Battalion, who entered by the George street gate, passed across the grounds to the south, and then crossing the race tracks formed mass on the south

PENSIONS FOR OUR SOLDIERS

The interest we are taking in our soldier boys, and the liberality and activity we are showing in providing for their physical comfort, is only the beginning of our duty. It should not be spasmodic, but the beginning of a solicitude for their comfort and welfare during their service in the field, that should not end with the war. We must not let our interest cease then, but must make the matter of pensions a subject of serious national consideration, and national action. Canada must remember, not in an abstract sentimental way, what we owe and shall owe to the soldiers who have done and, are doing, and, will survive, the fighting. We cannot appreciate without careful thought, what we owe to our soldier lads.. We owe them much for their voluntary assumption of the fighting role. We owe them a great debt for the glory and renown they have already brought to Canada, by their splendid work, their undaunted courage and intelligent resourcefulness, as soldiers. We owe and shall owe them more than that; we shall owe to them that we shall not be called to envisage the impossible conditions of life under German domination, which would have been our fate if it had not been for Canadian soldiers. In the great rank of European armies Canadian soldiers are numerically few; but they have shown themselves to be hosts, valourous and mighty in military service. Ever since Canadian soldiers landed in France they have been doing great work, and the daily despatches of how Canadians are showing their gallantry every hour is a familiar serial story—"to be continued"

When the war is over and the thinned ranks return—then Canada's pay day comes. We must consider the provision of pensions, we must in part—no money will do it wholly—meet the debt we owe our soldiers, when they come back disabled, or with weakened physical powers.. We are sure the people will back the Government in taking the necessary action. The Government as representing the whole people should shoulder the responsibility. Canadians as individuals, have splendidly responded t othe call of duty to bear burdens in the soldiers' interests. They have done much that the State should have done, and the matter of pensions should be made a national affair, so that everybody who has benefitted from the work of our soldiers as all have done, will do his share. It is none too early to give the question of pensions prominence in consideration. Pensions will doubtless add largely to our financial burdens, but they will represent a service that will have saved us from far more crushing financial burdens, which but for the fighting Canadian soldiers have done and will do, would be forced upon us, not for our friends and fellow-citizens, but for an enemy whose thoroughness is as much displayed in the systematic oppression of humanity under its control in times of peace, as it is displayed in war.. The glory of Canada which our soldiers have won will degenerate into disgrace, if the Government and people of Canada fail to do the fair thing, the square thing, the honest thing, the grateful thing, in providing adequate pensions for our soldiers when the war is over—and in cases of disablement, while the war is on.

BOTH LANGUAGES COMPULSORY.

While certain sections of the Canadian people seem anxious to have the study of the French language restricted as much as possible, it is with remarking that a rather different view of the matter is being taken in England. Over there during the recent visit of the French members of Parliament to London a meeting was held at which Lord Bryce presided and resolutions were passed favouring the obligatory teaching of French in the schools of England with a corresponding obligatory teaching of English in the schools of France. —Winnipeg Telegram.

HEALTH AND ECONOMY.

pointed out lately in Philadelphia have made arrangements to give free medical examination to their employees. It is hoped, as very well may be the case, that timely medical examination will, where they exist, reveal conditions, calling for correction and, which, if not corrected by timely treatment, may develop increasing or total disability to do regular and profitable work. Of course, this is done for purely commercial reasons; the object is to maintain the health and, consequently the efficiency, of workmen, and permit them to earn their daily wage. The manufacturers will find it a paying investment, entirely apart from the humane ideas involved.

The chief part of this that interests us is the fact that it places great additional emphasis upon the importance of health as a condition not only of the highest physical efficiency, but of comfortable, happy living, and the collective benefit of the community. It is for the same reason that in modern times governments in charge of the armies, now fighting in the field take, and have taken special care to promote measures looking to the best sanitary conditions. In other wars the ratio of soldiers incapacitated from sickness has been much higher than in the present tremendous struggle. Not only have improved sanitary measures kept a much larger proportion fit from active service, but scientific advance in surgical treatment has led to the earlier healing of wounds so that men have been sent cured back to the trenches, who, under less skillful treatment, less effective antisepticism and similar measures, would have died. We have the records of cities and towns the world over to show how the death rate has been decreased, and disability from disease been greatly lessened by sanitary work such as we must have in Peterborough, if we should do our duty to our people, by creating conditions that promote health, and in the main, make all our population better able to do good work and earn the wages they are paid. All are concerned, for everybody will be the better for the possession of good health.

In this connection, when from economic considerations we see that sanitation that promotes health pays, we should be the more vigilant. If we are not influenced by higher motives—those of humanity—to save the suffering from disease of our fellow citizens—the profit sharing feature of as perfect as possible sanitation and consequent good health of the people warrants us in keeping our machinery of sanitation in the best possible order. The position of Sanitary Inspector is virtually vacant; and the City Council is confronted with the most important matter that can engage its attention. It is hoped that the Aldermen recognize their responsibility. The public interests demand that we should get the best possible man for the position, and, his qualifications being satisfactory, he must be allowed to give his whole time to his work and be loyally and intelligently supported by the Council. This will mean a fair salary, for, as in every arena of responsibility, good men for efficient services are not cheap men.

The proposal to combine two offices for the sake of saving $200 or $300 in salary, is one that obviously is not in the interests of the health of the city. If the late Inspector, who was a most capable man and industriously devoted to his work, had difficulty in keeping up with it, how can another man, no matter how active, perform what another required his whole time to do—do the duties of sanitary inspector with the work of another department, to hamper him? It may be an object to save a little in the matter of salary, but if by handicapping a sanitary inspector the work of sanitation is necessarily neglected, it will not take many cases of illness or a very large outbreak of epidemic diseases to sweep away all the cheese-paring saving that would be effected by burdening a man with more work than he can do, to the necessary neglect of the work of city sanitation.

It is plain that a sanitary inspector, to do effective work, to safeguard the public health, must give his whole time to the work, and not only that, but arrangements should be made to relieve the inspector of petty details of merely clerical or menial character, so that he will be free to give his whole attention to the work, for which, if he is the right man, he is specifically qualified.

Madge (reading letter from brother at the front)—"John says a bullet went right through his hat without touching him." Old Auntie—"What a blessing he had his hat on, dear."

Lawyer—"So you want to make a case of it?" Client—"Yes. I offered to settle it by fair means, an' he wouldn't. So I decided I'd hire a lawyer an' have him took into court."

The Principles of Democracy and Human Brotherhood

More and more apparent becomes the significance of Mr. Rowell's latest speech, urging the consideration of domestic problems arising from the war, and which will become acute when the war is over. Mr. Rowell is still emphatic that as far as action is concerned our energies should be concentrated on the fundamental task of winning the war, but he also recognizes that if the oncoming problems are to be intelligently dealt with, they must receive, as they develop, the most serious attention.

Mr. Rowell is calling upon his colleagues and followers throughout the Province to take this question into their earnest consideration, and to think out policies and solutions to meet the needs. With the abolition of the bar there is greater scope and encouragement than ever for the prosecution of an advanced campaign of social reform.

The suggestions made in his address, laid before the public for their attention, are radical and constructive. Mr. Rowell did not deal with the difficulties arising alone from city life, but from country life as well. He spoke in terms of the Province as a whole, industrial and agricultural. Social justice, the chance for everyone to make the best of their opportunities and the application to real life of the principles of democracy and human brotherhood were the key notes of his message.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, sent to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor, of The Examiner:

May I call the attention of the people of the city generally to the advantage that was found yesterday in having the Exhibition grounds available for the big demonstration. Would it not be well to consider once more the advisability of preserving the splendid grounds for public use before the option expires and it is too late for action.

JOFFRE PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO CANADIANS

OTTAWA, May 24.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, on the occasion of Empire Day has received messages from Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British armies in France, and from Gen. Joffre, generalissimo of the armies of France, to Gen. Haig, which the latter added to his cable, expressing full confidence in the ultimate victory of allied arms and greetings to the people of the Dominion. Gen. Joffre adds a word of admiration for the fighting qualities of the overseas forces.

Gen. Haig's cablegram follows:

"All ranks under my command in France join with me in greetings on Empire Day to our fellow subjects through his Majesty's dominions' representatives of every part of these dominions; bound together not only by ties of blood, but by similarity of ideals and loyalty to one crown and one flag, our armies are united heart and soul in this fight for freedom and justice, the old watchword of our race. Confident in ourselves, in the ungrudging help and support of our kin throughout the world, and in our gallant allies, we look forward to certain victory."

Gen. Joffre's message, which was appended by Sir Douglas Haig, follows:

"On Empire Day I am much pleased to express to you the sentiments of high esteem and comradeship felt by the armies of France for the brave troops of the dominions, of the Indies, and of the colonies, whose fine conduct and brilliant deeds on all the battlefields where they have been engaged have excited such admiration. I beg you to communicate these sentiments to the officers, n.c.o.'s and men of the dominions and colonies, side by side with whom the French troops are proud to fight for the same ideals."

The Ford Monthly

The next number of the Ford-Canadian monthly to be released in a week or two, contains, among several interesting incidents, some excellent scenes showing how our sealskins are handled in St. Johns' Newfound land. Beginning with a view of St. John's harbour, Newfoundland, the spectator sees several of the sealing ships lying at anchor. Among them is the "Terra Nova," the ship on which the ill-fated English explorer Captain Scott made his unsuccessful dash for the South Pole.

The scene then shifts to the docks where the sealers in their odd attire promenade after their arduous journey to the ice fields. Piles of skins are shown, waiting to be scraped of their heavy coating of fat. They are then weighed and tallied and wheel

These pictures are unusually good ones, and their attractiveness is enhanced by the fact that they are toned a delicate sepia which brings out the various details of the pictures in an interesting and attractive way.

This number of the Ford-Canadian Monthly, No. 6, will be distributed in the usual way throughout the Dominion, and everyone will have the opportunity of seeing these attractive pictures, or by applying to the nearest branch of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., the Duffus Garage.

BRITAIN ORIGINATED DAYLIGHT SAVING

But Parliament Failed to Carry the Bills Advocating It—Kaiser Ordered It In Germany

When the German Kaiser two years ago plunged the world into the most frightful war in history his critics said he had set back the clock of civilization. Now, under the pinch of an ever tightening blockade and the necessity of conserving every resource within the Empire, Prussian efficiency literally has set forward its clock one hour.

When by imperial mandate every clock in the German empire was advanced one hour at midnight of the first day of the present month to conserve daylight Germany was not adopting a new idea but simply borrowing from her arch enemy one which had first being the subject of proposed legislation.

Eight years ago the matter of conserving daylight, and incidentally the health and incomes of the people, had been seriously agitated in Great Britain, and a bill was introduced in the House of Commons providing for this. Although it had the indorsement of educators, representative business men, manufacturers, shopkeepers and scientific men it never became part of the law of the empire.

Any arrangement to obtain additional daylight during the summer months by an arbitrary rearrangement of the working hours is necessarily of a mandatory nature, and hence strongly appealed to German efficiency as well as to German practicality. The argument advanced against the scheme in England when the law was first proposed here, that it was merely "robbing Peter to Pay Paul" had no weight with their cousin in Germany.

The rulers of the German people saw in it an excellent way by which to have the methodical German people rise earlier, quit work earlier, while at the same time working the same number to hours as before, go to bed earlier, and a consequence of the whole changed scheme of things spent less money for artificial light for pleasures and amusements and perhaps, ever for physician's bills. Thus, with the conservation of daylight German health and German money likewise could be conserved, the first to be available in the service of the empire and the second for the popular war loans which the straits of the empire are making ever increasingly necessary.

The introduction of bills for additional daylight in the British Parliament was followed by similar agitation in this country, the organization of the National Daylight Association being one direct result of it. The first of two bills introduced in the House of Commons at the time when agitation was strongest was that known as the Willett Additional Daylight bill which proposed to re-arrange working hours throughout the United Kingdom and Ireland to add one and one hours of daylight by setting for the clock during the summer mo

Another bill somewhat similar Willett bill was introduced House of Commons by Mr. W Pearse in 1909. Mr. Pearce's bill posed to set clocks eighty mi ahead during the summer months provided that for scientific pur Greenwich time would still be use

The bill was opposed by the Exchange, the argument being unless the same system were ad throughout the world great confu would be caused because of the di ence in opening hours of the stock kets. It was also added against it the same confusion would follow railroad and steamship schedules. But those who supported the bill merated the same advantages to from it that are the reasons give the German Empire's adopting t greatest amount of daylight for w men, the saving of artificial light expenditures of pleasures and greater health of the people.

Both the Willett and Pearse seem to have anticipated by near decade the criticism made of the its of English working people by Baron Estournelles de Constant o return to France recently from a across the Channel. This kindly cism was that the English people too late.

By setting the clock ahead one the creature of habit would ris hour earlier each day, while a same time his clock would show his rising hour was just the sa it had always been. To the man man to whom early rising is omination this would undoubte a sugar coating for a bitter pill, the man who rose at eight o started work at nine o'clock and at five would in reality rise at e begin work at eight and quit at and although his clock mak the pleasant fiction he would more daylight between quitting and retiring to his slumbers, ter time, the presumption is, also be one hour earlier.

Trent Canal Traffic in 1915 Showed Decrease of 17,811 Tons

Canada's Canals Had Lean Year at the Sea, the Total Decrease Being 58.9 Per Cent. From 1914 82,391 Passengers Over the Trent.

The total tonnage of traffic through the Canals of Canada during 1915 was 15,196,803, as compared with 37,083,237 tons for the preceding year. The decrease amounted to 21,894,434 tons, or 58.9 per cent. The Trent Canal traffic totalled 49,904 tons, a decrease of 17,811 tons, from the total of 1915, which was 67,715 tons. The classes of commodities carried over the Trent last year were represented by the following tonnage: Agricultural products, 1,990; animal products, 299; manufactures, 2,951; forest, 44,675; emines, 989.

The capital expenditure on the Trent Canal down to March 31st 1915, was $14,612,735.39.

There were 82,491 passengers carried on the Trent in 1915.

Regarding the general decrease in Canada's Canal tonnage is referred to as follows in the Government's report:

A study of the tables which will appear in other parts of these introductory observations, as well as in the body of this report, makes it clear that the decrease in both Canadian and American traffic was largely in the nature of a diversion to the American Canal at Sault Ste Marie. The cause of this diversion was the availability of a new lock on the American side, having a much larger capacity than the lock on the Canadian side. There are now three locks on the United States side of the St. Marys river, the last to be opened having a depth of 24-6 feet at extreme low water. There is but one lock on the Canadian side, with a minimum depth of 18.25 feet. The practicability of carrying a heavier load through the new American lock drew away nearly all the iron ore trade and a good deal of wheat from the Canadian canal.

The total expenditure on the Canadian Canal at Sault Ste Marie has been $4,944,373.51.

EMPIRE DAY WAS FITTINGLY OBSERVED IN THE CITY SCHOOLS

Presentation of Handsome "Roll of Honour" and Portrait of Capt. Maurice Park at the King George School, Ashburnham —The Speakers

Empire Day was fittingly celebrated in the city schools on Tuesday and particularly interesting was the observance of the occasion at the King George School, Ashburnham. Here a large number of the parents and friends of the pupils had gathered. A special feature of the proceedings at this hall of learning was the presentation to the school by His Honour Judge Huycke on behalf of the staff of a handsome framed portraiture of the Principal Capt. Maurice Park now overseas with the 59th Battalion, and also for the scholars of a beautiful shield on which is printed in gold letters, the names of the soldiers who, at one time or another have attended the Ashburnham school. They number sixty-five and are noted below.

THE JUDGE'S REMARKS.

In presenting these two gifts to the school, which, by the way, are prominently displayed in the main hall, His Honour said that it was very fitting for the pupils of the King George School to observe Empire Day in the way that they had. The flag which he saw so conspiciously before him typifies the Empire. He had the children repeat these well known words,

"The red is for love, the white is for law, and the blue for the hope our fathers saw, of a larger liberty."

Everyone should be proud to fight for that flag. "As you children have just sung in those stirring words of Rule Britannia, 'Britons never shall be slaves', so we hope" remarked the Judge, "they never shall. We all love to honour the brave boys who have gone forth to protect their dear ones. I am sorry that an ex-pupil who has recently returned from doing his bit, is not present this afternoon. I refer to "Harney" Quinn. "Barney" is a hero and we are proud of him.

Then there is another whom you all love, and who is also a hero. He is your principal, Capt. Maurice Park. He has gone forth to fight that you won't be slaves. As he taught you to obey and do the right thing, so he is now setting you the example."

In regard to the gift of the Honour Roll." Judge Huycke stated that it was the suggestion of the pupils themselves and was provided for them out of their own money. It was a monument to the brave and dutiful response of Ashburnham boys to the call of "God and King". Ashburnham was proud of her fighting sons, and in the years to come, this shield would always call to mind. the splendid young soldiers of King George School.

"The bravest are the tenderest,
"The loving are the daring.

Following Judge Huycke's speech three hearty cheers were given for Ashburnham's young warriors.

OTHER SPEAKERS.

Addresses were also given by Rev. W. H. White, M.A., rector of St. Luke's, Adjt. McElheney, Rev. Mr. Whattam, of Mark street church, Mr. R. B. Rogers and Mr. Steer, assistant Principal. Rev. Mr. White said that it was due to the good Queen Victoria that Empire Day was now so splendidly celebrated.

During the sixty-three years of her glorious reign the Empire grew and prospered. She was known as Victoria the Good, and her life of righteousness and love taught us all what our lives should be.

Adjt. McElheney told the children that this Empire Day should be one of gratitude. As compared to the children of the devastated nations of Europe they had much to be thankful for.

Rev. Mr. Whattam in his remarks, stated that the flag stood for religion, there being embodied thereon, a cross, the emblem of Christianity

THE PROGRAMME

During the afternoon, the pupils sang a number of Patriotic songs and recitations were splendidly given by Charles Doupe and Clarence Starr. Inspector Mowat acted as chairman and Miss Rannie as accompanist for the musical numbers.

PASSENGERS HAD TO PORTAGE OVER YOUNG'S POINT LOCK

Inexcusable Delay in Repairing Damage to One of the Gates in the Lower Lock

Passengers on the steamer "Islinda" of the Stony Lake Navigation Co. on the trip to Stony Lake on the 24th were compelled to portage over the Young's Point locks on account of damage to the north gate of the lower lock. A second steamer, the "Manita," had to be put into service at the upper end of the locks in order to enable passengers to continue the trip up the lakes.

It was learned that probably the great pressure of the high water from above the locks at a time when the water was lowered in the river, had caused the breaking of a portion of the framework at the bottom of the gate, which, it now transpires, must have been in a decayed condition for some time. Why this was not investigated sooner it is up to some one to explain.

The damage was discovered about ten days ago, unfortunately just at the beginning o' the season when navigation had started. From the time of the discovery, five or six days were allowed to be spent in taking measurements for a simple piece of repair work which, according to the opinion of an experienced workman, could have been repaired in two or three days.

The loss and inconvenience which has been occasioned to the Stony Lake traffic through this neglect and delay has become very discouraging as well as a serious hardship. Not only is the passenger traffic of the steamers unnecessarily interfered with, but the spring traffic for filling contracts for towing timber and bringing down wood, lumber and other freight in scows, has come to a complete standstill.

It is to be hoped that the complaints which have gone forward will have the effect of shortening the delay and lessening the injury which this unexcusable neglect of somebody is causing.

VICTORIA DAY DEMONSTRATION YESTERDAY, A GRAND SUCCESS

side of the park facing the grand stand. The battalion made a very impressive spectacle as they executed this manoeuvre.

The physical drill squad of forty-five men under the direction of Sergt.-Major T. Miller, W.O., was then formed up and marched across the grounds to the enclosure opposite the grand stand, where they put on a magnificent exhibition of physical drill. The crowd was impressed with the precision with which the preparatory work of doffing caps and tunics was done to the sound of the whistle. The different movements of the physical exercise with and without arms which followed were splendidly executed, to music by the 93rd Band. The squad followed with some smart bayonet exercise and when they finished by presenting arms and marching off, the hearty applause showed the appreciation of the crowd. The drill was repeated later on in the programme.

Splendid Marching.

The next item on the programme gave the large crowd a splendid opportunity to view the 93rd at its best, when the battalion marched past the grandstand. They came by first in fours, marching splendidly and well, and were heartily applauded. Then circling the track they passed the grand stand once more, this time in column of platoons. The men swung by like veterans to the strains of "Bonnie Dundee," the regimental march, the steady bearing of the men in khaki and the almost perfect alignment of the platoons as they passed, arousing great enthusiasm. None were more interested in the appearance of the battalion than were the men who had returned from overseas and who occupied seats on the platform, several of whom were loud in their praises of the 93rd. The battalion undoubtedly made a most favourable impression and added to the laurels it has already won. The feeling was general that Peterborough county has every reason to feel proud of the men she is sending out with the 93rd to represent her.

After the march past the battalion marched back to the south side of the grounds and performed some battalion drill, finishing with the Royal salute. Afterwards B company, in command of Capt. Hall, smartly carried out company drill, the demonstration being very satisfactory.

Heroes Are Welcomed.

One of the most pleasing events of the afternoon was the reception tendered to nine of the boys recently invalided home from Europe. These soldiers have arrived since the last public reception, in fact two of them only reached Peterborough yesterday. The nine consisted of Sergt. Peter Victor Pte. S. Mills and Pte. Theodore Quinn of the 2nd Battalion, Pte. R. Miller of the 21st Battalion, Lance Corp. E. Mahoney and Pte. A. Cripps of the 59th Battalion, Pte. C. Sturgeon and W. McLaughlin of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, and Sergt. Stanley Pearson, Canadian Engineers, who enlisted in Toronto, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Fenwick, 145 Langley street.

Mayor Duffins, who acted as chairman of the afternoon's proceedings, introduced each returned soldier in a few words and each was heartily applauded, acknowledging the reception by saluting. His Worship the Mayor, in extending a hearty welcome to the boys who had come back from overseas, referred to the services they had performed for the Empire and added his congratulations to the 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Theodore Quinn was called upon to speak on behalf of himself and comrades and did so very nicely. He wished he said to congratulate the 93rd Battalion. "It is a fine battalion he said, "one of the best I have seen, and I am sure it will bring great glory to this city and county. I hope myself to see them in action," concluded Pte. Quinn amid applause.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., of the 93rd Battalion, after referring to the services performed by the soldiers who were on the platform, reminded his hearers that the 93rd Battalion was not yet fully up to strength. There were many young men in the crowd who could go, and for the credit of Peterborough city and county he hoped that the Battalion would not have to leave for camp short-handed.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., added his congratulations to the boys who had come home and referred to the trying experience they had come through. He also complimented the 93rd Battalion upon their showing.

Mr. Dan. O'Connell, of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, and Mr. R. R. Hall, representing the Speakers' Patriotic League, briefly but eloquently pointed out the sacrifices that the men who were being honoured had made to fight for the Empire, and Lt.-Col. Johnston, speaking for the 93rd Battalion thanked the returned heroes for the high standard they had given the Canadian soldiers. When the 93rd got to the front he promised them that they would try to live up to that reputation.

Mayor Duffins then called for three cheers for the 93rd Battalion and three more for the boys who were back from the front, and they were given with a will. "O Canada" by the 93rd Band brought this enjoyable feature to a close.

Interesting Exhibitions.

During the afternoon several interesting exhibitions were put on by the machine gun section, and the signallers of the 93rd. The machine gun section in command of Lieut. E. P. A. Crisp, smartly went through machine gun drill, illustrating how the machine gun is carried, set up, served with ammunition and operated. The section was handicapped by having only one gun, a Lewis Automatic, for their demonstration, but the crowd found it most interesting nevertheless.

The signallers, in charge of Lieut. Gardiner, demonstrated the use of the field telephone, the interest being heightened by the fact that there was a race between two sections. Two men of each section, played out the line on the run and in a very short time the line was connected up, and by the use of a buzzer a message was sent over the wire. The field telephone is being extensively used in the present war and the good showing made by Lieut. Gardiner's men yesterday shows that they will be able to play their part when they get to the front. Afterwards the signallers gave a very creditable exhibition of the use of the flag in signalling.

During the afternoon the band of the 93rd contributed an enjoyable programme, the offerings including the selections from "Pinafore" and "The Gaiety Girl." Their playing added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The Sports.

Owing to the unexpected length of some of the features of the programme and the difficulty in getting into touch with some of the entrants, the entire list of athletic events could not be run off. The crowd was so large that difficulty was found in keeping the track clear long enough to run off the events that did take place. The running events were all well contested, especially the 100 yards, which was marked by a eyelash finish. The 220 yards dash brought out the biggest field of the day and had to be run in three heats and a final. The preliminary heats were won by Pte. Harold Freeman; Pte. Sam Taylor and Pte. Trew. The final heat resulted as follows:

1 Pte. Freeman.
2 Sergt. W. Miller.
3 Pte. G. Proctor.

Pte. Gordon Proctor of No. 4 platoon, won the 100 yards dash after a bang up battle all the way, with Ptes. Freeman and Taylor. The three were even a yard from the tape, but Proctor leaped ahead in the last couple of feet. The result:

1 Pte. Proctor.
2 Pte. Freeman.
3 Pte. Taylor.

Pte. Sam Taylor of Chemong, won the half mile race in hollow fashion, with Pte. Parker of Chemong second. A field of six started, but the pace was too hot for all, but the two Indian boys. The races were run off under the direction of Lieut. J. Ketchum.

The Ball Game.

While the military events were taking place at the west end of the ground, a ball team representing the 93rd Battalion, was engaged in a game with a picked Peterborough team at the east end. The latter won handily by 10 runs to 6. The soldiers were unable to get anything like their best line-up in action and were further handicapped by having had no practice. Neary pitched a fine game for the picked team and the soldiers found his slants a mystery. Pte. Hawkins who pitched for the 93rd did good work but his support was ragged. The teams were as follows:

Picked team—Corrin l.f., Connors 3b., Lane 1b., Kennedy c., McCarney ss., L. Connors s.s., Taylor r.f., Neary p., Chevrett 2b.

93rd—Capt. Widdifield c., Pte. Hawkins p., Lande Corp. Bell 1b., Pte. Ballard s.s., Pte. Micks 2b., Pte. Woods 3b., Pte. Blewett l.f., Pt. Beaver m., Pte. Heard r.f.

TRADE WAR ON GERMANY.

PETROGRAD, May 25—Japan is making systematic preparation to capture for Japanese exporters the Russian markets formerly dominated and almost monopolized by Germany. The Japanese Ambassador in Petrograd has requested the Russian government to assist him in obtaining a complete list of all Russian firms which formerly traded with Germany, in order that they may be canvassed by Japanese firms.

The Old Boys Want To Help

Peterboro' Boys at Ross Rifle Factory, Quebec, to Contribute to 93rd Fund

The Examiner has received the following letter which will be appreciated by the members of the 93rd Battalion:

Quebec, May 24th, 1915.

The Editor The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— The Peterborough men employed at the Ross Rifle factory are raising a fund to be applied to the fund being raised in Peterborough for the benefit of the good 93rd. We will remit not later than Saturday. Kindly advise to whom we shall send our contribution, which will amount to perhaps $30.00.

Yours sincerely,
W. H. Moore,

All Harmonious Now in Berlin

BERLIN, Ont., May 25.—At a special meeting of the City Council Mayor Hett, who opposed the name-changing by-law, delivered a short "harmony" speech, in which he declared that he congratulated the citizens who worked so hard to change the name. He expressed satisfaction that the fight was over, and added that he hoped all would unite under the new name, and that progress would be made in peace and harmony. The Mayor's speech was warmly applauded.

Monday night next was set for the meeting of the committee to select six names, from which the voters will choose one.

"When my wife starts talking on an embarrassing subject I always change it." "I've tried that with my wife, but it was no go. She simply exhausted the subject, and then took up the old one where she left off."

WHAT ABOUT PETERBOROUGH?

The women of Simcoe made $300 a few days ago by collecting rags and paper that would otherwise have been wasted. They collected 11 tons in all, but some unauthorized dealer collected one ton of the rags. Are the women of Peterborough going to let Simcoe beat them? Won't you get your rag bag ready for collection? If a number of women are courageous enough to go out and get your rags, won't you help them by having them ready and be sure that no one else gets them?

Mr. H. T. Hickey To Build Factory For Horn Bros., Lindsay

LINDSAY, May 24.—A meeting of the shareholders of the Horn Bros. Woollen Co. was held in the office of the company at 10 a.m. yesterday. The company was reorganized and new officers and directors were elected, the other business of importance dealt with.

The contract for the erection of the new building is being awarded to Mr. H. T. Hickey, of Peterborough, and work will be commenced at once. A large staff of men will be employed on the job. The building is to be completed by August 1st.

K. C. SMOKER WAS LARGELY ATTENDED

Tuesday night's smoker at the Knights of Columbus Club to the Catholic members of the 93rd Battalion, proved a very pleasant affair for the large number of Knights and soldiers who attended. Cards and refreshments, followed by several speeches and a short musical programme, were altogether enjoyable, and to the efforts of Grand Knight J. T. O'Connell is largely due the success of this informal farewell. Among those who spoke were Rev. Father Phelan, Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Mr. Harry Phelan, Mr. C. H. Pennefather, and Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp, M.P. Ed. Hanrahan contributed several vocal numbers, among them the stirring new patriotic song, "Up From Somerset," which he rendered in splendid voice and sentiment. Mr. Vince McCabe played several violin solos. At the close three cheers and a tiger were given for the 93rd Battalion and returned to the club by the visiting soldiers.

WOMAN CONFESSES PLOT TO BLOW UP CUNARDER

NEW YORK, May 25.—Details of an alleged plot to blow up the Cunard liner Alaunia, leaving New York for Falmouth and London next Saturday, were told to Assistant District Attorney John M. Battle to-day by Mrs. Marie Kessler, wife of William Kessler, of 50 Charlton street. The woman said she and two prominent New York men had originated the plot. She said she was to go aboard the steamer with a nurse and a baby in her arms with a powerful bomb concealed in the baby's luggage and after concealing the infernal machine in a stateroom she was to return to the pier in search of lost luggage.

The woman's circumstantial story caused Mr. Battle to investigate. Her husband is under indictment charged with a serious crime against Vera Kessler, his stepdaughter. She claimed to have been active in both the German and English secret service organizations here and gave Mr. Battle the names of the men who she said were her confederates. One of these, she said, was an incurable drug fiend, the son of a former city official now dead. Captain Thomas J. Tunney, in charge of the bomb squad at headquarters, was assigned to investigate Mrs. Kessler's story.

KNOX CHURCH CHOIR PICNIC

On the invitation of the Rev. J. A. McKenzie, the choir of Knox church to the number of about thirty-five drove to Chemong Park yesterday afternoon where a picnic was held. A baseball team headed by Mr. Humpage went down to defeat before a similar organization under the leadership of Rev. Mr. McKenzie.

LADYSMITH HERO'S SON SENTENCED TO PRISON

LONDON, May 25.—Capt. James R. White, formerly of the 1st Gordon Highlanders, and a son of the late Field Marshal Sir George White, the defender of Ladysmith, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment at Aberdare, Wales. He was convicted under the defence of the realm act of having attempted to induce coal miners to strike in order to compel the Government to show leniency toward the leaders of the rebellion in Ireland.

After leaving the army, in which he won the Distinguished Service Order for his services during the Boer war, Captain White became a Socialist. He went to Ireland to live, and took part in the riotous Larkin strike in Dublin in 1914. Later he joined the Sinn Fein Society.

TWO GIRLS KILLED IN CROSSING ACCIDENT

BROCKVILLE, May 25.—Gladys and Cassie Casselman, elder daughters of Clinton Casselman of North Williamsburg, were instantly killed yesterday afternoon when the horse their father was driving became unmanageable and plunged into No. 7 westbound G.T.R. express near Morrisburg. The father, with his three daughters, was on the way to Morrisburg to attend a celebration. Casselman and his youngest daughter, Olive, received injuries that necessitated their removal to the General Hospital here, and each is in a critical condition, the father with a fractured hip, and the daughter with a fractured jaw and leg.

"Did you ever realize anything on that investment?" "Oh, yes." "What did you realize on it?" "What a fool I had been."

Here's One Clock In Germany That Was Not Set Ahead

The new regulation in Germany by which the clocks have been set forward one hour as an economical measure in the matter of illumination has proved somewhat puzzling, especially to inhabitants in the rural districts. The Frankfurter Zeitung relates an amusing incident which occurred in connection therewith in Bavaria. Rasmus Haamussen, a farmer, who was always punctual in complying with all laws and regulations, was somewhat bewildered by this new order and sought counsel in regard thereto from the district official.

"Well, Rasmussen, what is troubling you now?" said the official to the farmer, who stood before him nervously fingering his cap.

"It's about the clocks," said Rasmussen. "I wanted to ask if it is true that we must set the clocks forward an hour."

"Of course," replied the official, "and the order embraces every clock in the German Empire."

Rasmussen appeared dumbfounded and wiped his perspiring brow.

"But that's an awful problem for me," said the farmer. "You see, I have a very old clock which has been in the family since my grandfather's time, and I wanted to ask Your Honour if I could not leave it just as it always was."

"You cannot," said the official bluntly. "No clock is exempt."

"Well, of course, as you say, but I don't know how I'm going to do it."

"Why don't be silly. You simply push the hour hand forward one hour. Now go home and don't forget about it."

"Well, all right, but I'll have to see a mason about it."

"What's a mason got to do with it?"

"Well, you see, the clock is in my garden and is imbedded in a celent column. It has no hands; it is what you call a sun clock or sun dial, and"—

But the official waved him away and refused to listen to him any further.

BANK SAFE OPENED AFTER WEEK'S WORK

Blacksmith's Aid Enlisted to Jam Loose Time Lock.

ELLENSBURG, Wash., May 25.—The 6,780 pound manganese safe containing $235,000 in Washington national bank of Ellensburg, which has defied two experts from safe manufacturers, assisted by four blacksmiths and employees of the Northern Pacific round-house, has been finally opened.

The first expert arrived a week ago and work on the safe went on night and day: Men pounded with 20 pound sledges almost constantly. The face was turned in every possible position and pounded.

Men after working all week decided that unless the safe responded they would start drilling, a process which would take 36 hours. The door was at last partially jarred loose, and after five hours' more work it was finally unscrewed and opened. It was found that even the timer was still working perfectly.

One of the lugs had jammed when the man tried to open it a week ago, and this lug by the length of only a quarter of an inch held the door from being unscrewed.

The safe weighs over three tons and contained all currency, gold, silver, notes and negitiable paper of the bank. Business for a week was handled under great handicaps, money being rushed here daily by express.

Doctor Says Phosphorus and Iron Makes Your Nerves 200% Stronger in Ten Days

Iron For Your Blood and Phosphorus For Your Nerves, Make You 200 p.c. Stronger in 10 Days.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron, and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food simply passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation people become generally weakened, nervous, and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at nights; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless; but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your flagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Bonised Phosphorus with Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous and run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good round, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that one tablet of this newer form of iron is worth a whole bottle of some medicines. It is dispensed in this city by F. C. Weber's two stores at 50 cents a box.

Verdun Battle Raged During Great Heat

(By Fred B. Pitney.)

PARIS, May. 25.—How the French on Tuesday took Fort Douaumont, one of the German prizes early in the Verdun operations and which has again reoccupied by the Germans, is a thrilling episode. A sudden and terrific artillery fire opened, under General Nivelle's orders, directed into the German positions on the right bank. Fort Douaumont, which the Kaiser had called the keystone to the Verdun position, was weaker than usual, because reserves had been called to the other side. It was defended at the moment by the crack Brandenburgers, who had taken it by assault on February 25. Two miles of German trenches, running from the fort to Thiaumont farm, which were likewise thought well held, proved weak in reserve poer. Nivelle's bombardment did not last long, for he did the work of a week in a single day, so well had he planned the coup.

"MARSEILLAISE" CHEERS MEN

Within twenty-four hours he gave his single word of orders to the infantry, and out they went, hearing, some say, bugles and others say "The Marseillaise" behind them. They charged in such numbers that they took fully two kilometers supporting Douaumont.

General Nivelle announced that he had prepared for a similar assault and ordered his troops to climb the slopes to the plateau on which Douaumont is situated and retake the coveted position. The right wing of the French contingent accepted the task and, despite the enemy's efforts, climbed into the dismantled fort that they had left three months before.

TWO STREAMS OF POILUS

The poilus poured in in two streams, one from the west, and the other from the south. They had left their rifles behind for the most part, and each carried a full load of hand grenades. It was a terrifically hot day, the thermometer standing at ninety, with no herbage, trees or water available, and the French stripped to the waist, as had their gunners during the previous hot day of artillery preparation.

It was a weird-looking force. Helmets and grenades were all they had use for, and thus equipped they scurried into cellar after cellar and tunnel after tunnel of the fortress. The enemy fell dead and wounded, and large numbers were taken prisoners without even the chance of surrendering. Numbers left their munitions behind.

GERMANS FIGHT IN TUNNEL

The Germans rushed to the northern end of the fortifications, from which they had dug a tunnel to their positions behind Douaumont and not till reaching there did they turn to make a last stand. Their mitrailleuses and rifles kept the French back and finally checked the landslide. One hundred there stemmed the advance until the French could bring better fighting implements over the edge to combat the mitrailleuses. Then the French nibbled off one more corner of the northern end of the fort, leaving the Germans in possession of only the northeast corner, which they use as their exit.

TABACCO AND CANDY MUST NOT BE CONCEALED

Tobacco and candy intended for the soldiers on active service in France must not be concealed in the toes of socks and the pockets of shirts. If there is any concealment the result is that the men may have to pay large sums for their parcels whereas if the tobacco and candy is packed in a separate parcel clearly marked "Tobacco (or candy) for Expeditionary Force" no duty will have to be paid at all.

Surgeon-General Ryerson confirmed the above last night.

Hairs Quickly Vanish After This Treatment

(Helps to Beauty)

Science has aided in simplifying the banishing of hairy growths from the face, and according to a beauty specialist, the most effective treatment yet devised consists of applying a delatone paste to the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. When this paste is removed and the skin washed every trace of hair has vanished. Be sure to get real delatone.

WONDERFUL MOVING PICTURES OF FLEET WILL BE SHOWN BY OFFICIAL AUTHORITY

Negatives Were Made During a Special Visit of Camera Experts To the Grand Fleet at its Station on Blocade Duty on North Sea.

ANYTHING LIKE THESE PICTURES WAS NEVER BEFORE POSSIBLE

Beholder Sees Ships as Though He Climbed Aboard Over Side, Mixed With Crew, and Chatted on Deck With Officers

MAJESTIC DREADNOUGHTS SEEN "CLOSE UP"

What It Means to See Modern Battleships in Action Can Be Visualized From the Pictures of the Great Guns Being Fired

By Archibald Hurd

The films of the British fleet are unique pictures; there has never been anything like them before. The spectator sees the men-of-war actually carrying out their duties of defeating Germany. The work is going on day by day, night by night Every evening registers a fresh victory. Owing to command of the world's seas, the allies are able to bring over the oceans to various theatres of war additional men, additional guns, and additional ammunition, to say nothing of food and raw materials. By no other means could these men and supplies be obtained Every shipload which is safely landed in face of the second greatest fleet in the world, reduced to impotence except for submarines, is a triumph.

Without the British fleet the maritime communications would not have been secure when the war opened. The allies, France and Russia (speaking of a time when Italy had not yet declared herself), have fine fleets, which have done fine work, but in combination they can manoeuvre fewer men-of-war than Germany and Austria-Hungary, and in ships of the Dreadnought type they are weak Eighteen months ago no naval student would have hesitated for a moment in declaring that in a contest between these two groups of powers, victory at sea would have gone to Germany and Austria-Hungary, however great the skill, courage, resourcefulness and endurance exhibited by the seamen of their opponents.

HAD COMMAND OF SEA BEEN LOST!

If Germany and her powerful partner had won the command of the sea, what would have happened? What would have been the fate of France and Russia? They would have been divorced from the seas. Think what that would have meant when the need arose for more guns, more ammunition, and more military supplies of all descriptions—and for food! For any years Germany, planning war as a deliberate act of policy, had been getting in from the sea all that she thought she would require to supplement her own resources; the countries opposed to her had not wanted war, and therefore, had not made such thorough preparation. The war came at Germany's selected moment. If there had been no British navy in the 'ring,' the German fleet, with the support of the men-of-war of Austria-Hungary, would have declared in those circumstances.

"The day of preparation is ended; the day of battle has come; you shall have no ships of any kind at sea, bearing munitions or anything else, until you have conceded the terms of peace which we will dictate."

The Invisible Dreadnought.

The intervention of the British fleet made all the difference, because it was, and is, nearly twice as strong as the German navy It neutralized the whole of the naval force which Germany had created at an expenditure of about £300,000,000. There has been no great naval battle No, but that has increased and not decreased the work of the British fleet. It would have been a great gain, if even at some loss, the German high sea fleet could have been destroyed. Then the British fleet's work would have been done. As things are to-day, British men-of-war must maintain, week in and week out, by night as well as by day, an unceasing watch and ward in the North Sea. There is no respite, however, rough the seas, however intense the cold, however dense the fog. What a task the British navy has to perform! There are about a score of Dreadnoughts, besides 20 older battleships, and 330 other men-of-war, on the other side of the British ships, which are shown on the film. The enemy vessels are not visible in the pictures, but they exist and they are ever on the alert to come forth; they are always awaiting their opportunity. It is the unceasing duty of the British navy to prevent the stupendous naval power of Germany being exerted against France, Russia and Italy.

A Great British Tradition.

The films represent ships, but they also represent a great British national tradition which goes back hundreds of years. An army can be created in a few years, the British fleet is the work of centuries. The very ships shown in the pictures and all the organizations ashore and afloat essential to their efficiency cost the ransom not of one, but of a dozen kings, and many years of hard work. At the time when the war opened, the British people were devoting to their fleet over a quarter of their national revenue. They had been spending on this lavish scale of generations.

Sea power is a plant of very slow growth. Even in England it takes three years to build a battleship or a large armoured cruiser. When Germany and Austria decided to plunge Europe into war, the British fleet possessed 104 large armoured ships—battleships and large cruisers. There were nearly 90 smaller cruisers, each one having taken over two years to build; about 200 destroyers, each requiring about eighteen months for construction; over 10 torpedo boats, each the product of over a year's labour, and 75 submarines, taking quite as long to build. Just calculate what all this amounts to! Three hundred and twelve years in large armoured ships, 180 years in cruisers, 300 years in destroyers, 100 years in torpedo boats, and 75 years in submarines. And then there are all the mine-layers, the repair ships, the hospital ships, the oil fuel vessels, and the hundreds of other auxiliaries of one kind and another, numbering 2,500 in all Those were the resources for securing the essential command of the sea, which the British people threw into the balance. It is because those forces were so overwhelming in their influence that the Germans hate the English worse than any other people. They hate them because they have done so much to prevent Germany's dreams being realised.

Germany, which lives by overseas trade, and by that means also supplies her armies, cannot win in the war as long as the British fleet holds the North Sea. That is the solid lesson which these films teach.

Submarines At Work

"Britain Prepared" Shows Life Aboard British Submarines In The German Ocean

Did you ever have any curiosity to know what it is like to go down under the ocean in a submarine? The "British Prepared" pictures take you down—to all intents and purposes. You see the long, narrow craft floating on the surface one minute, with the crew on deck, the hatch off the tower and the flags flying. You notice an officer directing a sailor to polish the lense in the periscope. Then all hands go below, the hatch is fastened in place, and before your eyes the boat slowly sinks and disappears with its living freight beneath the sea. If this were one of those "fake" moving pictures prepared to amuse the crowds who attend ordinary moving picture shows there would be nothing very peculiar about it. But the striking feature about these pictures is that they are real, absolutely true to facts.

For a moment we are left gazing at the level expanse of sea where the submarine disappeared, and then in a flash we are under the sea, too, in the cabin of the submarine. Here we see the officer at the periscope and presently he moves to let us look. We see the reflection of the sea at the surface and by turning the handles we can swing our view all around the horison.

There's a ship! An enemy ship! Quickly the submarine turns and darts toward it, the approach showing plainly in the lenses of the periscope. At last the officer gives the signal. The deadly torpedo is despatched on its mission.

It is all life like, because it is life itself, as lived by the men of the submarines now on duty for the Empire and the allies in the North Sea.

Aeroplanes in Action Like War Eagles In the Sky

Most Modern of All Developments of War, Aeroplanes are Most Thrilling and Spectacular —MovingPictures taken above Clouds Give Spectators Full Realism.

It was not so long ago that Santos Dumont won a prize by flying around the Paris Tower in a dirigible balloon. Now we have dirigible balloons sailing across the North Sea from Germany to England, and aeroplanes—heavier than air machines—rising to meet them like a swarm of sparrows after a crow.

Stay at home people do not realise how quickly the times are changing. Nor do they realise from the censored news despatches how well England is keeping abreast of them.

The film, "Britain Prepared," gives a splendid idea of the British aeroplanes. They circle and sail like a flock of gulls with all the precision of living birds. A realistic idea of what the airmen have to do is given by the picture taken from one flying machine in pursuit of another, with the clouds below like distant mountains, and real Mother Earth out of sight altogether. This titantic struggle has emphasised many a change in the art of war since the days of Napoleon's little armies with their clumsy little cannon and their single shot muskets. But fighting in an aeroplane with machine guns above the clouds is surely the last word.

Duke of Connaught Accepts Invitation To The Opening

Presentation of the Imperially authorized moving picture film "Britain Prepared," opens simultaneously in Ottawa and Toronto, on Monday, April 17. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught have signified their intention of being present, and have given their authority for the announcement that "Britain Prepared" will be under vice-regal patronage wherever presented throughout Canada.

The following is a facsimile reproduction of the letter from Government House, Ottawa, stamping the film with vice-regal sanction and approval:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
OTTAWA.

22nd March 1916..

Dear Sir,

With reference to your letter of 20th instant, I write to say that Their Royal Highnesses will be very pleased to be present at the Russell Theatre on Monday, April 17th to witness the performance of "Britain Prepared," as requested. I am further to say that His Royal Highness will be very glad to give his patronage to "Britain Prepared" throughout Canada, and that you are hereby authorized to announce that it is under his Patronage.

I am, Dear Sir,
Yours faithfully,
Arthur D. Snadden
Private Secretary.

KITCHENER'S ARMY IN TRAINING IS SHOWN IN EVERY DETAIL

Four Million Britons Have Been Trained for War Since August, 1914. Film Show An England Under Arms—Historic Record.

"BRITAIN PREPARED"

When Kitchener stepped into the War Office at the beginning of this war and ordered a bed to be set up there so as to facilitate his plan to work about 23 hours a day until the war was over everybody in the British Empire breathed a sigh of satisfaction. Everybody knew that there was a Man on the job. The first announcement Kitchener made was that he expected the war to last three years, and that he wanted an army of a million men.

With what enthusiasm the young men of the British Isles answered that call, the despatches have told us something. There have been other calls since then and 4,000,000 men are now in training. We have heard something of the urgent appeals and talk of conscription suggesting that appeals have not met with all the response anticipated. But there has not been any adequate idea of the immensity of the response which has been made. Four million men training in Great Britain mean a vastly different Britain to the Island's tourists, visited in the peaceful times before the war. The country is an armed camp. Trenches seam the face of the land. Cavalry manoeuvre. Big guns boom at targets or in tests of one kind and another. Long columns of marching soldiers are met with on the country roads. Motorcycle machine gun companies dash by. War is in the air.

"Britain Prepared" shows Britain at war, in the midst of a war time activity she has not known since the fall of the first Napoleon. All the details of Kitchener's huge volunteer army with which he intends to smash through the German lines when the time comes, is shown as in life. The movement and action of these stirring times in the Mother Country are more than suggested. They are graphically reproduced by that wonderful invention, the moving picture camera

The film covers every possible phase of life in the navy and the army. It sets off with a pictorial account of the recruiting and the drilling of volunteers, showing the response to the recruiting officer's appeal, recruiting emerging khaki-clad from the barracks, the first drill and subsequent courses of training. It follows with the record of the activities of a munitions factory. One sees the shrapnel first as a mass of steel rods ready to be cut into lengths for forging; then the removal of the rough shell cases to the machine shop, the turning and lathe work, with women at the lathes; the making of fuses, and the packing and transport organisation.

IN THE TRENCHES.

The next section is given to trench work, part of the soldier's training in England. The spade brigade is seen at work digging trenches, rests are fitted to dug-outs, and barbed wire entanglements are erected. The audience then watches the manning of the trenches, sees how a trench is rushed, and notes the bombing activities during the charge. New trench weapons are shown, like the Lewis gun, and and new types of catapults. Sapping and mining enterprises are worked out, and a very realistic exhibition of a trench-enfilading attack concludes the section.

COMMISSARIAT.

One of the most interesting "chapters" of this long romance is that which records the methods of provisioning an army. The army bakery which posed for the photographers, holds the record of turning out 172,000 pounds of bread per day. The pictures show the men mixing the flour, kneading the dough, weighing and shaping the loaves, and cooking them; they also make clear the rather puzzling task of feeding large bodies of soldiers on the march.

In the next section His Majesty the King reviews a contingent of the new army off to the front. Part II. is given over to the navy, "the sure shield of Britain and Empire." Four of these sections are reproduced in natural colours with wonderful effect, by the Urban Kinemacolor process. The building and the launching of a battleship at the works of Messrs. Vickers is shown in full detail, followed by the manufacture of naval gun shells, the loading of a 15-inch gun, and testing effects, etc.

Women Co-operate In National Task

Great Industrial Transformation In Britain Shown by Historical Moving Pictures

"BRITAIN PREPARED"

Thousands of Women Work at Men's Jobs in Munition Factories

Without the women of Britain 4,000,000 men could not be maintained in the British army. The disturbance to production would be too great. The men in the army are not only dependent upon women for creature comforts like socks, mufflers, and little luxuries of various minor kinds possible to a soldier on active serive. He is dependent upon the women for necessities. Women are employed in the clothing factories where the soldiers' uniforms are made. They are employed in the footwear factories, in the knitting factories and in the textile plants where army materials are woven.

But further than that, women have taken the men's places in the machine shops and iron working plants. They are seen working at the trip hammers and at the rolls which shape molten steel. They are to be seen operating lathes. There are thousands of women at work in the British munitions factories. If it were not for the women it might be that the big guns would run short of shells and the rifles would lack cartridges.

The film "Britain Prepared," devotes a good deal of its length to the activity of the women, and rightly, for the part that British women play is one of the most remarkable features of the war. Its shows among other scenes, the interior of some of the vast Vickers ammunition factories where thousands of women and girls are seen actually at work making shells and cartridges. Some of them are mere girls—children—but they are all earnestly busy, and apparently fully realise the importance of their share in the national task of keeping the men at the front supplied with the necessary powder and shot to blow the Germans back into their places.

Lawn Bowlers Out in Force

The beautiful weather of yesterday brought out a large number of bowlers. The green was in good condition and was thoroughly enjoyed by the many guests of the club.

The regular games will not begin until about the 12th of June and in the meantime the club extends a most cordial invitation to all who enjoy bowling, to come and make full use of the green for the next three weeks—come and be the guests of the club, bring a pair of rubber shoes with you, or a pair of rubbers, there are plenty of spare bowls. Come and enjoy yourselves.

The club will be pleased to see a large number avail themselves of this general invitation.

The green is fully lighted at night, so come at any time that may be convenient for you.

The Trip Up The Lakes

An Enjoyable Visit to Stoney Lake —An Early Spring Glimpse of its Picturesque Grandeur

The crowd of pleasure seekers that availed themselves of the trip to Stoney Lake—"The Lake of 800 Islands"—on Victoria Day, had a delightful outing. The steamer "Islinda," of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company, Capt. P. Young, took on the passengers from Peterborough and Lakefield at 9 o'clock a.m., and made a quick and pleasant trip to Young's Point. The day was a perfect one for a steamer trip and the company social and agreeable on arriving at Young's Point locks, the excursionists were requested to leave their steamer and transfer over to another boat lying waiting at the upper end of the locks, which was a rather unusual surprise, and not very well relished. They were told that the lower lock was out of repair and not in working order.

The rest of the trip up Clear and Stoney Lake was full of enjoyment, invigorating and attractive. The early spring verdure and scenery lent additional charm to the trip. Numbers of owners of summer cottages were on board, who were visiting their island homes for the first time after the long winter. It was learned that those who had opened their cottages thus far, found nothing disturbed, or had any damage been done to their property. Quite a number came up the previous Saturday and had been busy planting flowers and "fixing up" for the season.

The sail covered the lake from Burleigh to Belvedere—the steamer reaching Lakefield again shortly after 5 o'clock, and the Peterborough section arrived home at 7 o'clock.

BASEBALL

The junior baseball team of the Queen Mary school won an easy victory over the South Central team on Tuesday afternoon, the score being 27-1. The game, although scheduled to be played on the King Edward grounds, was played at Queen Mary.

The batteries were: For Queen Mary, Baraclough and Hamilton; for South Central, Fuller, Wright, Madill and Pethick.

Mr. Gilbert umpired satisfactorily.

LACROSSE

There was a lively workout at the Oval yesterday morning. The vim displayed by the intermediates and juniors who were represented by a number of the junior hockey players, points to a very successful season for the club. The hockeyists took to the game of the gutted stick like a duck would to water. There will be an other workout to-night, also on Saturday afternoon. The following players are requested to put in an appearance: Legros, Ahearn, Frost, Cherrett, Lipsett, Phillips, Klein, Fred Graham, Hamilton, Kearney, Bartley, Lower, Banty Evans and all the intermediates.

The other lucky numbers have been found.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

Usual Dose of Remorse Following a Holiday Was Dealt With This Morning

To be the recipient of liquor from a nephew who was on his way to Saskatoon was a misfortune that befell William Beaver on Victoria Day. Beaver, who is an Indian, was charged with being under the influence of liquor contrary to the statute respecting treaty Indians. The accused, who said he hailed from Alderville, was fined five dollars. When asked where he obtained the liquor, Beaver regaled the court with something original in the way of an alibi.

"I suppose the nephew is on his way to Saskatoon?" asked Chief Thompson.

"Yes," replied Beaver with an emphatic shake of the head.

Celebrated Too Freely.

Silas Green of Havelock and William McMaster, who resides in the same vicinity, were each fined two dollars for celebrating too freely on the holiday.

Arthur Livingstone will spend the best part of a week on the hill. It is the intention of the police to look into Livingstone's record. This morning he was charged with vagrancy. Mr. G. N. Gordon, who appeared for the accused, said that his client had once been employed as a munition inspector at Welland.

Proper Equipment Now Assured, etc.

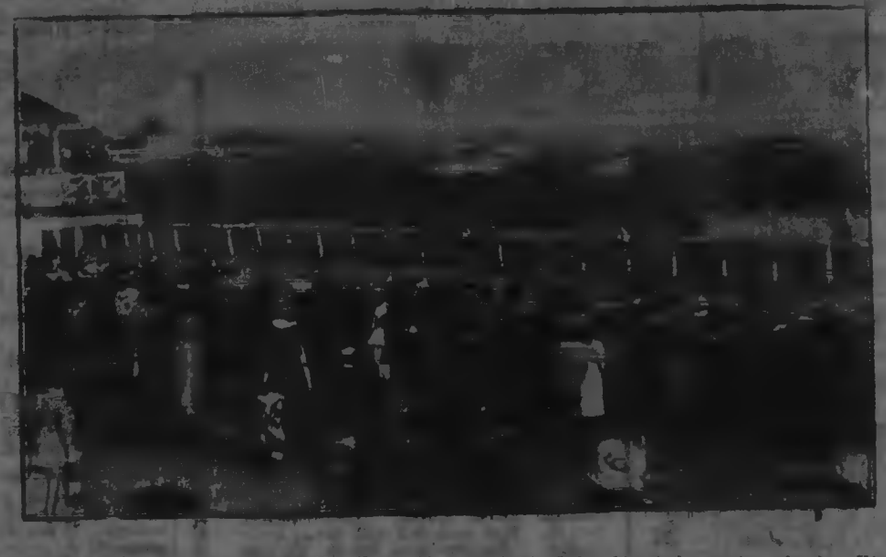
Thursday morning cheques of $50.00 and $25.00 to be added. There is always money in the country when the proper inducements are offered, as was in this case. By the end of the week the full returns will be at hand.

For a half hour, at the rooms, after supper, general remarks were exchanged. In recognition of services, the chairman, Mr. D. O'Connell, had conferred on him the traditional Celtic title of "The O'Connell," an order of merit reserved for the few. Well deserved and to be remembered for the future. So with mutual congratulations, the Old Guard disbanded for the present, to come together when the emergency arises. For who can so well do things in such optimistic spirit? And drive effort to a successful conclusion?

The teams announced their takings for the day as follows:

A. E. Gillespie	$131.50
Adam McElheney	33.50
W. H. Oke	125.00
W. H. Dunsford	219.75
F. Whitehouse	69.10
C. Pogue-father	536.25
Chris. Graham	189.00
W. Goodier	158.35
Jos. Pigeard	685.00
	2,146.17
Previous day	31,083.00
	$3,229.17

Agreed To—"I am doing my best to get ahead," asserted Chollie. "Well, you certainly need one," assented Dollie.



WINNING THE KING'S PLATE RACE.—Photo shows the finish in the fifty-sixth running of the King's Plate Race at Woodbine Park, Toronto on Saturday last, with Mr. Joseph E. Seagram's three horses taking off the colors for first, second and third place. Mandarin is leading with Gala Water second and Gala Day third. Lieut. Gov. Sir John Hendrie presented Mr. E. F. Seagram with the honours, in the absence of Mr. J. E. Seagram who was through sickness, unable to attend.

MILITARY NEWS

Just stayed in and got a good rest. I only heard from Harold once since going to England. He will get the very best treatment and care there, so do not worry. I received several letters, but the parcels have not arrived yet. Please do not send any more parcels at the present, especially socks, as we have dozens of pairs here and they are only going to waste. Everybody is sending bales of them; also do not send any canned goods or eats, as we get lots to eat on this job. We are attached to Brigade Headquarters, and they look after us the very best. The only thing I would like is a few good cigars now and again, and some pipe tobacco. I get The Examiner, Top Notch and populars O.K. Thanks very much as they sure do pass away the time, and keep one's mind off things. I am glad the Red are getting along so well, and I am hoping to meet some of my old townspeople soon.

Kindest regards to everyone, so good-bye. Now write soon and often.

A farewell reception will be given on Saturday evening at 610 Bethune street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Gilbert by Sergt. P. Victor who recently returned from the front. Sergt Victor very kindly accepted the hearty invitation by Bandsman H. Gilbert on Saturday last for a reception which was held at the above address and spent a very happy evening. Refreshments were provided by Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Innis Sergt. Victor extends a hearty invitation to all the boys who were present on that occasion, namely:

Bandsmen 'Dad' Dyer, Blunt Morris, Lance. Corp. Bird, Bruce, Warrell, Brown, Grange, Miles and Woods.

Mr. Myland Elected A Vice President

Mr. L. G. Myland of the Examiner was elected Vice-President of the Ontario Labour Educational Association at the annual convention in Berlin on Wednesday. It was decided that at next year's convention every delegate must be able to show at least three different union labels on his person before taking his seat. It was also urged that the study of political economy be added to the present Public School and High School curricula. The Association will ask the Ontario Department of Education to establish High School scholarships for the benefit of children whose parents cannot afford to send them through the higher schools. These scholarships would of course be competitive.

Yesterday Was a Money Maker

Demonstration Will Net Over $2000 For Battalion Fund

Yesterday's demonstration at Exhibition Park will add over $1,900 to the fund of the 93rd Battalion, to which the proceeds are being donated by the societies who had the arrangements in charge. The gate and grandstand receipts amounted to $1,300, and the ladies who had the refreshment booths and midway in charge, state that their profits will be approximately $450.

UNION STREET BLAZE QUICKLY SUBDUED

The Fire Department was called to 440 Union street, the residence of Lake Mahaney, where a small blaze in the second storey was quickly extinguished. It had burst through the room near the chimney, and in a few more moments might have caused serious damage.

Smokes Brighten The Hardships of the Soldiers

The Overseas Club, who have organized Canada's Tobacco Fund, are in receipt of a letter from the 1st Newfoundland Regiment, from which the following is an extract:

"I have much pleasure in informing you that the two cases containing tobacco and cigarettes arrived here safely and in good condition about a week ago.

I can assure you they are very much appreciated, for such articles are scarce here and whatever they had saved up previous to the receipt of your cases, was completely washed away with the rain, so that the issue of these helped in no small way to lighten their hardships, and to make the time pass brighter.

We are most thankful to the donors. I feel certain that our men will answer the cards, as it is the only way they can have of showing their appreciation.

To you our thanks are also due for so kindly remembering us."

Won't our readers do something to lighten the hardships of the men in their own home battalions, many of whom are suffering for want of the consoling weed? No matter how small your contributions may be, it will help. Send it to the Editor and he will see that it goes forward without delay, or take it to the Post Office or Bank, for all of these institutions are collecting for Canada's Tobacco Fund (organized by the Overseas Club).

An Appeal For Assistance

Playgrounds Association Wish to Collect Rags, Rubbers and Papers

The good house-wives of the city have responded nobly to the Playgrounds Committee's appeal for rags and many hundreds of neatly-tied bars await collection. The committee also have considered prices pro and con., and have chosen what they consider the best market for rags, rubbers and papers. But in between comes the enormous task of collection, and in this we must appeal to those who have vehicles which they could loan for the collection, or influence which can secure such vehicles. Of course a motor-truck is the ideal way of collection, but anything that will "go" will be a help. Let this be your part in the magic work of turning unpleasant things, such as rags, and old rubbers, into places of joy and mirth for the children of our city.

'Phone 916 or 531 before Saturday, and offer to help us.

The collection will take place next week.

RUSSIAN ARMY GROUPS UNITE FOR MOVE ON BAGDAD

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, May 25.—No news has yet been received from Russian sources regarding the junction effected between Russian cavalry and Lieut.-Gen. Sir George Gorringe's force below Kut-el-Amara, in Mesopotamia, and except as a present forerunner of a real union of the main Russian and British forces in Mesopotamia, which is expected in the near future by military observers, the event is not regarded here as of especial importance. It furnishes, however, an interesting indication that the activity of the Russian forces in Persia is by no means confined to points mentioned in the official statements.

The Russian cavalry band which joined the British probably set out from Kermanshah along the difficult mountain roads paralleling the western border of the Persian province of Luristan, and succeeded in crossing the Mesopotamian frontier somewhere east of Kut-el-Amara.

There are other indications that, instead of striking at isolated points along the Mesopotamian border, the Russians are gradually uniting their various army groups and now present a connecting front which curves in a wide arc from south of Bitlis to the neighbourhood of Khanikin, northeast of Bagdad. From almost every point along this crescent pressure is being brought to bear in the direction of Bagdad.

MANY VISITORS IN THE CITY YESTERDAY

There was no holiday exodus yesterday. The outgoing traffic on the G.T.R. yesterday was scarcely heavier than on any ordinary day. But the incoming trains from Lakefield, Lindsay, Port Hope and Belleville brought large contingents from the towns and villages for the battalion farewell celebration. On the P.R. there were quite a few up to Toronto. The morning train had their quotas of visitors from Havelock and Norwood.

Interesting Coincidence in Connection With Note Found in Wallace's Woods

To unearth a promissory note given by Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., to a Montreal firm twenty-eight years ago and lost in Wallace's Woods a few months later, was the interesting experience of Master Jack Turner, son of Mr. Achilles Turner, the other day. The peculiar coincidence of the affair lies in the fact that the note was lost by one of Mr. Turner's sons, when a young boy, he used to make trips to the woods, and was recovered by a grandson, on a similar expedition, these long years after. The note was in an excellent state of preservation, the writing thereon being easily legible. It was dated March the, first, 1888, and was due two months later. It was for the sum of one hundred and ninety-two dollars. Evidently it had been covered with leaves and was thus protected from wind and rain.

A Tasty Summer "Snack" for the warm days when the appetite craves "something different" for luncheon, for picnics or any kind of outdoor excursion is Triscuit, the Shredded Whole Wheat Wafer. It is made of the whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded and baked. Toast it in the oven to restore its crispness and spread over it butter, soft cheese or marmalade. Its snappy, tasty aroma is a delight to the palate, supplying the greatest amount of nutriment in smallest bulk. A deliciously wholesome toast. It is ready-cooked, easily carried, is strengthening and satisfying.

Gen. Brusati Has Been Relieved of His Command of the Italian Forces

Austrian Troops Have Stormed and Captured Strongly Fortified Italian Positions at Chiesa, 21 Miles Northwest of Vicenza.

LONDON, May 26.—Gen. Brusati, commanding the Italian forces compelled to retreat before the Austrian offensive, has been relieved of his command. Austrian troops have stormed and captured the strongly fortified Italian positions at Chiesa, 21 miles northwest of Vicenza, after three days' battle, Vienna reported to-day.

The Austrian victory drives a wedge in the Italian front and will force the Italian left wing in the Adige Valley to fall back more than five miles upon the town of Ala.

THE IMPATIENT TULIPS

Down in the dark mold
All snugly tucked away,
All the long winter
The little tulips stay,
Wrapped in their warm cloaks,
A message they await Resting snug but hoping
That spring will not be late.

Once through the sunshine,
They thought they heard the call,
Pushed through the leafy mold
The little tulips all.
Pickle the sunshine
And blue skies o'er their heads.
Soon they all regretted
They'd left their cosy beds.

But a soft cloud floating
In the wintry skies
Stayed a moment list'ning
And heard the tulips' cries.
Down came a blanket
Of fluffy, spotless snow,
Drowsy grew the tulips
In no more haste to grow.

—Gertrude Urquhart.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

The Council at Jerusalem. Acts 15 1-35.

Golden Text: For freedom did Christ set us free. Gal. 5:1a.

1. Verse 1-5. Why is it that God permits undoubtedly good men to have some very wrong opinions?

2. When good men differ in opinion, what is the better way in order to reach an understanding?

3. When a professed Christian gets angry with another Christian, on a mere matter of opinion, what spirit does he show, and would you say, or not, that he has backslidden from the love of God?

4. Circumcision no doubt originated from health considerations, and for physical cleanliness. State when God first made it the sign, or token betwen Him and Abraham, and his seed, and to whom the rite of circumcision and God's covenant extended? (See Gen. 17).

5. How, and when, was circumcision abolished?

6. Is the practice of any rite, or the belief of any doctrine, essential to salvation? Give your reasons.

7. Verse 6-11. Is experience of God, and his dealings with us, conclusive proof of the will of God, in the matters which the experience covers? Why?

8. What better method can you suggest for church courts to find out the will of God on any matter, than by thorough discussion?

9. Would you say or not, and why, that those in that day who taught that circumcision was essential to salvation, were untrue men, as well as narrow?

10. What is the difference between the "yoke" of the law, and the 'yoke' of Jesus? (V. 10).

11. Verse 12. Recall some of the wonders done through Paul and Barnabas, among the Gentiles, and say what bearing they had upon the dispute concerning circumcision?

12. Verses 13-21. Who was James, and how much did he figure among the apostles?

13. James the brother of Jesus, was the president of this council; is it probable that his address was of the nature of the judgment of the council on this question of circumcision?

14. Verses 22-29. There seems to have been no formal motion passed by the council, but they appear to have reached an unanimous decision as outlined by the address of the president, would you say, or not, and why that we are bound to take this decision as the voice of God?

15 In what particulars is the wisdom of the council shown in settling this dispute?

16. Were each of the commands as given in verse 29, intended to be of lasting obligation, or were some of them only temporary?

17. From whom are Christians to get guidance on all essential matters to-day?

18. Verses 30-35. There never will be a time when disputes may not occur in the church, and between individuals; how should they always be settled?

19 Did this dispute in the church hurt or help it, and what reason is there to believe that God always over rules trouble, whoever may be the cause of it, for the good of his children?

Lesson for Sunday June 4, 1916. The Call of the West. Acts 15:36—16 15.

Turks Treat Prisoners Well Despite Reports, Captain Says

That, contrary to the popular conception, the Turks treat their prisoners extremely well is the information contained in letters written by Captain Gwatkin-Williams, who was an officer of the Tara, and which were published recently in the English newspapers.

Captain Gwatkin-Williams declares the Turks always managed to get food for the prisoners, although it sometimes meant that they would have to do without themselves. An extremely interesting glimpse of camp life in the African deserts is furnished in his writings.

"I am a prisoner of war," he writes, "the Tara having been sunk by a submarine and our boats towed into a port in Tripoli, where we are interned. Life is very simple; we have rice and a biscuit each day. The Turkish officers are most kind and are no better off than ourselves, as the country is a desert, without houses, water or food. We live in a cave and are in no danger from the Senussi, as we are protected by the Turkish army.

"We fought the ship to the end, and the guns were firing until they were under water. I went down with her, fully dressed and without a lifebelt. Most of us were naked when taken ashore, but the Turks have kindly set up up in Arab clothes which are very nice, and we are gradually getting more comfortable."

Continuing in a letter written later, but which reached home at the same time, Captain Gwatkin-Williams says: "We are now camped by a well in the deserts of Cyrenaica, where we expect to remain to the end of the war. We get the same food that the soldiers have a teacupful of flour and a teacupful of rice every day, and a week ago we had meat.

"A Turkish officer is passing through our camp on his way to Sollum and has kindly promised to take letters for us. But, of course, I have no idea when they will be able to go on from there—perhaps some months—but General Nuri Pachia is so kind that I am sure he has made some arrangements by now, through Geneva or some other way. We have had no news of our homes or the outside world for seven weeks now and we long to get letters and know that our dear ones know we are alive.

"We have been starving ourselves for a week so as to have a good feed, and this is the list of our good things. Don't they make your mouth water? Two kids, legs and ribs only, between ninety-five of us: a pudding, rice boiled and mixed with flour and a long-saved lump of sugar; soup made from the meat and thickened with flour and rice and some salt, if we can get any; bread, lovely stuff made of flour and water and baked in the ashes for half an hour; and boiled rice, half a pound each.

"We were hoping for tea and sugar as well, but they have not arrived in time. In any case, we will have a lovely big feed and go to bed not a bit hungry. It rained yesterday—the first time in eleven months—and we got very wet and cold but in God's mercy it is fine again to-day, and we are dry again. We wonder much how the war is going on, too, but food is our one main and nearly sole tonic of conversation and absorbs all our energies.

"We have all got tents of a sort to cover us now, and the Senussi officer in charge of us is kindness itself, but he can get very little in this desert country. The men eat enormous quantities of snails, but I have not taken to them yet and am entirely vegetarian. I exchange my half ounce of meat for part of another man's rice ration, an arrangement that suits both of us. I get quantity and he gets quality. We hope some day to get onion oil or tomato sauce to flavour our rice with. It will be a very great treat."

HASTINGS SOLDIERS HAVE DEPARTED

Joined Their Battalion the 139th of Cobourg, of Which They Were a Detachment

Special to The Examiner.

HASTINGS, May 25.—The continued cold, wet weather is not very favorable for seeding and the farmers are making slow progress in the Spring work.

Heavy frosts are reported during the week, but it is hoped little damage resulted therefrom.

Friends of Miss Winnie Gilchrist of Campbellford, formerly of Hastings, extend congratulations on the occasion of her marriage to Mr. H Burleigh of that town, and join in wishing the happy young couple bon voyage through life.

Mr. Pringle has opened business in Westwood, in the store formerly occupied by Mr. John Sargent. His many friends wish him success.

The "boys in khaki" have marched away having received orders to report at Cobourg at once. A very short space of time elapsed between receiving the orders and leaving, and consequently the citizens were unable to prepare a formal farewell. However, although the special train was due to leave 7.10 a.m. A large crowd gathered at the station to bid the boys good-bye. While the train was speeding in the local band enlivened the air with stirring patriotic music, while farewell and parting words were exchanged. The call "all aboard" was heard and pretty soon the soldier boys were off, to take up quarters with the 139th Battalion, at Cobourg.

Congratulations are extended to Dr. Geo. Gibson, formerly of Hastings, on his honours he has obtained in the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Toronto, he having secured third place in a class of sixty-five.

The Public Library has been placed in Mr. E. Tate's store and the public will be genially waited upon.

An interesting letter is to hand from Lieut. F. Hubbs, fomerly editor of the Hastings Star, but now in Belgium. It was sent to the I. O. D. E., thanking them for the welcome parcels, which the boys have recently received, and hopes that more socks etc. are forthcoming. He states that the Hastings bunch is looking well, but getting plenty of hard work to do. He also says that Pte. Barrie's death was a great personal loss to them, as their numbers were none too large at best.

Capt. W. Thomson of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough, visited at his home here on Wednesday last.

A special train was run to Cobourg on Wednesday, 17th May, to accommodate those who were anxious to visit that place for Field Day.

Mr. F. Stewart of Toronto visited friends here during the past week.

Mrs. Masson of Campbellford was in Hastings for a short time visiting her son, Lieut. Masson.

Pte. E. Walton of the 93rd, Peterborough, spent a day during the week with Hastings friends.

Mr. Arthur Fleming has purchased a new Overland car, and Mr. W. Stillman a new Ford. Still they come.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Atkinson spent Sunday with friends in Havelock.

A little son has arrived to brighten the hearts and home of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick of Asphodel.

Mr. Tom Hill of Peterborough was in town for Sunday.

Mr. T. Coughlan has been on a visit to Toronto.

Mr. Harry Scriver of the United States is visiting his sister, Mrs. D Scriver, of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Fleming of Omemee are visiting at his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing and daughter, Elsie, of Norwood spent Sunday with Mrs. N. Beavis.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Philips of Campbellford visited friends here during the past week.

Miss Flossie Carter has been visiting with friends in Havelock

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Plantard, Mfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

Germans Spread Vast Peace Praopganda

NEW YORK, May 25.—From an official source it was learned to-day that the Germans are sparing no effort in spreading their vast peace propaganda. This propaganda has one of two objects. But it is doubtful whether the hope of the Prussians is to split the allied Powers by offering favourable terms of peace which Germans think might be accepted by one or more of the allied countries or whether Germany feels that her doom has come.

This latter object is not given much credence, although it is known that in several of the larger cities of the German Empire in the last few days there have been riots for food and riots in which the battlers prayed for peace.

"The Hohenzollerns must go!" has been the shout of crowds and in certain places where food has been so scarce that a mere thought of Prussian tyranny was bitter, the cry was "A republic for Germania."

Children Need A Warm Table Drink

Many parents understand that tea and coffee hinder mental development and body growth in their children, but are puzzled how to gratify the little folk's desire for a warm drink, without harming them.

For years now, in a considerable number of Canadian homes, the problem has been solved by

Instant Postum

This pure food-drink is made of prime wheat, roasted with a bit of pure wholesome molasses. It has fine color and aroma, a delicious, snappy taste, and is so pleasing that the older folks join the children in this wholesome beverage.

Where the rest of the family stick to coffee, Instant Postum for the children causes no extra work. A level teaspoonful in a cup with hot water and cream and sugar to taste, makes a delightful drink instantly.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS.

The Nettie B., when compelled to surrender her prisoner, had rounded Nova Scotia and was on the home-stretch toward Quoddy Roads. She was, in fact, less than thirty miles away from Grande Mignon Island. And Code had thought with a quiet and bitter homesickness of the joy just a sight of her would be.

He longed for the white Swallow-tail lighthouse with its tin swallow above; for the tumbled green-cloth-ed granite of the harbour approaches; for the black, sharp-toothed reefs that showed on the half-water near the can-buoy, and for the procession of stately headlands to north and south, fading from sight in a mantle of purple and gray.

But most of all for the crescent of stony beach, the nestle of white, cottages along the King's Road, and the green background of the mountain beyond, with Mallaby House in the very heart of it.

This had been his train of thought when Burns had opened the door to deliver him up to the gunboat, and now it returned to him as the stanch vessel under him winged her way across the blue afternoon sea.

He wondered if the Albatross would pass close enough inshore for him to get a glimpse of Mignon's tall and forbidding fog-wreathed headlands. Just a moment of this familiar sight, he felt, would be balm to his bruised spirit. He felt that he could gather strength from the sight of home. He had been among aliens so long!

But no nearer than just a glimpse. He made a firm resolution never to push the prow of the Lass into Flagg Cove until he stood clear of the charges against him. He admitted that it might take years, but his resolution was none the less strong.

His place of confinement was on the starboard side of the Albatross, and he was gratified after a few minutes to see the sun pouring through his porthole.

Despair had left him now, and he was quietly cheerful. With something akin to pleasure that the struggle was over, and that events were out of his hands for the time being, he settled down in his chair and picked up a magazine.

He had hardly opened it when a thought occurred to him. If the course was north a little west, how did it happen that the sun streamed into his room, which was on the east side of the ship on that course?

He sprang to the port and looked out.

The sun smote him full in the face. He strained his eyes against the horizon that was unusually clear for this foggy sea, and would have sworn that along its edge was a dark line of land. The conclusion was inevitable.

The Albatross was flying directly south as fast as her whole spread of canvas could take her.

Schofield could not explain this phenomenon to himself, nor did he try. The orders that a man-of-war sailed under were none of his affair, and if the captain chose to institute a hunt for the north pole before delivering a prisoner in port, naturally he had a perfect right to do so. It was possible, Code told himself, that another miserable wretch was to be picked up before they were both landed together.

Whatever course Captain Foraker intended to lay in the future his present one was taking him as far as possible away from Grande Mignon, St. Andrew's, and St. John's. And for this meagre comfort Code Schofield was thankful.

The sun remained above the horizon until six o'clock, and then suddenly plumped into the sea. The early September darkness rushed down and, as it did so, a big Tungsten light in the ceiling of Code's room sprang into a brilliant glow, the iron cover to the porthole being shut at the same instant.

A few moments later the door of his cell was unceremoniously opened and a man entered bearing an armful of fresh clothing.

"Captain Schofield," he said, with the deference of a servant, "the captain wishes your presence at dinner. The ship's barber will be here presently. Etiquette provides that you wear these clothes. I will fix them and lay them out for you. If you care for a bath, sir, I will draw it—"

"Say, look here," exclaimed our hero with a sudden and unexpected touch touch of asperity, "if you're trying to kid me, old side-whiskers, you're due for the licking of your life."

He got deliberately upon his feet and removed the fishing-coat which he had worn uninterruptedly since the night at St. Pierre.

"I thought I'd read about you in that magazine or something, and had fallen asleep, but here you are still in the room. I'm going to see whether you're alive or not. No one can mention a bath to me with impunity."

He made a sudden grab for the servant, who stood with mouth open, uncertain as to whether or not he was dealing with a lunatic.

Before he could move, Code's hard, strong hands closed upon his arms in a grip that brought a bellow of pain. In deadly fear of his life, he babbled protests, apologies, and pleadings in an incoherent medley that would have satisfied the most toughened skeptic. Code released him, laughing.

"Well, I guess you're real, all right," he said. "Now if you're in earnest about all this, draw that bath quick. Then, I'll believe you."

Half an hour later Code, bathed, shaved, and feeling like a different man, was luxuriating in fresh linen and a comfortable suit.

"Look here, Martin," he said to the valet, "of course I know that this is no more the gunboat Albatross than I am. The Canadian Government isn't in the habit of treating prisoners in exactly this manner. What boat is this?"

Martin coughed a little before answering. In all his experience he had never been asked to dress the skipper of a fishing vessel.

"I was told to say, sir, in case you asked, that you are aboard the mystery schooner, sir."

"What! The mystery schooner that led the steamer that chase?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, by the great trawl hook! And I didn't know it!"

"No, sir. Remember we came up behind the Nettie B., and when you were transferred you were made to sit facing away from this ship so you would not recognize her."

"Then all the guns were fakes, and the whole business of a man-of-war as well?" cried Code, astonished almost out of his wits by this latest development in his fortunes.

"Yes, sir. The appearances were false, but as for seamanship, sir, this vessel could not do what she does were it not for the strict training aboard her, sir. I'll wager our lads can out-manoeuvre and outsail any schooner of her tonnage on the seas, Gloucestermen included. The navy is easy compared to our discipline."

"But what holds the men to it if it's so hard?"

"Double wages and loyalty to the captain."

"Captain Forzker?"

"Yes, sir. There, sir, that tie is beautiful. Now the waistcoat and coat. If you will permit me, sir, you look, as I might say, handsome, begging your pardon."

Code flushed and looked into the glass that hung against the wall of his cabin. He barely recognized the clean-shaven, clear-eyed, broad-shouldered youth he saw there as the rough, salty skipper of the schooner Charming Lass. He wondered with a chuckle what Pete Ellinwood would say if he could see him.

"And now, sir, if you're ready, just come with me, sir. Dinner is at seven, and it is now a quarter to the hour."

Stunned by the wonders already experienced, and vaguely hoping that the dream would last forever, Code followed the bewhiskered valet down a narrow passage carpeted with a stuff so thick that it permitted no sound.

Martin passed several doors — the passage was lighted by small electrics—and finally paused before one on the right-hand side. Here he knocked, and apparently receiving an answer, peered into the room for a moment. Withdrawing his head, he swung the door open as turned to Schofield.

"Go right in, sir" he said, and Code, eager for new wonders, stepped past him.

The room was a small sitting-room lighted softly by inverted bowl-shaped globes of glass as colored as to bring out the full value of the pink velours and satin brocades with which the room was hung and the furniture covered.

For a moment he stared without seeing anything, save that a slight rustling in a far corner diverted his attention. He looked sharply and saw a woman rise from a lounge and come toward him with outstretched hands.

She was Miss Mallaby!

CHAPTER XXIV.
THE SIREN

He saw the glad smile on her lips, the light in her great, lustrous, dark eyes, and the beauty of her faultless body, and yet they all faded to nothing beside the astounding and inexplicable fact that she was in the mystery schooner.

"You here!" he gasped, taking her hand in his big, rough ones and gripping them tight. The impulse to draw her to him in an embrace was almost irresistible, for not only was she lovely in the extreme, but she was from Freekirk Head and home, and his soul had been starved with loneliness and the ceaseless repetition of his own thoughts.

"Yes," she replied in her gentle voice, "I am here. You are surprised?"

"That hardly expresses it," he returned. "So many things have happened to-day that I expect anything now."

"Come let us go in," she said and led him through a doorway that connected with an adjoining room. In the center of it was a small table laid with linen and furnished with glittering silver and glass. "Are you hungry" she asked.

"You know fishermen well enough no to ask that," he laughed, and they sat down. Elsa did not make any tax upon his conversational powers. It as Code himself who first put a pertinent question.

"I take for granted your being here and your living like this," he said "but I am bursting with curiosity. How do you happen to be in this schooner.

"It is my schooner; why shouldn't I be in it?" she smiled.

"Yours?" He was mystified. "But why should you have a vessel like this? You never used one before that I know of."

"True, Code; but I have always loved the sea, and—it amuses me. You remember that sometimes I have been away from Freekirk Head for a month at a time. I have been cruising in this schooner. Once I went nearly as far as Iceland; but that took longer. A woman in my position must do something. I can't sit up in that great big house alone all the time."

The intensity with which she said this put a decidedly new face on the matter. It was just like her to be lonely without Jim, he thought. Naturally a woman with all her money must do something.

"But, Elsa," he protested, "your having the schooner for your own use is all right enough; but why has it always turned up to help me when I needed help most? Really, if I had all the money in the world I could never repay the obligations that you have put me under this summer."

"I don't want you to repay me," she said quietly. "Just the fact that I have helped you and that you appreciate it is enough to make me happy."

He looked steadily into her brown eyes for a few moments. Then her gaze dropped and a dull flush mounted from her neck until it suffused her face.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys.

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uremic poisoning occurs and the person dies, and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his medical opinion without charge—absolutely free. This "Anuric" of Doctor Pierce's is found to be 37 times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system as hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for blood and stomach.

WORRY, DESPONDENCY.

Kidney Disease is suspected by medical men when patients complain of backache or suffer with irregular urination, disturbed, too frequent, scanty or painful passage. The general symptoms are rheumatic pains or neuralgia, headaches, dizzy spells, irritability, despondency, weakness and general misery. Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets.

Driver Gored

Buffalo, May 23.—Frank Wagner, a driver, was gored to death in the East Buffalo stock yards by a bull weighing nearly a ton. Wagner 35 years old, and employed by the firm of Dunning & Stevens, whose the animal that killed him and two other large bulls were awaiting inspection by prospective purchasers. He was cornered into a corner and stooped over. As he did so the bull charged, pinning him to the wall. His abdomen was torn open.

Willie Wertheimer, a cattle dealer, and H. P. Kennedy, of Avon, heard Wagner's groans and peered into the pen. Armed with a pitchfork, and the cause which the cattlemen have, they rushed at the bull and drove him off. By the time that the animal was cornered a number of cattlemen arrived. They summoned medical aid, but Wagner died in a few minutes.

FIRST ACCIDENT OF KIND.

This is the first accident of its kind to have occurred in the yards within the memory of the oldest man there. While the animal was not what might be called mean, there was no reason for supposing it would attack unless molested.

Medical Examiner Stecker was notified. He had the body removed to the morgue. It is understood that Wagner has a brother in the city. If he cannot be located, H. J. Davis of Dunning & Stevens, said that he would arrange for the burial.

The bull was consigned to Meeks, Boren and Miller, commission merchants, by E. B. Prentiss, of Le Roy. It was bought for out of town shipment by Zimmer Bros. Not more than its carcass can be shipped now, however, because immediately after the accident Klinck Bros. were notified. They sent several butchers to the scene. After shooting the animal they had the carcass hauled to their slaughter house in Howard Street.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair with SAGE TEA.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known down-town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A SHREWD MOVE

By SAMUEL E. BRANT

"I wish Mary Blake to like you," said my fiancee to me soon after we became engaged. "If she approves I don't care what any one else thinks of you."

The remark occasioned the first chill that ran through me after receiving the announcement that Ellen loved me and would be mine.

Ellen Thornton and I had met in the summer at a mountain resort, and our engagement occurred in the winter. We lived in cities, and all I knew about her and her antecedents was that she came of an excellent family and was generally liked. I had never heard of her bosom friend, Mary Blake. But when we are congratulated upon the taking of a partner all our friends speak well of the person selected. I can remember congratulating a friend on his engagement with a girl I detested.

I was not so infatuated with Ellen but that I would be glad to hear the truth about her, whatever that truth might be; but, realizing that no one would tell me the truth, I was quite willing to keep my eyes open that I might learn it by observation. The moment I met Miss Blake I saw by her manner that the approval hoped for by my betrothed was wanting. As love is a spark easily enkindled, so is antagonism, though in this case the antagonism came from Miss Blake to me. I was indifferent to her.

"How do you like her?" asked Ellen of me when we were again alone together.

"Very much," I replied with the usual untruthfulness in such cases.

"How does she like me?"

"She thinks you are splendid."

"You don't mean it!"

"Yes, and she predicts that we will be very happy together."

"Indeed!"

"Only possibly for one thing."

"What's that?"

"Well, she says you have a very firm look about you, and she predicts that you'll lead."

This was the tiny hole in the apple through which the worm had crawled. I made no reply. Indeed, no reply was needed. Miss Blake had thrown up her first line of defenses. She had prepared Ellen against transferring the influence exerted by her bosom friend to her lover. I resolved to look horns with my enemy, but in such a way that Ellen would not realise that I was doing so. But I proposed to put Ellen in such a position that she must decide between me and her bosom friend.

I found an opportunity at the whist table. If one desires to pick a quarrel with a woman an excellent way is to secure her for a partner, then point out her misplays. One evening when Ellen, her bosom friend, my chum, Jim Baxter, and I were together I proposed whist and insisted on having Miss Blake for my partner. By simply pointing out to her in the most delicate manner possible her bad plays I finally sent her out of the room in a huff.

"What have you done?" exclaimed Ellen, aghast.

"Nothing of importance. She should be very much obliged to me for teaching her the game."

"You must undo what you have done at once."

"There is nothing to undo. She will soon get over her tiff. I shall pay no attention to it, treating her just the same as ever hereafter."

Ellen was much troubled. A few nights after this a dozen of us young persons were to have a little dance at Mary Blake's home. Before going there Ellen informed me that it would be better if I did not invite Mary to dance, since she had said that if I did she would refuse.

"Indeed," was my reply. "I'm very sorry to hear that."

On the evening in question when the piano began to discourse music for the two-step I stepped up to Mary Blake and asked her to dance. She bowed, said nothing and turned away. This was the end of my part of the little comedy. I knew that her refusal to dance with one who had invited her in her own home was an unpardonable breach of good manners. However, I remained for the evening, dancing with all the other girls in turn.

"What have you done?" exclaimed Ellen as we walked home together. "Didn't I warn you not to ask Mary to dance?"

"You wouldn't surely have had me leave her out, inviting the others, and that, too, in her own home."

"She was perfectly right to refuse your invitation till you had apologised for your rude treatment of her at the card table."

"Refer that point to some elderly person with a fair knowledge of good manners. If the decision is in your favor I will at once apologise to your friend, though I admit I don't know what for."

"To whom shall I refer it?"

"Your mother, and if she decides in my favor you are to ask Mary to do anything your mother may suggest. If she declines you are to decide between your friend and me."

The decision of the referee was that Mary Blake should apologize to me for refusing to dance with me in her own house. Mary declined to do any such thing, and, though it cost Ellen a struggle, she broke with her bosom friend. Since our marriage I have succeeded in convincing my wife of the dangerous position in which she stood.

Wet Weather and Camels.

Camels are very sensitive to moisture. In the region of tropical rains they are usually absent, and if they come into such with caravans the results of the rainy season are greatly feared. The great humidity of the air explains the absence of the camel from the northern slopes of the Atlas and from well wooded Abyssinia. This sensitiveness expresses itself in the character of different races. The finest, most noble looking camels, with short silklike hair, are found in the interior of deserts, as in the Tuareg region in north Africa, and they cannot be used for journeys to moist regions. Even in Fezzan, south of Tripoli, the animals are shorter and fatter, with long coarse hair, and in Nile lands and on coasts it is the same. These animals, too, are less serviceable as regards speed and endurance.

British Red Tape.

An English officer who had been, through mistake, reported "killed in action," on his return from the front went to his bank to cash one of his checks. The clerk at the counter, instead of asking the welcome question, "How will you take it?" looked doubtful and puzzled, stared at the soldier and finally hurried away to seek advice elsewhere. He presently returned with the news that the check could not be cashed. "But you know me, and that is my signature!" exclaimed the astonished officer. "M—yes," said the clerk hesitatingly, "but the fact is, sir, that you're—you're dead, you see, and I'm told we shall require you to give proof to the contrary before we can pay the money."

The Eyes of the Musk Ox.

The skull of the bull musk ox is remarkable for the development of the eye orbits, which project sufficiently beyond the plane of the frontal bones to compensate for the interruption the horns would otherwise make in the range of vision. The musk ox, however, does not seem to rely greatly on keenness of sight, far less on acuteness of hearing, for the ears are of small dimensions and are completely covered by the heavy growth of fur about them. The organs of scent are evidently more highly developed, and they assist of the former his greatest enemies.

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the mornings I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and removes effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in remedying every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SPECIALISTS IN CHINA.

They Know to a Nicety Just Where Their Work Begins and Ends.

The Englishman knows how to serve, and he knows how to be served, says Isaac Taylor Headland in "Home Life in China," but in the matter of service and serving even the Englishman must take a second place, for the Chinaman has specialized service such as has never been done in Great Britain.

We sometimes think we are specialists in the west. We have our eye specialists, a kind of servant of course although I simply use them to illustrate what I wish to say here, but they often combine with the treatment of the eye that of the ear, the nose and the throat. They have not got down to a last analysis of specializing as the Chinese doctor has.

A man had been shot with an arrow, the head of which was buried in the flesh. He tried to pull it out, but the skin had closed over the head, and he was not able to do so. He went to a physician to get him to remove it. The doctor promptly sawed the shaft off close to the skin and then demanded his fee. "But," said the sufferer, "the head of the arrow is still inside."

"Quite right," said the doctor. "I am a specialist. I deal only with outside diseases. If you want the head taken out you will have to go to another specialist who cares for inside ailments."

Sir Humphry Davy.

Sir Humphry Davy married a widow as peculiar as himself. His pet affectation was a lack of time. He was always in a hurry. He pretended that he had no leisure to dress himself, and when a change of linen became necessary he simply put one shirt over another until he was known to have on five or six shirts at a time. Of course he could not wear this amount of apparel without appreciably increasing his size, and his friends not in the secret were sometimes surprised to see him fall off in apparent weight twenty pounds in a day. His wife's great anxiety was to keep him "fit for company," but as he did not care a fig for company she had no easy task, and domestic discord was a common thing.

The Light That Failed.

It was by an accident that Mr. Kipling got his famous title, "The Light That Failed." He had almost decided to call the novel "The Failure," although he was dissatisfied with this. One evening as he was sitting in his study reading by lamplight the light went suddenly down—almost failed, in fact. In a second Kipling jumped up, exclaiming excitedly, "By Jove, I've got it!" Pointing to the lamp, he said, "The Light That Failed."

How Sickly Women May Get Health

If they could only be made to see that half their ills are caused by impure blood, it wouldn't take long to cure them with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Truly a wonderful medicine that invigorates, strengthens, renews. Every tired, worn out woman that tries Dr. Hamilton's Pills will improve rapidly, will have better colour, increased appetite and better digestion.

No better rebuilding tonic can be found than Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are safe, mild and health giving. For forty years, Dr. Hamilton's Pills have been America's most valued family medicine; 25c. per box at all dealers.

Chicory in France.

Chicory, so extensively raised in France, is harvested either by hand or by plowing. As fast as the plants in one line are pulled the roots are gathered in heaps after the removal of the leaves and are roughly cleaned. They are then transported to the factories, where they are mechanically washed in flowing water and dumped on a perforated conveyor that permits them to drain while traveling toward the mill cutters. The roots, when cut in small pieces, are conveyed to the mill hins or special driers, where they remain thirty-six hours or more, and after cooling they are bagged. The chicory, having now become friable, passes into a series of crushers. After each crushing the broken material is passed through sifters that divide it into four grades. From the crushers the chicory goes to the roasting ovens and then receives a final manipulation, that of tinting, which consists in giving the grains a coating of impalpable chicory dust. The last operation is that of packing the chicory, either by hand or by machinery.—Argonaut.

Double Action Waterfall.

There are a good many salt water cataracts in existence. They may be found in Norway, southern Chile and British Columbia, where narrow fords, or arms of the sea, are obstructed by barriers of rock. The rising tide flows over the fiords through such reefs into the great natural reservoirs beyond, but the water is held back at the ebb until it breaks over the obstruction in an irresistible torrent. Most curious of all is the waterfall at Canoe passage, where the island of Vancouver approaches the British Columbia mainland. Here the floodtide from the gulf of Georgia to the southward is held back at a narrow cleft between two islands until it pours over in a boiling cascade eighteen feet high with perhaps double the volume of the Rhine. At the turn of the tide, however, the waters from the north rush back into the gulf, producing a cascade of equal height and volume. The waterfall actually flows both ways.

GOOD WORK FOR SICK WOMEN

The Woman's Medicine Has Proved Its Worth.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies were first introduced, their curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of them spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from the use of these medicines, their value has become generally recognized, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file in the Pinkham office, at Lynn, Mass., proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an article of great merit as shown by the results it produces.

Anamosa, Iowa.—"When I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered with a displacement, and my system was in a general run-down condition. I would have the headache for a week and my back would ache so bad when I would bend down I could hardly straighten up. My sister was sick in bed for two months and doctored, but did not get any relief. She saw an advertisement of your medicine and tried it and got better. She told me what it had done for her, and when I had taken only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my head began to feel better. I continued its use and now I don't have any of those troubles." —Mrs. L. J. HANNAN, R.F.D. 1, Anamosa, Iowa.

WON BY DARING WIT.

Story of Czar Paul, His Sacred Snuff-box and a Wager.

Czar Paul's snuffbox was as sacred as the imperial crown itself. No one was allowed to touch it. Kapioff wagered that he would take a pinch out of it.

One morning he walked up to the table which stood near the bed on which the czar still reclined and boldly took from it the majestic snuffbox. Opening it noisily, he inserted his fingers, and, while Paul I. was watching him, in stupefaction at such audacity, he sniffed up the fragrant powder with evident satisfaction.

"What are you doing there, you rogue?" exclaimed the czar excitedly.

"Having a pinch of snuff, sire. I have now been on duty for eight hours, and, feeling drowsy, I thought it would keep me awake, for I would rather break the rules of etiquette than neglect my duty."

Paul burst out laughing and merely replied:

"That's right enough, my lad, but as the snuffbox is not large enough for both of us you can keep it for yourself."

Reptiles Are Shortsighted.

According to a naturalist, serpents, in spite of their reputation for alertness, are very shortsighted. Some of them cannot see more than a yard or two in front of them. Other reptiles are similarly deficient in sense of vision, and the authority asserts that a crocodile cannot see a man at a greater distance than six times its own length. In respect of hearing, many reptiles are even more deficient than in sight. Some serpents are deaf, the boa, it is said, being unable to hear any sound. The term "deaf adder" consequently expresses a fact. In one respect some reptiles show singular acuteness. They have an unerring instinct for water and in dry weather will travel straight to it, even when they are at such long distances that the mystery is how they could possibly become aware of its locality.

The Seal's Sense of Smell.

The sense of smell possessed by the seals is very strong and will invariably wake them out of a sound sleep even if you come upon them ever so quietly to the windward, and you will alarm them in this way much more thoroughly, though you be a half mile distant, than if you came up carelessly from the leeward and even walked in among them, they seeming to feel that you are not different from one of their own species until they smell you. The chief attraction in these animals is their large, handsome eyes, which indicate great intelligence. They are a deep bluish black, with a soft, glistening appearance, and the pupil, like the cat's, is capable of great dilation and contraction.

Part Often Overlooked.

"It is all right to put yourself on the back occasionally," said the dispenser of sage advice.

"Yes?" said the player up.

"But don't forget to call yourself down when you need it, my boy."

DUMA CAN CRITICIZE BUT DOES NOT RULE

Russian People Not Yet Qualified to Elect Representatives to Govern' —Premiers Are Unknowns

H. Hamilton Fyfe, of the London Mail paper writes from Petrograd: The Duma, the Lower House, representing the nation, is elected like our House of Commons. Its proceedings are often lively; its criticism is pungent. But the difference between it and our House of Commons must be kept in mind by all who seek to understand the system of government in Russia. The Duma has no power. It can criticise, but it cannot alter. It can talk, but it cannot act. Ministers are very seldom drawn from the Duma. They are under no obligation to render to it an account of their stewardship. They are responsible not to Parliament but to the Emperor. The Emperor appoints them and dismisses them. Parliament can oppose their proceedings, but it cannot turn them out. There was in the Duma a majority of 315 against and 107 in opposition to the Government of M. Goremykin. But the majority in the Duma could not drive M. Goremykin from office. What he did when he found their criticism too galling was to suspend their sittings.

Not a Politician

M. Stürmer, when he was appointed prime minister was unknown, even by name, to the mass of the Russian people. His name was unfamiliar to newspaper readers. It was scarcely ever mentioned. He had not been heard of for years. We are so accustomed to Prime Ministers who are leaders of parties that it is hard for us to realize that parties in Russia have little or no effect upon the course of political events. With us in Western lands the number of men from whom a Prime Minister could be chosen is limited to three or four, and they are all men who have lived long in the public eye. In Russia any man may be selected who is considered by the Emperor and his advisers suitable for the post. The choice falls almost always upon an official, one who has spent his life in the Government service.

No Restraint

There is thus a "great gulf fixed" between the Ministers who act and the politicians who talk. Ministers have no need to consider public opinion. Politicians are not steadied by the knowledge that they may be called upon to practise what they preach. I explained all this to an Englishman one day. He could not grasp it. "Aren't they elected like our M.P.'s?" he asked. "Well, then, they must have power. The people who elect them give it to them. What else are they elected for?"

He could not clear his mind of our system. He did not understand that, as yet, "the people" in Russia have no power to give. They are, you must recollect, excepting a few millions of educated persons, nothing but peasants, whose minds are as the minds of little children. They are being educated by the Zemstvoes. They have begun to read newspapers and to take an interest in public affairs. The percentage of those who can write has gone up in recent years. But they are still ignorant and simple to a degree which no one can believe who has not lived among them.

"TIZ" GLADDENS SORE, TIRED FEET

No Puffed-up, Burning, Tender, Aching Feet—No Corns or Callouses.

"Tiz" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns callouses, blisters, bunions and chilblains.

"Tiz" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or you remain on your feet, "Tiz" brings restful foot comfort. "Tiz" is magical, grand, wonderful for tired, aching, swollen, smarting feet. Ah! how comfortable, how happy you feel. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" now from any druggist or departmental store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet and happy. Just think! whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.

Wheat and Flour.

It takes about four and a half bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour, but different wheats vary from this estimate. A hard wheat produces more flour to the bushel than a soft wheat. Generally speaking, a bushel of wheat will yield from 70 to 75 per cent of flour of different grades, distributed about as follows: Patent flour, 35 to 40 per cent; bakers' flour, 5 to 10 per cent; red dog, 5 per cent, making approximately 70 to 75 per cent of flour and leaving 25 to 30 per cent of feedstuff—that is bran, shorts etc.

Freeman the Historian.

It was an English bishop who, when the historian Freeman had worn out his patience with his rudeness, introduced him to a waiting audience as "the distinguished scholar that so admirably describes and illustrates the savagery of our ancestors."

The Result.

"Dear me, girls! What on earth is that peculiar sweetish smell in the air all over the house?"

"Why, Geraldine is burning her old love letters in the furnace."

There Must Have Been Souvenirs.

"Was your banquet a success?"

"Great! We couldn't have had a bigger crowd if it had been a free feed."

Her Suggestion.

In the American Magazine a woman tells of a suggestion she made as the result of a butcher's indifference.

"I don't wish to complain about your service," she stated to the manager, "but I should like to tell you how to improve it—at least in my town."

The manager smiled in a wearied sort of way and resignedly asked, "Well?"

"Tell your butcher at Blank to extend the same courtesies to a woman who makes a twenty cent purchase of pork chops that he does to one who buys a two dollar leg of lamb. Your man is a good butcher, but he is hurting trade by humiliating your poorer customers. His method of obtaining big sales will result in no sales."

The manager, to her surprise, jumped up and grasped her by the hand. "Thank you," he said, "for the sanest criticism that has come to me for weeks." And he gave her a good job then and there.

Birds as Oracles.

A most remarkable superstition of the Kenyahs of Borneo is the consultation of birds. If, for example, a Kenyah has to undertake a long journey he will not risk it without having first consulted the "flakki," a kind of hawk. If the hawk flies with its wings spread out to the right side it is a good sign, but if it goes to the left or flaps its wings then the journey is not begun in any circumstances. The next day the Kenyah tries once more until the hawk gives the sign which he wants. Thus the continuation of the journey depends on the flight of the birds. Some birds are of greater importance than others, and also to the singing of the birds attention is given. Other animals are also consulted, and the sea Dyaks call every animal a "bird" when they

THE NEW RUSSIAN ARMIES READY

Hamilton Fyfe, the noted war correspondent with the Russian armies on the east front, writes: For the best part of an hour I have discussed General Brusiloff, the brilliant commander of the army in the Carpathians and now in control of all the armies on the southwest front, the past, present, and future of the war for the liberation of Europe from the German attempt to establish a tyranny based on brute force.

General Brusiloff said that it was not surprising that the Germans made headway in the early stages. They were fully prepared, but the allies were not prepared, did not want war, and did not believe that it was probable. "The new situation has changed all the German calculations based on winning quickly," said the General. "It is impossible that they can endure the strain for really long. The war may continue for a year or eighteen months, but the outcome is certain. If the discontent of the German people is growing it might hasten and in any case complete the military victory which is possible within the time mentioned.

"Although they are still strong there are signs of their weakening. The prisoners are all said to be badly fed and clothed and the enemy has been able to keep up so far only because neutrals are supplying necessaries across Germany's land frontiers. The British blockade is of immense value. I am convinced also that the great army raised in Britain will help to shorten the war.

"So far as the Russian armies on the southwest front are concerned, they are ready and anxious to advance whenever they are ordered to do so. The troops are in the best of health and spirits. They know that plenty of artillery is behind them and plenty of ammunition and vast reserves of young, vigorous soldiers. The men are convinced they must and can beat the enemy. The chances of the latter attacking on a large scale are doubtful. His numbers are insufficient and he cannot afford to take risks, especially after Verdun. Neither can he afford, like the allies, to wait patiently and confidently for the best moment to strike. When that moment arrives," the General concluded, "there will be no doubt whatever of the result."

Mountain Trees.

Some interesting facts relating to mountain trees are given by Enos A. Mills in his "Rocky Mountain Wonderland." He says:

"A few timber line trees live a thousand years, but half this time is a ripe old age for most of the timber line veterans. The age of these trees cannot be judged by their size or by their general appearance. There may be centuries of difference in the ages of two arm in arm trees of similar size. I examined two trees that were growing within a few yards of each other in the shelter of a crag. One was fourteen feet high and sixteen inches in diameter and had 337 annual rings. The other was seven feet high and five inches in diameter and had lived 402 years.

"One day by the sunny and sheltered side of a howlder I found a tiny seed bearer at an altitude of 11,800 feet. How splendidly unconscious it was of its size and its utterly wild surroundings! This brave pine bore a dainty cone, yet a drinking glass would have completely housed both the tree and its fruit."

Origin of the Letter V.

The letter V may be regarded as the mutilated remains of one of the symbols used by the ancient Egyptians in their hierogiyphics or picture writing. A common animal in their country was the two horned sandviper, a representation of which stood for V. The priests ultimately found that for the practical purposes of everyday life it was a waste of time to use elaborate hierogiyphics and invented a kind of shorthand to meet the occasion. In this the snake was reduced to a V with a dash (V—) to represent horns and body. The Phoenicians adopted this letter, and from them we get our V by loss of the dash, leaving only the two little horns of the original picture. This snake is still common in Egypt and is probably the one mentioned in Genesis xlix, 17, "Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse heels, so that his rider shall fall backward." Travelers tell us that it is still addicted to this unpleasant habit.

Music of the Church.

Nothing is plainer than the seemingly hopeless decadence of the music of the church as compared with modern possibilities and realities of musical art today. It is now some 200 years since the spirit of music left the church—since the church could hold and spiritually feed a great composer as it had done in the preceding centuries. The spirit of music, emancipated from the materialistic and puritanical influences which overtook established religion, brought forth the great modern art of music, with Beethoven as its leader, says Musical America. What has happened to that art at the hands of composers less lofty and less spiritually minded than he the world knows only too well, especially of late. The divorce has become almost complete. Not only has music, in its greatest powers, forsaken the forms of the church; latterly it has departed from spiritual vision and aspiration within its own artistic province.

Factors That Determine Salaries.

In the Woman's Home Companion a successful business man says that salaries are fixed by the amount and quality of work that a man can deliver. "Pull," in his opinion, is a negligible factor in the business world.

"And that applies to the man who is getting $30,000 a year just as truly as it does to the man who is getting $30 a month. The only way that I can be paid more money than I am getting is by delivering more work to my company than I am now delivering or by showing my company how to save more money and so have a larger profit at the end of the year."

Wax Matches.

Wax matches, so called, are made by drawing strands of fine cotton thread, twenty or thirty at a time, through melted stearin with a small admixture of paraffin. The wax hardens quickly upon the threads, and the long tapers thus produced are smoothed and rounded by pulling them through iron plates perforated with holes of the desired size. Finally the tapers are cut into match lengths and dipped.

Social Distinctions.

"What train do you take coming into town in the morning?"

"I used to take the Pinochle express at 7:44, but since I became a member of the firm I've been traveling on the Bridge Whist Limited, which leaves at 6.26."

Sailing Orders.

"What's that sheet there?" asked the sick sailor.

"That," explained the nurse, "is your chart."

"So? Well, what's the next port I make after quinine? I don't like that stop."

Madeira.

Conchologists hold that the finding of certain land snails on the island of Madeira, known to exist or to have affinities in no other place in the world except Europe, is sufficient proof that Madeira was at one time connected with the mainland.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Niagara, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

SWANS TAUGHT TO SWIM.

The Black Necked Variety Are Afraid of Water When Young.

You're acquainted with the proverbial phrase, "Like a duck takes to the water." That may apply all right to ducks, but there are some water birds which have to be taught to swim, just as we do. They hate the water at first just as much as a boy hates the bathtub. One of these birds, which takes swimming lessons from its parents, is the black necked swan.

The swan babies are called cygnets. They are hatched in an elaborate nest which the parent swan builds along the edge of a pool. The little cygnets are able to walk and run as soon as they are out of their shells, but they can't swim.

So the mother swan takes them for a little ferry ride. She puts them on her back and starts out across the pond. The baby swans, frightened at first, soon get used to seeing water all around them.

One day the mother swan turns her long neck and gives her babies a gentle push into the water. Such a scrapple and splash! The babies flounder around and try their best to get back on their mother's dry feathers. Finally they learn that their feet are webbed paddles, given to them for swimming purposes, and they are able to glide over the water as gracefully and as easily as their parents.

ANCIENT FLOATING PALACE.

The Wonderful Ship Built For Hiero, King of Syracuse.

The antiquity of ships may not be gauged, for in Genesis it is recorded that ships were even old on the Mediterranean in the days of Jacob. Fully 1630 years before Christ, Ammon built long and tall ships with sails on the Red sea. Ninety years later the ship Argo was built, "the" first Greek vessel which ventured to pass through the sea without sight of land, being guided only by the stars."

The wonderful vessel built for Hiero, king of Syracuse, excited curiosity and wonder. The craft was constructed under the direction of the celebrated mathematician, Archimedes, by a shipbuilder at Corinth, from wood cut on Mount Etna. Her decks were paved with small and odd tiles, on which were depicted with wonderful art scenes from Homer's "Iliad."

On the upper deck was a gymnasium containing gardens planted with many kinds of shrubs, with walks between them overshadowed by vines and ivy, the roots of which were nourished in moistened earth. Near this apartment was a dining room dedicated to Venus, paved with agates and precious stones. The walls and ceiling were of cypress, and the doors of ivory.—Argonaut.

No Law's Delay Here.

In Perak, in the Malay peninsula, lawyers find no business, for a modified form of trial by ordeal decides all disputes. In place of the legal practitioner the pleader is a native boy who is assigned to one or the other of the sides and is given a bamboo tube, in which is sealed the pleading of the person or party whom he represents. When all is ready two stakes are driven into the bed of a stream, and by aid of a bamboo pole the heads of the two boys are submerged at the same time. By grasping the stakes they are enabled to remain under water for quite awhile after their natural inclination would bring them to the surface, but at last one of them gives in and, releasing his hold of the stake, comes to the air. He is immediately seized, and the tube he holds is cast aside. The other lad is led ashore, his tube opened, and the document contained therein stands as the decision in the case.

Postmen in Faroff Days.

Postmen have a very respectable antiquity. They were known, the Sunday at Home points out, in the faroff days of King Hezekiah's reign, some 700 years before Christ. In the thirtieth chapter of the second book of Chronicles we read that "the posts went with the letters throughout all Israel and Judah," and, further, that "the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh." The postman of old was a swift runner, who received the letter from the sender's hand and carried it direct to the person to whom it was addressed.

Who Knows

what may result from an injury if neglected? Many a case of blood-poisoning can be traced to a simple cut, which, neglected, became infected with dangerous germs.

Be safe rather than sorry, and avoid all danger of blood poisoning by the timely use of Zam-Buk. As soon as a cut or injury is sustained Zam-Buk should be applied. Being a strong germicide, it immediately destroys all germs lodged in the wound, and protects the sore place from the germ-laden air.

In cases, however, where blood poisoning has been allowed to develop, there is nothing that will purify the sores and heal so quickly as Zam-Buk. Mrs. O'Barryown of Lucan, Ont., writes:

"My son cut his hand recently, but not thinking there would be any serious result, we neglected it. Before long it became very painful, began to fester and finally blood-poisoning set in. We then became alarmed, and having heard that Zam-Buk was splendid for blood-poisoning, we commenced applying it. We could soon notice an improvement, and with perseverance the poison was all drawn out and the wound completely healed. If we had only used Zam-Buk at the beginning all the pain and inconvenience could have been avoided."

Zam-Buk is just as good for burns, bruises, eczema, ringworm, ulcers, piles, abscesses, pimples, and boils. All druggists, 50c box, 3 for $1.25, or direct from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

ZAM-BUK

Kings and Shaving.

The classic case of a king who knew better than to let anybody else shave him is that of Dionysius the elder, tyrant of Syracuse, who appears to have been unable to shave himself, for he is said to have resorted to the uncomfortable device of singeing off his beard with hot walnut shells, says the London Chronicle. We may suspect that Napoleon's was another case of the kind. Rogers asked Talleyrand whether Napoleon shaved himself. "Yes," replied Talleyrand; "one born to be a king has some one to shave him, but they who acquire kingdoms shave themselves." That way of putting it pleasantly emphasizes the practical superiority of the parvenu to the helpless, spoiled child of heredity, but prudence probably entered into the matter also, if Talleyrand's statement was correct.

A Queer Fish.

A male fish which hatches the young of its mate in the Chromis paterfamilias. It is found in the lake of Tiberias, Palestine. Strange to say, this industrious fish hatches its young in its mouth. When the female has spawned in the sand the male approaches and draws the eggs into his gills, where they remain until hatched, when they struggle out of their confinement into the parent's mouth. As many as 200 perfect young are sometimes found in the mouth of an adult male. How the fish manages to feed itself without swallowing its young is a mystery. The grown fish is about seven inches long and one and three-quarters wide. Its back is olive green, shot with blue, and the belly is silver white, marked with green and blue.

Reason For Complaint.

"I keep the best bread," said a certain baker the other day to a poor fellow who complained of the inferior quality of the article he had purchased of him the day before.

"I do not doubt it," replied the customer.

"Then why do you complain?" asked the baker.

"Because I would suggest that you sell the best bread and keep the bad," was the reply.

Some Evidence.

"You say that preparation will make the hair grow?" asked the thin haired man of the druggist.

"Why, say," came from the drug man, "I know a customer who took the cork out of a bottle of that stuff with his teeth, and now he's got a hair-lip."

COULD NOT BEND DOWN

COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubiniecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills and went to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

"Doan's" are manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Phonograph Records.

Phonograph records are made by the cutting of lines in wax, from which a matrix is then formed for the manufacture of the records for use. Edison found that this matrix could be made by gold plating the wax impression and backing up the film of gold with copper. A special wax is used, made of stearin and paraffin, and when the record is originally made on the wax it is electrotyped with copper and nickel to give it a hard wearing surface. The actual records used on the phonographs are made from the matrix of shellac, wood charcoal, barium sulphate and earth coloring matters; the matrix is heated and placed in the warm plastic material, where it is pressed and cooled. Records are made by the various phonograph manufacturers.

One of Garrick's Reforms.

It was Garrick who first struck a blow at the custom of allowing members of the audience upon the stage, a practice which at Lincoln's Inn theater, in London, in 1721, led to a most dangerous disturbance, only quelled by calling out the military. In October, 1747, a Drury Lane playbill had the following appended notice: "As the admittance of persons behind the scenes has occasioned a general complaint, on account of the frequent interruption in the performance, it is hoped that gentlemen won't be offended that no money will be taken there for the future."

Matrimonial Considerations.

"Why do you object to my marrying your daughter?"

"Because you can't support her in the style to which she has been accustomed all her life."

"How do you know I can't? I can start her on bread and milk, same as you did."

HOT WATER THE BEST LIVER AND BOWEL MEDICINE

Says Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Washes Poisons from System.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

System Was Full of Poison; Pains in Side and Back

Had Constipation For Many Years, But Was Entirely Cured by Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

The most common ailment and the greatest cause of disease and suffering to-day is constipation. Artificial food and sedentary indoor life combine to induce torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result poisonous waste matter remains in the system and gives rise to pains and aches and affords a starting point for serious disease.

Infectious and contagious diseases are little known to persons whose liver, kidneys and bowels are kept in healthful activity, for there are no suitable conditions for disease germs to thrive in. Even common colds usually take their start when they find the system in a constipated, poisoned condition.

Mrs. Ed. Miller, West Flamboro, Ont., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have cured me of constipation. I suffered with constipation almost ever since I can remember, and for four years had pains at the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit and rest. That, I think, was terrible for a woman of twenty years. The condition of my blood was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much from pains and stiffness in the back, I am sure my system was full of poison. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have entirely cured me, and I feel better than I have felt for many years."

As a cure for constipation Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills stand alone, for by their action on the liver they awaken the activity of this organ, cause a good flow of bile, and hence remove the cause of indigestion, for bile is nature's cathartic. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S NIGHTGOWN.

By Anabel Worthington.

When inclination prompts a woman to do so, even though time may not seem to allow her the luxury, she will in some way arrange to make a chemise, nightgown or other dainty piece of underwear, either for a gift or for her own wardrobe. There is nothing a woman delights in more than dainty underwear; the designers know it and are always offering surprises so that we may have the most beautiful undergarments at the lowest cost by making them at home. In the illustration, No. 7,740, we have the design of a nightgown that will not alone content the eye but make the wearer conscious of extreme comfort. The cut of this garment allows the sleeve to extend to the neck edge; it is in Empire style and perfectly exquisite, with an embroidered design just below the V neck. Ribbon beading and edging give much importance to the parts they favor and perky little ribbon bows on the slashed sleeves give a great deal of charm. Edging finishes the neck very effectively.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To reproduce the design in size 36 will require 4¼ yards of 36 inch material, 3 yards edging, 1⅝ yards beading and 2⅝ yards ribbon.

If you will send 20 cents to the office of this publication the pattern will be promptly forwarded to you.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

FRENCH COUNTER ATTACK SUCCESSFUL

ANOTHER ATTACK ON HILL 304 EXPECTED

French Stop Germans On The West Bank and Gain On East

No Cessation in the Fierce Fighting at Verdun---Smashing Counter Attack Wins Back For the French the Trench Lost Yesterday---Germans Preparing For Another Attempt to Storm Hill No. 304 and Capture the Avocourt Positions.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, May 27.—(French Official).—French troops repulsed violent German attacks on the west bank of the Meuse, north-west of Verdun, in last night's fighting, and made gains on the east bank, the War Office announced to-day. By a smashing counter attack the French recaptured the trench lost yesterday near Thiaumont Farm, east of the Meuse. Near the farm the French advanced by a grenade attack. West of the river, the Germans continued to rake the whole French front, especially around Dead Man's Hill, and near Avocourt with the most violent fire. The Germans attempted an infantry attack, which was cut short by a curtain fire from the French guns. For thirty-six hours there has been no cessation in the cannonading around Hill 304 and Avocourt. The German artillery attack here is believed to be the prelude to an attempt to storm Hill 304 and capture the Avocourt positions, bringing the Germans closer to the St. Menehould railway leading eastward to Verdun, but the French have no intention of surrendering this position at any cost.

LONDON, May 26.—Peter Pearce, schoolmaster, president of the Seven Day Irish Republic, wrote a most pathetic letter to his mother the night before he was shot to death in the Dublin Barracks, it was learned to-day. "This is the death I should ask if God gave me my choice, a soldier's death for Ireland and freedom," wrote Pearce. "We did right. The people who say hard things now later will praise us. Do not grieve, mother, it is the sacrifice God has asked."

Allies to Smash the Bulgars and Turks

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, May 26.—A terrific smash within a few weeks, aimed at eliminating the Turks and Bulgars from the war, will be the Allies' first great stroke for peace. This is the report in general circulation here to-day. Heavy Allied blows from Salonika and Mesopotamia will be followed by a tremendous offensive against the Austro-Germans in an attempt to win the war before winter. French, English, Serbian, and Italian forces are reported concentrated at Salonika, awaiting the word to strike against the Bulgars and Germans in Southern Serbia. (This is the first report that Italian troops are at Salonika). Meanwhile the Russians are pressing on toward Bagdad, rolling back the Turks, who are reported to be extremely weary of the war. The public continues to watch with confidence the official statement regarding the situation on the Trentino front. It is now reported that the first Italian reverses were due to a shortage of heavy cannon to cope with the big Austrian guns. The French are said to have come to the rescue with artillery.

LONDON, May 26.—The Spanish steamer Aurrora, 5,000 tons, has been sunk.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The State Department to-day denied all rumours of Secretary Lansing's resignation. It was hinted that these rumours were part of a German propaganda to show dissension in the U.S. Government on the submarine issue..

Heavy Artillery Fire Indicates New Attack

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 26.—Violent artillery fighting, preparing the way for a renewal of the pitched battle between the two great armies around Verdun, was reported in despatches from Paris and Berlin this afternoon. The lull in infantry fighting since early yesterday, coupled with heavy cannonading, is believed to indicate a redistribution of forces on both sides. The new battle may have already begun.

AMAZING STORY TOLD BY DOCTOR IN WITNESS BOX

Waite Calmly Admits That He Had Planned to Kill His Wife and Her Parents in Order to Get Fortune

SAYS HE'S NOT CRAZY

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, May 26.—A calm admission that he had planned to kill his wife as well as her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Peck of Grand Rapids, and Miss Catharine Peck, her aunt, was made on the witness stand to-day by Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, when he resumed his amazing story of the arch-poison plot through which he hoped to gain the Peck millions, but said he had considered it. Asked the flat question, "Are you crazy?" on cross examination, Waite replied, "I think not."

Local Doctor Seriously Ill

Lieut. Walsh, Margaret Ave., Suffering from Enteric Fever at Bombay—Served at Dardanelles and in Mesopotamia

Mr. Joseph Walsh, 317 Margaret avenue, has received word that his son, Dr. Stanley Walsh, Royal Army Medical Corps, is dangerously ill with enteric fever at Bombay, India. The many friends of the young doctor will wish him a speedy recovery. Lieut. Walsh, who was a student in his last year in medicine in Toronto University, enlisted as a private in a Canadian Casualty Clearing unit, and went to England where he was given a commission in the Royal Army Medical Corps. During the Dardanelles operations Lieut. Walsh served on a British hospital ship in the Mediterranean and afterwards was sent to join the Mesopotamian relief force which made such a gallant effort to rescue General Townshend and his forces at Kut-El-Amara. During this campaign he was taken ill with enteric fever and sent to Bombay, where his condition is now reported as serious.

INTERESTING TO HOG FEEDERS

It may not be generally known that no one is allowed to collect garbage for feeding to pigs without first having procured a license from the Veterinary Inspector General. Mr. Harry Wheeler is the only licensed garbage collector in the city, and before the license was granted an inspector was sent from Ottawa to examine his slaughter house and surroundings. Mr. Wheeler had previously made improvements to his buildings under the instructions of Sanitary Inspector Spence, and to the credit of both it may be said that they gave the government inspector complete satisfaction.

The Verdun Battle Dwarfs All Others

Practically all the Paris papers agree that the Crown Prince is now making his heaviest effort against Verdun, the Echo de Paris pointing out that the battle has developed into a struggle of extraordinary desperation. "The present phase of the Verdun struggle dwarfs all preceding phases," said the Matin, "in violence, continuity and extent of the battle front. This is no isolated drive at one set of works, but a pitched battle between the two armies."

PTE. DARLING OF THE MOUNTED RIFLES DEAD FROM WOUNDS

Another Well Known Peterborough Boy Has Given His Life For the Empire---Left Here With B Squadron---93rd Battalion Preparing For Departure to Barriefield ---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Private Norman Darling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Darling, 542 Water street, died of wounds somewhere in Belgium on May 14th. A week previous, on May 7th, he wrote a letter home, probably his last, that he was then returning to the trenches, and evidently participated in the action which has taken a considerable toll from the Mounted Rifles. The official telegram from the Militia Department was, as usual, distressingly brief, conveying only the heart-breaking information that another of Peterboroughs' boys had given his life for his country.

Private Darling enlisted in B squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, which left Peterborough on March 2nd, 1915. He was included in the 1st draft that crossed the channel and saw his first service in the trenches on October 1st. Two other Peterborough boys, George Butcher and Dave Darragh, were in that draft and from their letters home have apparently been together in the trench fighting on their front since last autumn.

Prior to his enlistment in Peterborough, Private Darling had spent four or five years in the west. He had many friends in Peterborough, by whom his death will be keenly felt. For many years he was an active member of the Y.M.C.A. When Private Quinn was leaving Belgium to return to Peterborough he spent the eve of his departure with his friend, Private Darling.

8.30 to 10.00, Company Drill.
10.00 to 10.30, Physical Training.
10.30 to 12.00, March Out.

SPORTS.

The remainder of the Battalion sports will be run off to-morrow morning, starting at 8.30.

STRENGTH, taken on.

The following man, having enlisted, is taken on the strength of the Battalion, and posted to the Company placed after his name from date mentioned:

No. 125697, Pte. E. T. Monk," 'C' Co., May 25th.

PROMOTION.

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to make the following provisional promotions:

No. 125697, Pte. W. Mitchell, 'A' Co., to be Sergeant from May 25th.

BOARD OF OFFICERS.

A Board of Officers will assemble on Friday, the 26th May, at a time and place to be named by the President for the purpose of investigating and recording the absence without leave, from his duty, if any, and deficiency, if any, in the arms, ammunition, equipment, instruments, regimental necessaries or clothing of Numbers 125690, Sergt. G. Webb, and Number 125707, Pte. P. M[illegible]

The Board will be composed as under:

President—Capt. Widdifield.
Members — Lieut. Payne, Lieut Sexton.

J. E. R. MUNRO,
Captain
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C. E. F.

The 93rd Battalion is completing its arrangements for the departure to Barriefield camp on Tuesday morning. A large quantity of stores and equipment has already been shipped to Kingston. The battalion canteen will be closed to-morrow, and Sergt. Mackin and his staff will leave for Barriefield on Monday morning to arrange the camp canteen for the arrival of the troops on Tuesday. Sergt. Cook Wride and a number of his men will also leave on Monday. The advance party which left on Monday, is having splendid weather in which to prepare the camp for the main body.

The Brinton Carpet Company has presented each of its employees who have enlisted with a handsome gold signet ring. There are seven employees of the Brinton Carpet Company in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion.

The band of the 93rd Battalion took advantage of the beautiful weather this morning to hold their practice in Victoria Park instead of as usual in the armouries. The residents in the neighbourhood enjoyed the innovation.

The balance of the sports arranged for Victoria Day and which were not run off then, will be contested to-morrow morning at 8.45 a.m. at Central Park. There are a number of splendid prizes to be competed for and some interesting contests should be seen. The public is invited to attend.

Sergt. Stanley Fenwick of No. 2 Field Company, Canadian Engineers, who with his wife and little daughter, Miss Ruby, were the guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fenwick, 145 London street, over the holiday, left yesterday morning to visit his wife's relatives near Marmora, for a few days. His friends will be glad to hear that he will return to Peterborough on Saturday to spend the week end here. Sergt. Fenwick, who had been a member of No. 2 company Canadian Engineers, before the war, rejoined his old unit as soon as hostilities commenced, went over with the first contingent, and came through Ypres unhurt. Later he was slightly wounded in the arm at Festubert by a shell splinter. Some time afterwards he had the misfortune to displace a cartilage in his left knee as the result of a mishap while jumping down into a trench. He has been in hospital in England for a long period and returned on the Missanabie with his wife and child, who had gone over to England to be with him. Sergt. Fenwick was one of the heroes who were given a reception at the Exhibition grounds on Wednesday.

Townships' Kitchen.

Havelock, Belmont, Norwood, Asphodel and Dummer will contribute a field kitchen to "D" Company of the 93rd Battalion, each municipality paying approximately 4.10 mills on their assessment for the kitchen, which will certainly be a great con-

NEW SIDEWALKS TO BE CONSTRUCTED THIS SUMMER

List of Cement Walks Authorized at Last Night's Meeting of the Board of Works —Number of Streets to be Graded

GENERAL BUSINESS

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works it was decided to give notice of the Council's intention to construct cement sidewalks on the south side of Robinson street, from Rogers street to the Grand Trunk Railway property, on the south side of Sophia street from Mark street to the Grand Trunk Railway property; on the west side of Mark street from Sophia street to a point one hundred and twenty-seven feet north of Sophia street, on the north side of Chamberlen street from the Canadian Pacific Railway to Park street, and on the west side of Elias avenue from Charlotte to King streets.

NEW SEWERS.

Sewers will be constructed on Dublin street from Downie street to a point one hundred and ten feet east of Downie street, on Romaine and Crescent Streets, from Lock Street to a point seventy-five feet east of the junction of Romaine and Crescent streets; on Smith street from Reid to Stewart streets, and on Romaine street from Aylmer street to Park street.

A letter was read from W. Fleming for a sewer to Number 1913 Water street. The matter was referred to City Engineer Parsons for a report.

The Armour Estate will be notified to move their fence on the East side of Concession street, north, from Hunter street, East, back to the street line.

POLES TO BE MOVED.

Two poles on Hunter street, east in front of the old mill will be removed under the supervision of the City Engineer.

Dale Avenue, Ellisburn Avenue, and Charles Street and Maria Street will be graded.

The drain on the east side of Mark street, from James Street to the river will be cleaned out, and two trees in the drain at 217 Mark Street, will be removed. Sophia Street, east of Mark Street, will be gravelled. Hunter street, east of Concession street, will be water tabled and gravelled.

City Engineer Parsons was instructed to bring in a report with all the information necessary in regard to converging the water from Concession street, by way of Douro Street, to the river, including a suggestion as to how the work should be paid for.

The City Engineer was also asked to report on the best way of improving permanently the roadway at the junction of Bethune and Charlotte streets, and also Bethune and Hunter streets.

The matter of watering the pavements on Sundays was left with the City Engineer with instructions to see that reasonable efforts were made to keep down the dust.

"SALLY ON THE CAR" IS NEW WAY TO INDICATE SALONIKA

LONDON, May 25.—The Rev. F. H. Gillingham, the Essex cricketer, who has been censoring soldiers' letters at the front, has been telling some of his experiences. The main object of most Tommies seems to be to let their relatives know where they are, and all sorts of schemes have been discovered.

A common one at the start of the war was to place dots under certain letters, which, when read together, gave information as to the writer's whereabouts, but parents soon began to recive letters with a confused jumbling of dots placed under other letters by the censor.

The story goes, however, that a censor was not wide awake enough to see through one little sentence in a letter from a member of the Mediterranean expeditionary force. It was in the form of a postscript and read, "I met Sally on the car." Whether one saw it or not depends on how he pronounces Salonika.

EMPIRE HAS RAISED 5,041,000 FIGHTERS

Not One of These is a Conscript, His Majesty the King Points Out in a Message to the Nation Upon Signing the Military Service Bill

ACT NOW IN FORCE

LONDON, May 26.—The signature of King George was to-day affixed to the military service bill recently passed by Parliament.

In giving the Royal sanction to the bill, King George issued the following message to the nation:

"To enable our country to organize more effectively its military resources in the present great struggle for the cause of civilization I have, acting on the advice of my Ministers, deemed it necessary to enroll every able-bodied man between the ages of eighteen and forty-one.

"I desire to take this opportunity of expressing to my people my recognition and appreciation of the splendid patriotism and self-sacrifice they displayed in raising by voluntary enlistment since the commencement of the war no less than 5,041,000 men, an effort far surpassing that of any other nation in similar circumstances recorded in history, and one which will be a lasting source of pride to future generations.

"I am confident the magnificent spirit which has hitherto been shown by people through the trials of this terrible war will inspire them to endure the additional sacrifice now imposed upon them, and that it will, with God's help, lead us and our allies to a victory which shall achieve the liberation of Europe."

Status of Canadians.

Regarding the position under the military service bill of Canadians residing here the Secretary to the High Commissioner states that they have secured the insertion of a proviso exempting Canadian subjects from the bill. Arrangements for putting this into operation have been completed, and where the High Commissioner is satisfied as to the bona fides of the applicant he will authorize the issue of a certificate enabling the military authorities to grant exemption.

TROUBLE IS OVER

SHOOTING OF FIVE STRIKERS BY ARMED GUARDS AT MUNITIONS MANUFACTURING PLANT IS FOLLOWED BY QUIET.

Ansonia, Conn., May 23.—Quiet prevailed in the strike district here to-day, following the riot, when five strikers were shot by armed guards during an attack on the plant of the Ansonia Manufacturing Company.

Charles Laspo, one of the men shot, died early to-day. The other four are not very seriously wounded. A large force of deputy sheriffs and police officers patrolled the plant and the vicinity.

Laspo, the dead man, was said to have been one of the strike leaders and had a large following among foreigners here.

Most of the 150 to 200 men on strike are foreign born and were employed in the fuse rooms of the company, which is engaged in making war munitions. The plant employs about 500 and the other departments are still in operation.

SIGHT IS PRECIOUS.

Don't let the matter of expense be as precious to you as life itself. Life is as precious to you as life itself, but our charges are moderate. Let us show you how to cure that headache. See Dr. Lacey and see better, 360 George Street.

FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1916

CHURCH UNION.

There may have been doubts of Church Union being a live question, but there is no doubt that it is becoming a lively one. As the possibility becomes more possible, more opposition develops, and there is threatened serious schism that may make "church union" an element in creating more church denominations than there are at present; and creating law suits, that may rival in length, and equal in bitterness the celebrated, "Jarndyce and Jarndyce." If the dissidents of all the denominations concerned in the church union proposals form new church organizations, the standing of denominationalism may not be changed. It seems that the differences and disagreements, the animosities of spirit aroused, lead some persons to question the relative utility of the church union propaganda, and to feel that perhaps better results might come from the concentration of the brains and energy, now devoted to the union matter, upon righteousness in good works, that, would make the denominations each a live centre of religious energy and usefulness.

THE PATRONAGE EVIL.

We must not, in our solicitude for [illegible] on war measures, forget that to what extent our highest efforts may be neutralised by an pitiful a thing as the patronage evil, which now, and for long, has been an element in Dominion administration. We have had too many war supply scandals that have cost money, involved great loss of precious time, and operated as a brake upon our war energies. These, if traced to the ultimate motive cause, will be found to be due to the patronage system, and the patronage evil. It is not mere party prejudice that forces this conclusion. Men not so influenced, and who are anxious for the best national results, join in the condemnation of the eight influential Boards of Trade who called upon the Dominion Government to abolish the existing patronage system. They are the Boards of Trade of Lethbridge, Hamilton, Berlin, Montreal, Vancouver, Halifax, Calgary and Battleford. Other boards and other bodies should join the protesting ranks. Eight boards of trade making protest will be lucky enough to influence a government that persists and has persisted in including under its protection, and often sheltering in the Cabinet, the Nationalist element, more hostile to national ideals, national unity, and national interests, than even the patronage system. In respect of both of their party usefulness seems to make them too valuable to be lightly dispensed with.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

It is questionable whether the re[illegible] of the Quebec general provincial [illegible] is a good thing, or if it is, whether it is not too much of a good thing. The big Liberal majority is [illegible] It presents the temptation, if it does not produce the fact, of abuse of power in a despotic way. We have seen such result; in British Columbia, to an extent that has seriously compromised the substantial prosperity of the province. It is to a very large degree in Ontario, and the Dominion parliament is [illegible] the exercise of party [illegible] of its large majority. The same results may not appear in connection with Sir Lomer Gouin's policy which the province has placed in his hands, but the time recognizant of his responsibility is his best. His big majority, or two or three causes, [illegible] he has governed the province well and ably. His power was used, not for party aggrandizement, but for the good of the province. Then the long-time and persistent attitude of hostility towards the people on the part of a part of the people of Ontario has had its effect. This effect has been to solidify the French speaking population of Quebec and to range them on the side of the party of fair play. The Francophobes of Ontario happen to believe so, or do belong to, the dominant party in Provincial and Dominion politics, and the habitant of Quebec is not slow to draw conclusions. The attitude of hostility mentioned does not solidify only the French-Canadians, but appeals to the spirit of fair play of the English speaking people. The Quebec Telegraph in an article reproduced elsewhere shows that the English-speaking vote of Quebec in constituencies where it was a controlling or contributory factor went almost solidly to the Liberal government. This doubtless resulted from an appreciation of good government, added to the object of condemning and counteracting the hostile attitude of a section of Ontario. It has been seen that certain Ontario journals representing the Franco-phobes [illegible] a wipe" at the French Canadians. A few days ago the Mail and Empire, in introducing an article on "Soldiers' Pensions," found a place to introduce a jibe at French speaking Canadians. It used these terms:

"There is absolute unanimity in English speaking Canada that the government cannot err on the side of generosity in the matter of soldiers' pensions."

Why this gratuitous insult to our fellow citizens, if not to be consistent with a systematic policy of detraction? It is claimed that recruiting has been slow in Quebec. If it has been slow pray what is that chiefly due to but to the influence of the Nationalist element which has been fostered from the beginning by the party of the government in power? This malign influence has been helped by the abusive policy of many members of the party that keeps in power the government which makes the demand for recruits. All things considered, the policy that has driven the French Canadians to unite in self protection is a large part of the causes that have given Sir Lomer Gouin so overwhelming a parliamentary following.

RECRUITING.

There is rumour of the recruiting and organization of a new battalion in Peterborough. If this is proposed it is high time the Government took a hand in promoting recruiting, instead of discouraging it. There is no doubt that the waste in equipping and munitionizing the recruited soldiers has a discouraging influence upon activity in recruiting. There is reason for believing that if Canada has gained glory from its contribution of fighting men, it has less to thank the Government for than the spirit of the men who have enlisted. The Government has made demand for the raising of so many men, and stopped there—the men have done the rest. The Government seems to have made no attempt to organize the country for war—to promote recruiting. It is stated that "the Government has neither urged nor asked anybody to enlist during the whole course of the war." It is stated that to Governments of Australia that New Zealand have both asked and urged men to enlist, and "have used the whole machinery of government to ascertain recruiting possibilities of the population, and the location and circumstances of the man of the country." The governments took "active leadership of the whole work of army-raising." This is how the Toronto Star puts what New Zealand has done:

> In New Zealand, for instance, a national war census was taken—after the first fruits had been raised—and 109,808 men between the ages of 19 and 44 signified their willingness to become members of expeditionary forces if required. The number was made up as follows:
>
> | | |
> |---|---|
> | Single Men and Widowers without dependents | 30,138 |
> | Single men with dependents | 16,287 |
> | Widowers with dependents | 947 |
> | Married men with wife only | 5,944 |
> | Married men with wife and other dependents | 56,344 |
> | Total | 109,660 |
> | Other results of the census showed the following: | |
> | Men not prepared to volunteer for Expeditionary forces, but willing to serve in a civil capacity | 43,534 |
> | Not prepared to volunteer for Expeditionary Forces nor serve in a civil capacity | 34,396 |
> | Volunteered for the Expeditionary Forces, but rejected | 8,042 |
> | British subjects incapacitated for military service | 3,963 |
> | Foreign subjects | 3,286 |
> | Returned Troopers | 288 |
> | Grand total of all classes | 204,632 |

Thus it is seen that the government of New Zealand took a business view of its responsibilities, and went about recruiting in a business-like way, making recruiting easy and systematic, instead of leaving things to chance, as the Government of Canada has done. So far the Government has passively exhausted the voluntary system to a standstill; this seems to be the case, for there is reported to be a lull in recruiting in the large centres. The voluntary system has not had a fair chance, and as it now stands it needs systematic and thorough [illegible] to [illegible]. It seems we should have a thorough census of the eligible fighting forces of Canada—learn by official tabulation what men can be spared to the fighting ranks, and what men must be retained in order to man our industrial, machinery and provide the material backing the enlisted men must have if they are to become efficient fighters. Measures like these would kindle the recruiting spirit, and inspire a confidence that only authoritative backing can give.

The English-Speaking Vote in the Quebec Elections

There is no possibility of mistaking the way in which the English-speaking vote went in the recent Provincial elections. In every constituency, in which it is either a controlling or a contributory factor, it was clearly cast as a rule to elect the candidates of the Gouin Government or to swell their majorities. With the practical good business sense, which is one of its most marked characteristics, it was given, in the first place, to support the administration which, from the business point of view, has managed the affairs of this province the wisely and so well, and which has so triumphantly proved itself to be a safe Government in every way, and secondly, by getting all previous party [illegible] it was given to help to [illegible] province and of the Dominion, the [illegible] to recruiting and to aiding the mother country and the Allies at this great crisis in its history and that of the whole civilized world.

In Quebec Centre and West it powerfully helped to elect Messrs. Cannon and Madden, in Quebec County it added to Mr. Lechere's majority and in Levis, it contributed not a little to the defeat of Mayor Bernier and the election of Dr. Roy, but it was chiefly in the Eastern Townships and the Montreal district that it told more heavily. Obviously Mr. Lapierre could not have obtained so large a plurality in Megantic but for the assistance of the English vote, and the same remark applies to Mr. Laferte in Drummond, Mr. N. G. Scott in Compton, Mr. Bissonnette, in Stanstead, Mr. Fanguay in Wolfe, Mr. Hay in Argenteuil, Dr. Finnie, Mr. Bercovitch, Mr. Hannin, Mr. Mayrand, and Mr. Letourneau, and Hon. J. L. Decarie, in as many divisions of the city of Montreal, Mr. Reed in L'Assomption, Mr. Gendron in Ottawa County, Mr. Ashby for Jacques Cartier, etc., not to speak at all of the part it took in the elections by acclamation of Hon. Mr. Mitchell for Richmond, Mr. Phelps for Huntingdon, Mr. Theriault, for Sherbrooke, Mr. Filias for Brome, Mr. Bullock, for Shefford, Mr. Gosselin for Missisquoi, etc. etc.

In fact wherever the English speaking vote counted for anything it went unmistakably to support the Gouin Government and we congratulate those who cast it upon doing so so wisely and so well.—Quebec Telegraph.

The Coming Prophetic Conference

"A Word to the Methodists on the Subject"

Have you noticed how great a proportion of your Bible is occupied with prophecy? How long is it since you listened to a sermon or a series of sermons in your church opening up these divine predictions. The last Book of the Bible is a Prophetic Book which the ascended Lord opened the heavens to give to the suffering church! Have you neglected it?

Listen to what John Wesley says of those who fail to read and seek to know the content and import of that last Revelation. He says: They enquire after anything rather than this, as if it were written, Happy is he who does not read this prophecy.

Nay, but happy is he that readeth! It behoves every Christian at all opportunities to read what is written in the oracles of God, and he read this precious Book in particular, frequently, reverently, and attentively, for the time of the beginning of its accomplishment is near—even when St. John wrote. How much nearer to us is even the full accomplishment of this weighty prophecy?"

The Wesleys and the founders of Methodism believed in and taught a personal second coming of Christ as the hope of the church. Dr. Coke, the friend of Wesley, and the greatest missionary spirit that that church has known believed and taught the same. Charles Wesley Wrote:

"Trusting in the liberal Word
We look for Christ on earth again;
Come our everlasting Lord,
With all Thy saints to reign."

And while many of his hymns have been eliminated from, or changed in, the modern Methodist hymnals, it was Charles Wesley that wrote:

The church, in her militant state
Is weary and cannot forbear;
The saints in an agony wait
To see Him again in the air.
The news of His coming I hear
And join in the Catholic cry—
O Jesus, in triumph appear,
Appear in the clouds of the sky.

The Union Bible Study and Prophetic Conference that will be held in St. Paul's Church for four days opening next Sunday, will have no message on prophetic truth that is contrary to the fundamental faith of Methodism, or any other of the evangelical churches.

In the recent conference in Toronto, books on the Second Coming of Christ, by Methodists, sold more widely than any others, in fact the book "Jesus Is Coming," by Dr. Blackstone, still a minister in good standing in the Methodist Episcopal Church, endorsed by the great evangelists, Dr. Torrey, Dr. Munhall, and Dr. Wilburgh Chapman, has had the widest sale of any book written on this theme.—R. V. B.

REFUGEE HOUSES ARE PORTABLE

CHICAGO, May 26. — England's problem of housing 200,000 Belgian refugees has been in part solved by the building of wooden houses so constructed that when the war is over they may be readily taken down and shipped to Belgium to replace shell lugs razed by fire and artillery.

This statement was made in an address here to-day by Percy Allen for ten years a member of the British Parliament and at present engaged in relief work. He spoke at the First Congregational Church of Evanston. He said that the care of the Belgians in England requires $5,000,000 a month. In addition, he said, there are 6,800,000 Belgians remaining in Belgium who must look to other countries for food. About half of these, he estimated, are able to pay for what they get.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Marne Defeat Attributed To Weariness and Russians

The unexpected rapidity of the Russian advance and the physical exhaustion of the German troops after a month of marching and fighting night and day are the two chief causes for the German defeat in the battle of the Marne, according to the first authoritative treatise on the battle issued from Teutonic sources.

A small volume, "Die Schlachten an der Marne, September 6 to 12, 1914," but made into English as 'The Battle of the Marne" has just been published by Siegfried Mittler and Son, of Berlin, publishers and booksellers to the Imperial Court. While it does not bear an official impress, the writer obviously has had access to documents not generally available. His purpose is to endeavour to show that the Marne engagement was not really a German defeat, but that the armies retreated in good order that they might take up stronger positions to the north and northeast.

Concerning the broad field of a general campaign against France the writer says:

"It was decided by the Supreme German Command that the greatest number of the available troops should be thrown on the western front, and that the defence of the eastern border of the Empire should be intrusted to a few army corps. It was hoped that these troops, in combination with the Austro-Hungarian armies, would be in a position to stem the advancing tide of the Muscovite colossus for a few weeks until new German formations, and above all, the active troops returned from France and reserve corps, could assume the offensive in the east as well. But it was not proposed that an attack should be made over the whole western front at once.

"The German General Staff had decided rather to assume the defensive on the line between the Swiss border and the Donon, but between this important peak of the Vosges and Verdun, to pass from the defensive to the offensive only according to circumstances, since the troops placed there had as their chief task the holding in check of the enemy forces opposed to them. On the other hand, it was believed that the main body of troops in the west might be sent from their bases between Diedenhofen and Aix-la-Chapelle and hurled into France through Luxemburg and Belgium, so that it would be possible to extend the right wing further and further in the direction of the sea."

TO CRUMPLE UP FRENCH LINE.

The object of this movement, the writer says, was to effect a "broad sweep" by Brussels, Valenciennes, Compiegne and to the west of Paris so the French forces might be driven back over the Meuse, the Aisne and the Marne and even the Seine; "that the French might be outflanked south of Fontainebleau and their whole line of battle crumbled up."

Other German troops, "especially reserves and landwehr corps, were then to be hurried to the coast between Dunkirk and Calais, with the object of preventing further British troops from landing."

So far as it was humanly possible to calculate, this ambitious plan, it seems, was to have been carried to a successful end by the last of September. The author however, emphasizes its great difficulties and reminds his readers that every military success is the result of a chain of circumstances, and that if one link shows a weakness the whole chain may be broken. He says:

"No doubt the German General Staff reckoned with the possibility in advance that their plan might not succeed and that it would have to be changed in the course of its execution. For if the task of the German left wing (the fifth and sixth armies) of holding in check the strong French forces opposed to them at Nancy Toul, Verdun and the other fortified places on the Meuse was a difficult one, that of the centre (the third and fourth armies) and of the right wing (the first and second armies) was almost super-human. The armies of the centre and right not only had to break down the fortresses and the field opposition of the Belgians, but also had to complete their march under a terrible August sun before they could come into contact with the French, who were located in their own chosen positions, and had not to trouble themselves about reinforcements.

Paying a warm tribute to the energy of the German command on the right, and at the same time to the skill in retreat of the French and British, the writer says:

"Indeed, one hardly knows which to admire more—General von Kluck's haste in endeavouring to bring Field Marshal French to a standstill, or as to give battle to him, or the rapidity with which the British army was hurried southward and withdrawn from the outstretched claws of the German general."

HOPED FOR DECISIVE ACTION

The German staff hoped for a decisive action with the British before linking up in the big battle with the French, but they were disappointed in this.

"The further the Germans advanced," says the author, "and the more skilful the French and British showed themselves in effecting a retreat without allowing a decisive battle to be fought, the further did the Germans separate themselves from their base and the more did they exhaust themselves by the hard marching. They used up their munitions and food at a terrific rate, and the slightest check in the supply of reinforcements and food might well have been fatal to such masses of men as the Germans hurled into France and Belgium in August, 1914. General Joffre, on the other hand, was fighting within his own lines, and was gradually drawing nearer and nearer to his depots. It became possible finally for fresh troops to be sent to the French line every day, so that General Joffre and his staff were in the fortunate position of being able to put fewer exhausted troops in the line of fire than their opponents. For the Germans had been marching almost day and night for a month."

It is then frankly admitted that the French line, 'although it was very thin at various points,' never was actually broken through.

From the official French statements which have been published the writer records the formation of new armies by General Joffre, and mentions the fact that on September 6th Field Marshal French supported General Maunoury, "though he did not seem to have recovered from the German onslaught in August."

General von der Marwitz, it seems, was directed to hold the British in check, and he covered the movements of the remaining German forces on this front by a skilful use of his cavalry. September 7th, says the writer, "was a day of intense fighting.

"General von Kluck," he declares, "was attacked by the British and by General Maunoury as well, and he had not only to save his troops from these two armies, but also to see that he was not cut off from General von Buelow or outflanked by General Maunoury toward the north. Von Kluck's chief task was to get his army back across the Marne to the north bank, and by September 8th he had almost accomplished this. On the ninth Von Kluck made a determined effort, exhausted though his men were, to break up the forces under Maunoury and French, and a general attack was launched with skill and determination. This move, however, had been forestalled by General Galliéni, then Military Governor of Paris, who had kept himself well informed of the movements of all the armies. General Galliéni requisitioned automobiles in every direction and sent them northward during the night laden with troops to the aid of Maunoury. Particularly noteworthy was the transport of the Sixty-second (Zouave) division during the night of September 8-9, in order that the turning of the French left wing might be prevented at all costs."

These efforts of General Galliéni worthily seconded by General French and General Maunoury, achieved their aim.

"By the evening of the 9th the German power of offensive had sensibly weakened," the review says. "Von Kluck's iron legions, exhausted by their heroic efforts of the previous days, had reached the limit of their resources. At noon on the 9th General von der Marwitz was compelled to inform his chief it was no longer possible for him to withstand the combined attacks of the British army and the Eighteenth French corps.

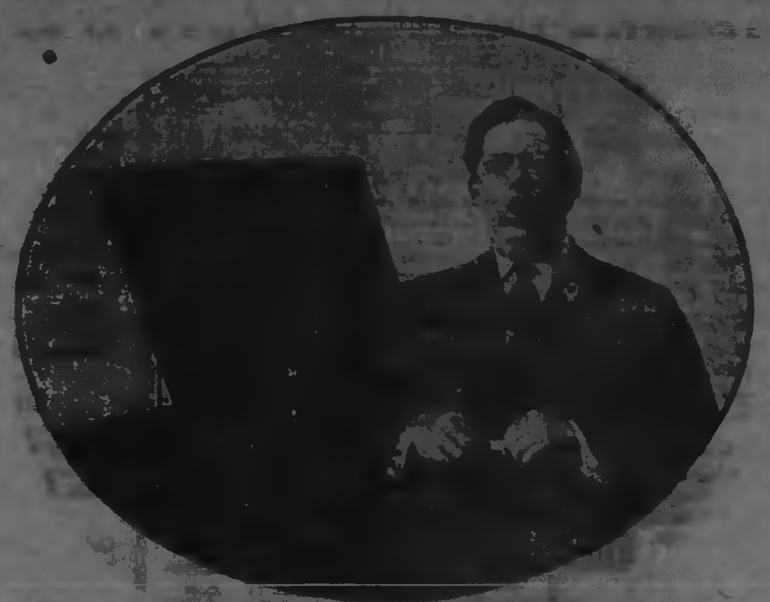
"I'm Sorry," Now The Correct Form

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 26.—The Harvard students living along the Gold Coast, who have at least a pocketful of nickels and the best manners available, are no longer using that hackneyed phrase, "I beg your pardon." It simply isn't done. All begging has stopped for aye and the new idea is "I'm sorry."

If the reader is still interested in manners, Harvard men or sorrow it will be clear that this type of apology requires no answer. Harvard men dread being answered, preferring, as does the university's most famous alumnus, to do all the talking themselves. For that reason nowadays when they step on the hat or weskit of an untutored Bostonese in the course of their more stimulated gambols they invariably admit that they are sorry and it drop right there.

"I'm sorry," comes from England, which country got it from France, which brilliant nation got it from Chicago, which ruinely municipality learned it from New York. There is no extant proof that New York did not get it from New Haven or Hartford.

EDISON'S New Invention is a Human Instrument



EDISON has made possible the absolute Re-Creation of Arthur Middleton's magnificent voice

SO faithful, so startlingly identical with the original is Edison's Re-Creation of the human voice that audiences of musicians and music-lovers in every corner of the United States have expressed their astonishment at the human qualities of Edison's new invention, the Diamond Disc Phonograph.

It is a wonderful thing to realize that you are listening to the actual Re-Creation of a voice instead of only an approximate reproduction as given by talking machines.

Hear Middleton's Great Voice

Arthur Middleton, basso, belongs to that group of peerless artists known to the world as the Metropolitan Opera Company. For more than two years his voice has won him distinction with this company. Middleton has freshness and youth. He imparts both of the qualities to his singing. For purposes of Re-Creation Edison has made it a point to seek "fresh" voices—voices still vibrant with youth.

The very humanness of Edison's invention has astounded thousands. It is a human instrument. It gives you the human tone, perfectly recorded, absolutely Re-Created. In Edison's Re-Creation of Middleton's voice every tone is intact.

Edison simply asks you to HEAR his Re-Creation of the Human Voice

So convinced is Edison himself of the truthfulness of his Re-Creation that he asks you simply to hear it. Words cannot convince you. Music's Re-Creation baffles description. Come in and hear it.

Germans on Western Front Call for More Dogs for Trench Work

"On several occasions," says the Paris Temps, of April 23, "we have referred to the importance of the services rendered by our army dogs now at the front. Recently we have learned that our enemies have also taken very energetic measures for supplying themselves with a greater number of dogs for services in the field, either on the hospital and ambulance staffs or on guard and scout duty.

"It must be remembered that last year the German government issued a call for trained dogs, intended for service in the colonies, and no less than 30,000 offers were made in response to the appeal. This goes to show that the raising of dogs for army use has by no means been neglected in Germany during late years. From authentic sources it has been learned however that the German commanders on the western front dispensed to a great extent with the services of dogs as soon as the military operations were reduced to trench warfare. At the same time the employment of dogs became more of a feature in the Polish and the Galician campaigns, where the troops were kept constantly on the move.

"Now the German authorities, after a period of preliminary tests, have become aware of the particular usefulness of dogs for sentinel duty in the trenches, and the newspapers have published notices calling upon dog owners to offer their available animals to the army. The dogs must be strong and hardy. In regard to breed, only shepherd dogs and some kinds of terriers are wanted. No special training for ambulance or sentinel service is required in advance but the dogs must not be more than a year and a half old, preferably not more than 15 months old. All applications are received and acted upon by the German Association of Sheep Dog Owners at Greiz, principality of Reuss. After registering their dogs with this association the applicants are requested to commence training the animals for some special branch of army service.

"First, of all the dogs will practice long marches, lasting several hours. In these exercises they will be paced by horses or by bicyclists. In the latter event the dogs are tied with a chain to the machine which proceeds at a leisurely gate. The Army Administration Bureau, which has charge of the dog recruiting, has laid special emphasis on the necessity of treating the animals with great kindness. There are many other details specified by the bureau for the guidance of owners and trainers, but it would be of little use to direct attention to them.

"On the whole the German methods are vastly inferior to those employed by the French army. What is most worthy of notice is that the German commanders in the field have clamored very insistently of late for an early and adequate increase of the dog squads at their disposal."

Husband Slain, Wife of Few Days In Cell, End of War Romance

A rather pathetic love story is going the round of the German papers, the characters being a German peasant girl and a farmer, who was looked upon with considerable deference for he owned his own home and farm. Both lived in the same village and they fell in love with each other. The girl, despite her uncouth manner, was pretty and a good worker, and both were very happy.

Then the war came, and the farmer was called to the front, but before he left he married the little peasant girl, and for a few days after they enjoyed their honeymoon. Then the husband left with his regiment.

The young husband wrote home often. "We are driving the enemy before us," he said; "we are everywhere victorious, and soon we will have peace and then I'll come back to you."

But peace did not come and the young wife became very despondent. If only her husband could get a short leave, but he was told that every man was needed at the front and that furloughs were granted only in rare instances.

She became very lonely and melancholic moments filled her days. She must have her husband, and so she worried until she conceived the idea of burning down her home and the barns.

"Surely, when the authorities see my plight," she argued to herself, "then they will allow my husband to come home to me."

And so one day she set fire to everything, and the buildings were burned to the ground. But things did not move as she expected. Instead the officers came and arrested her. "Law is law," they said, and the bewildered bride could not understand what they meant. The servants and the farm hands had known all about her aim for she had told them everything.

At the trial a plea of insanity was entered, but the government's physician said that she was suffering from melancholia, which under the German law did not excuse a crime. The judge sentenced her to a year's imprisonment, but she made no complaint. Neither did she shed a single tear, for that day would come that her husband had been killed on the battlefield in Russia.

CHEERS AS BIRDWOOD. "Turkish Hero—The Australians who fought bravely but unsuccessfully in the Gallipoli were recently given a grand reception in England. The picture shows General Birdwood who commanded the troops, addressing a crowd in London after a parade honouring the Australians.

HUNGER TO DECIDE WAR.

Danish Paper Says Germany Can't Hold Out Till Year's End.

Copenhagen, via London, May 26.—The newspaper [illegible] says:

"Lack of food will decide the war. Germany will be unable to carry on the war until the end of the year. German army ration has now been curtailed. The troops are not getting sufficient bread. The permission to purchase half a loaf weekly and to add to their allowance three-quarters of a pound daily has been withdrawn. Parcels with food from home have been stopped. As a result the physique of the soldiers is considerably impaired."

TAX 77 PER CENT OF WAR PROFITS IN GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, May 26.—Seventy-seven per cent. of his income is what the rich war contractor will pay to the government under Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna's new budget schedule. The contractor's contribution will be made through a three income tax, a super-tax, and an excess profit tax.

Leaving rich contractors out of consideration, the income tax is theoretically on a 25 per cent. basis. This rate is charged, however, only on "earned incomes" of 2,000 pounds (about $10,000) annually or more.

The rate is high, nevertheless, even on small incomes, amounting to 54 cents on every $4.80 even on those as small as 500 pounds (about $2,500) annually.

Chancellor McKenna expects to raise in the coming fiscal year, to meet war and ordinary governmental expenses, 569,000,000 pounds (almost exactly $2,843,200,000). This must come from a population of about 40,000,000.

NATIONAL DEFICIT IN 1916.

The last fiscal year's revenue was 97,000,000 pounds ($1,617,000,000), which means that the British loses taxes will be $626,000,000 higher in 1916-17 than in 1915, a tremendously stiff jump. Even $1,617,000,000 was not enough to run the government, and carry on the war last year, however. There was a deficit of 1,559,000,000 pounds ($7,443,200,000). This had to be borrowed.

Chancellor McKenna assumed that the war will continue throughout the coming fiscal year, which would imply another deficit. Accepting his figures, statisticians estimate that England's national debt in April next year will amount to something like 3,500,000,000 pounds ($16,800,000,000).

NATION BACKS SACRIFICES.

The customs duties were called for as a means of raising revenue. Mr. McKenna referred to them as impossible for this purpose "on account of the cost and difficulty of collection." This could well be taken care of, the protectionists say, by the staff engaged in making a national land valuation. Their opponents' answer is that the same men who want protection propose land taxation and are "playing both ends against the middle" in an effort to accomplish their political ends.

The accusation has been made that the aristocratic class wants to put an end to the payment of parliamentary salaries ($2,500 annually is allowed to each member at present) as a means of rendering it impossible for poor men, especially of the Labour party, to continue to serve.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

INCREASE IN WAGES FOR THE LABOURING MEN OF THE CITY

Board of Works Committee Recommend That the Men Employed by the City Receive an Increase of Five Cents an Hour—Sixty-four Men Will Be Affected, Including the Street Cleaners—Aldermen Suffer a Change of Heart—Board of Works Meeting.

An increase of five cents an hour for all labouring men employed by the city was a recommendation that was endorsed at last night's meeting of the Board of Works. The high cost of living and the ever-growing scarcity of men was given as two of the chief reasons for the increase. A petition signed by the men employed on the outfall sewer, asking for twenty-seven cents an hour was the means of opening up the discussion at last night's meeting of the Board. At present the men are getting twenty two cents an hour. The increase will bring this up to twenty-seven cents while men employed in the street cleaning department, at twenty cents an hour, will receive twenty-five cents for every sixty minutes they work.

Ald. Duncan was of the opinion that twenty-five cents an hour was a fair wage. He thought that all the city employees should be raised, including those whose salaries had been reduced ten per cent.

"I am right with you, there" said Ald. McIntyre.

It was moved by Ald. Duncan, and seconded by Ald. Saunders, that an increase of five cents per hour be granted all labouring men employed by the city. This will effect about sixty-four men and will swell the payroll to the extent of about one hundred and fifty dollars a week.

Both Mayor Duffus and Ald. Weir declined to vote on the issue. More than one member of the Board, including Ald. Duncan, expressed the opinion that a mistake had been made when the Council decided to cut the salaries of civic employees to the extent of ten per cent.

TO ENLARGE BUILDING.

Mr. W. H. Hill addressed a communication to the Board requesting permission to add a third storey to the Crown Office Building, at the corner of Hunter and Water Streets using a nine-inch wall supported on four steel columns with footings on the ground level.

City Engineer Parsons did not approve of a nine-inch wall for a three storey building, although the construction proposed was different to that provided for in the building by-law.

Ald. Weir expressed a similar opinion. "It's just an excuse," added Ald Weir, in referring to the proposed method of construction.

The City Engineer was asked to look into the matter and make a report.

A WAIL FROM EAST CITY.

Ald. Weir called the board's attention to the bad condition of some of the crossings in East City. Many of them were too high. City Engineer Parsons was instructed to have them remedied; also any others that might be in a similar condition.

The construction of three pieces of sewer was authorised by the Board including a piece on Romaine Street running seventy-five feet east of the junction of Romaine with Crescent streets.

It was reported to the Committee that the Rev. S. Crookshanks, 600 George Street, had chopped a hole in the curb to let the water run away City Engineer Parsons was instructed to have the break in the curb repaired and the cost of the work charged to Mr. Crookshanks.

All boulevards that have been recently levelled up by the City will be given an application of grass seed It will be left with the property owner to see that the boulevard is watered and cared for at regular intervals.

A board fence on Hunter Street near the G.T.R. tracks, will be lowered, so as to enable the gatemen to have an unobstructed view of Hunter Street, East. This request was made by Mr. Carver, a gateman employed by the Grand Trunk Railway Co.

"It is a reasonable request," chorused the Aldermen.

Miscellaneous Items.

"You can ask Mr. Buller about me; he is an old friend of mine." Thus did Mr. James Stewart, 240 McDonnell street, conclude a letter to the Board of Works requesting that McDonnell street, west of Aylmer street, be oiled or watered.

The City Engineer was instructed to look into the matter.

The Peterborough Dustless Sweeper Company was granted permission to demonstrate the possibilities of their vacuum cleaner on the streets of the city.

City Engineer Parsons will report on the advisability of lowering Hunter street for the proposed new Quaker Oats siding. The committee will not agree to the closing of Mill street. This matter will be dealt with in the Council.

The Grand Trunk Railway will be asked to fill in their tracks at the crossings from the station north.

City Engineer Parsons was given authority to employ an assistant whenever needed.

GRADUALLY STARVING

War Victims in Belgium and France Have Meagre Food Supply.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The destitute in Belgium and northern France are to-day living on one-third the amount of food necessary to maintain human life, and more supplies are needed at once, says Caspar Whitney, who has been in charge of the work of the Commission for Relief in Belgium in the northern part of France since April, 1915. The daily bread lines in the enemy-occupied countries are increasing daily, and the people's power of resistance is daily growing weaker. The Relief Commission has been compelled to increase its volunteer army of 40,000 workers. The upper middle class is suffering most because of the high food prices and because the commission does not furnish food to them.

North Monaghan Contributed $300 To 93rd Batt. Fund

At Special Meeting on Tuesday Night—Also Decided to Pay Road Labourers $2.00 Per Day

ARCHIE PATTERSON'S DUTIES

A special meeting of the North Monaghan Council was held at May's School House on May 23rd, at 8 p.m. All members of the Council were present, with Reeve McIntosh in the chair. The meeting was called for the purpose of hearing a deputation from the City of Peterborough, composed of Mayor Duffus, Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. S. R. Armstrong and Mr. F. H. Dobbin. Each of these gentlemen gave a short address, outlining the requirements of the 93rd Battalion. They asked North Monaghan to give them a grant toward the Battalion Fund that was being collected in Peterborough county for the purpose of supplying field kitchens and a number of other requirements, as the Battalion was ready to go into camp at Barriefield. These gentlemen retired and the Council discussed the matter.

It was moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Robson, that the township of North Monaghan grant the sum of $300 toward the 93rd Battalion Fund.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Rye, that men engaged for labour of the public highway be paid $2.00 per day, or 20 cents per hour.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Rye, that the Road Commissioners be paid $3.50 per day as Road Commissioners; that Archie Patterson, Commissioner for Road Division No. 8, be appointed to look after the operation of the stone crusher; also that he have charge of the gravel pit; that Archie Patterson run the grader for the township and that he be paid $3 for this service; that he also be appointed to run the road drag in No. 6 Road Division at $4.25 per day, including team.

The meeting then adjourned.

ALLIES MAKE READY FOR BAGDAD DRIVE

LONDON, May 26.— The Turkish force confronting the British below Kut-el-Amara, in Mesopotamia, has not effected a further withdrawal since that reported recently incident to the realignment of the Turkish front after the surrender of Kut-el-Amara. The British, however, through their advance on the right bank of the Tigris, have been able to command with their artillery, the line of Turkish communications on the opposite bank, according to an official statement to-night, which says:

"General Lake reports that on May 18th the enemy was still holding his positions in the vicinity of Sannayyat. Our artillery, from the right bank, has been maintaining an effective fire upon his communications along the left bank."

Step Turk Offensive.

A Russian official statement issued to-day says:

"In the direction of Mosul we repulsed an enemy attempt at an offensive on Rivandouza. Nothing of importance occurred in other directions.

"Our troops operating in the region of Kermanshah and Kasr-i-Shirin, have effected a junction with the British forces on the Tigris below Kut-el-Amara. On May 22nd our Cossacks reached the quarters of the British Commanding General."

What Turks Claim.

The Turks officially report the following:

"Russian forces, whose advance from the direction of Kasr-i-Shirin on Khanikin was reported, were compelled to cease their advance in the vicinity of the frontier.

"In a fight with Russian detachments observed on the Persian frontier, just north of Sulamaijah, we caused them to lose 200 men.

"Caucasus front — On the right wing, in the Bitlis sector, there have been insignificant patrol encounters. In the centre and on the left wing enemy attempts on the night of the 23rd to attack our outpost positions by surprise were easily repulsed."

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT AND THANKS

Mr. Harry Winch wishes, through this medium, to cordially thank his many friends for their numerous kindnesses to him during his recent illnesses; especially for the lovely flowers, every leaf and petal of which seemed to bring a message of love and sympathy, brightening the loneliness and soothing the pain of many hours of illness, and awaking grateful appreciation of the love and esteem of his dear old friends.

Man Near Death From Experience In a German Internment Camp

New York, May. 25—A letter received by Miss Nellie F. Turner at the Waldorf-Astoria tells a tale of hardships endured in a German internment camp which transformed a [illegible] sailor into such a physical wreck that the physicians fear for his life.

The sailor who was interned when his vessel, the steamship Rubens, was caught in Hamburg by the declaration of war, is James Kirwin, and he comes from a prominent family in Wicklow, Ireland.

The vessel had arrived from the Plate with a cargo of lumber July 27, 1914. The members of the crew were kept on the vessel until the middle of October, and were then placed on prison ships in Hamburg Harbor. As many as 360 men were crowded into one of the hulks and were there for 21 days. For food they had one slice of thin black bread and half a pint of "coffee" for their breakfast. Dinner consisted of bean soup and potatoes on alternate days with a bit of meat occasionally. Supper was the same as breakfast.

In the camp at Spandau, where the men were later taken, they were forced to undergo such hardships as sleeping on the bare ground and on beds of wood fibre, so that according to Kirwin, when the men were turned out in the morning they felt as if they had been sleeping on rocks, and had been beaten with blackthorn sticks. Through the efforts of Mr. Kirwin's sister, who was in Switzerland at the time and learned where her brother was, food was sent to him and other men in the camp by women in England and Ireland.

Last June Mr. Kirwin broke down under the hardships, suffering from attacks of dizziness and a general broken down condition. He was removed to a sanitarium and was somewhat better treated there. Finally he was in such a condition that he was sent back to England through Holland. There he has been kept in a Red Cross Hospital. He has just arrived at his old home at Wicklow in Ireland, where the physicians say that there is a possibility that he will recover.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or inviting attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which then assumes the responsibility.

King's Wharf, May 22nd, 1916.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you please allow me, for the benefit of the public, a small space in the columns of your valuable paper, in reference to the Pidgeon Creek floating bridge, which is now closed owing to want of repairs. It can be proven that in 1864 the people could cross over the stream at that time on a square log 16 feet long, that was the width of the lake, which is now something over a mile. Soon after that the Government started damming back the waters of the Trent Valley Canal. Now, then, is not the Government responsible? If so, what is the matter with the Reeves of Verulam, Bobcaygeon, Emily and Ennismore. What's the matter with Mr. Burnham, M.P.? What's the matter with Colonel, the Honourable Sam Hughes? Are these gentlemen going to stand by and knew that their riding is in want of their assistance. Just now this bridge is the connecting line between the two counties, Peterborough and Victoria. They tell us there is a war on now. Sure thing, there is a war on, but if something is not done by the Government, and at once, there will be a war on right here and we will hold the members of our west riding responsible for any trouble in the near future. Wake up, Mr. Burnham. Wake up, Colonel Hughes.

Hoping I have not taken too much of your paper, I am,

Respectfully yours,
JOS. C. O'LEARY

93rd Must Be Completed First

In reply to a wire sent to Col. Hemming, D.O.C., in regard to a new battalion for Peterborough, Capt J. H. Burnham has received the following reply from Col. Hemming:—

"The organization of another battalion in Peterborough was to be considered when the 93rd Battalion has been completed."

A Bicycle Trip to Chemong Park

Boys Will Leave the "Y" Saturday Morning at 9.30—"Y" News

Saturday morning, at 9.30, the boys will leave the 'Y' for a bicycle trip to Chemong Park. A big time is promised the boys on this trip, a baseball match will be played by two teams selected from the "Y" boys and the first swim of the season will be the chief feature of the trip. Bring your bathing suit, lunch, and dimes, with you.

The big war canoe will be ready for the water by the middle of next week. It is the intention of the 'Y' to have an Intermediate and Junior Boys' crew this summer. This is a fine exercise and it is requested that as many of the boys as possible turn out for practice.

The tennis courts are in good shape now and tournaments for the members will commence next week. All those who wish to participate in the games will kindly leave their names with the Physical Director as soon as possible.

The boys are now starting to take special interest in their annual camp which will be held at Sandy Point Clear Lake, this summer. Parents who wish their boys to attend this camp will kindly have their names handed in as soon as possible. All names must be in by June 15th.

AN INDICATION THAT HOTEL REVENUES HAVE LARGELY DECREASED

An almost certain sign that some of the hotels have fallen upon lean days is a report of two of them being in arrears for their taxes. Of course this condition applies not only to the hotels in question, but to business houses that have suffered heavily from the effects of the war. However, it is admitted that the restraints placed upon the hotels during the past fifteen months have largely diminished the revenue of the bars. Probably the most effective measure in this respect was the eight o'clock closing hour, and from a combination of causes it was natural to expect that the hotel conditions would reflect their lessened bar activities.

Commits Suicide

MAN AGED EIGHTY YEARS GASHES HIS THROAT WITH A PENKNIFE.

Geneva, May 26.—James Emerson of Earl, committed suicide while despondent. He arose at 4 o'clock and went to a small out building where with a penknife he cut his throat from ear to ear. His wife who missed him from the house, found him dead a short time after the deed had been committed.

Emerson was one of the most prominent farmers in the region of Earl station. To-day he was to have celebrated his 80th birthday. He was born in England and came to this country in 1850. He had lived at Earl for 50 years. The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m., from his late home. Burial will be made in the Belgian cemetery.

57TH CHAPTER I. O. D. E. MEETING

Regular Monthly Meeting Held Last Evening in the Y.W.C.A.

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held on Thursday evening at the Y, and was largely attended.

After the usual business had been dispatched, a standing vote of thanks was passed to the officers of the 57th Regiment for their gift to the Chapter of ($50.00) fifty dollars.

The ladies were very much pleased that their efforts on Empire Day were attended with such success. The sum of ($150.71) one hundred and sixty-five dollars and seventy-one cents, being realised from the refreshment booth.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Young, seconded by Miss Davidson and carried unanimously to Mr. E. F. Mason, who so kindly took charge of and sent the supplies down, carefully packed, to Mr. W. Higgins and the Dickson Co. for favours received, and to all those who so kindly contributed flowers, (Mr. F. Wise), refreshments, and their valued services in any way, many thanks are due, for all were factors in adding to the success of the day.

An interesting paper was read by Mrs. J. C. Davidson on the origin of Empire Day.

The Regent, Mrs. Walker, gave a brief and apt report of the convention in Toronto, last week, which she attended as a delegate.

The meeting was then brought to a close with the usual form.

THE "PRINCESS PAT" REAL MUSICAL COMEDY

One of the Most Enjoyable Productions in Years at the Grand Last Night

Mr. John Carter presented "The Princess Pat" at the Grand Opera last night, and the verdict of the fair sized audience present was "the best musical comedy seen here in years." It was the first Cort attraction to appear in Peterborough, and after last night any production under the same auspices will be decidedly welcome.

Victor Herbert wrote the music for "The Princess Pat" and it is Herbert at his best, the music throughout being of the catchy, infectious kind that makes one whistle as he leaves the theatre. The plot is—in spite of the fact that it is a musical comedy—logically connected, while the lines are bright and clever. There was a refreshing lack of that horse play that some alleged comedians seem to need to make an impression and in its place a wit and humour that kept the audience in a perpetual state of chuckling.

Mr. Cort has given the attraction a magnificent caste. The principals are clever and accomplished and the chorus really sings as well as wears lavish gowns and looks pretty. A score of lilting melodies, clever dancing and sparkling dialogue, makes "The Princess Pat," a thing of beauty and joy.

Charlotte Le Grandie scored a triumph in the title role, not only because of her splendid vocal ability but also because of her clever acting, while Effie Toye was charming as Grace Holbrook. Oscar Figman, an old friend of "The Tenderfoot," and many other successes gave a rattling performance as Bob Darrow, being responsible for much of the laughter. Ben Hendricks scored heavily in his portrayal of the flirtatious Mr. Oldeen, while the performance of Nelson Ryley as Si Perkins, some sheriff of this county, by heck," was a screaming success.

The song numbers were all gems. "Make Him Guess" by Miss Toye, "Love is Best of All" by Miss Le Grandie, the duet, "For Better or For Worse" by Misses Toye and Miss Le Grandie, the "Neapolitan Love Song" by Mr. Everett, "I'd Like to be a Quitter, But I Find it Hard to Quit" by Mr. Graham, and the chorus, "Two Lassies, Irish Eyes" were all splendid numbers, but two of the biggest hits of the evening were scored by Mr. Hendricks in his topical song, "I Wish I Was An Island in an Ocean of Girls," which was repeatedly encored, and Mr. Henrick's delightfully funny song, "The Shoes of Hurried Number One as Worn by Number Two."

The dancing divertissements by Lorena Marks and Francis Bryan was decidedly clever and they were recalled several times.

An augmented orchestra added to the charm of the music.

"The Princess Pat" lived up to all its advance notices.

TO RECONSTRUCT FRANCE.

Exhibition Designed to Rebuild Villages on Model Lines.

PARIS, May 26.—President Poincare yesterday inaugurated an exposition in the Tuileries Gardens, at which methods of reconstructing the devastated villages of France are being demonstrated. Types of reconstructed houses, with modern sanitary equipment, and plans for laying out cities and towns, are on exhibition.

French Reserves Are Ample While Enemy Wastes Men

LONDON, MAY 25.—The Times military correspondent says this morning:

"The Germans continue to exhaust their army before Verdun to the point of extermination. They bring up divisions in reserve from every quarter where one is to be found. There are ample French guns and there are still French troops in reserve in plenty for any purpose which may enter Joffre's mind.

"When the writer visited Verdun he found the whole countryside outside the fire zone filled with French reserves, and although the battle was raging with all the fury which had been its distinguishing characteristic, French permissionaries were going off to their homes on furlough as if nothing was happening.

"The French practice has been to give the divisions a rest after serious fighting in order to prevent their quality from deteriorating and they have ample reserves.

"The Germans are not in this fortunate position, and so they have to draw their shattered divisions out of the line, fill them up from the base depots as best they may and hurry them back again into the fight."

VESTRY MEETING ST. ALBAN'S MISSION

Officers Were Elected For the Year

The adjourned vestry meeting was held in the Mission room last night, when the following officers were elected:

Church wardens—Messrs. F. Wilkework and J. Burns.
S. S. Supt.—Mr. Crawley.
Secretary—Mr. T. Tooms.

The Sunday school has a roll of 56 children, an evidence of the great need that St. Alban's is supplying. An indication

WHAT ABOUT A SUPPLY OF HOSIERY

SURELY we could not ask a more opportune question, when low shoes are being worn by practically every woman you meet; and too, the new sport outfits must have the proper finish to them in Hosiery.

Hosiery prices begin as low as 10c for Cotton Stockings and rise by graded stages to $3.00 a pair for Pure Silks and Novelty Ideas.

FIBRE-SILK BOOT STOCKINGS 19c A PAIR
For the woman who wants a Silk Stocking at a cotton-stocking price. Several others including black and white.

EMBROIDERED SILK HOSE 25c and 50c A PAIR
Embroidered designs in Stockings are coming in so fast it is doubtful whether manufacturers have anticipated the demand. These have a very effective design and are Real Silk Embroidered.

$1.25 SILK STOCKINGS BEST QUALITY POSSIBLE
Unquestionably the best stocking at $1.25 we could possibly find, and in view of the rising cost of Silks we consider these Stockings at $1.25 a most extraordinary value. Pure thread silk, high spliced lisle heel & toe and with a ribbed top. In a great number of colors including black and white.

FINE MACO HOSE, EXTRA QUALITY - 15c A PAIR
They are of Maco Cotton, seamless and of fine quality. A stocking far better than the average and worth while procuring a stock of.

THE FAD OF THE SEASON
SPORT STRIPE SKIRTS
From the way women and misses all over the country are taking to this new skirt-fad, we believe it will be hard to secure one of these desirable garments later on. And when we say sport stripe we do not mean that they all must be of the extreme type—there are some quite conservative among them.

Cross Trenches and Wire Escape to French Line

A Russian soldier, taken prisoner by the Germans, tells the Paris Matin how he was sent to the French front, but finally, with two companions, after three days of hairbreadth escapes, reached the French lines. This soldier, Sergius Selivanow, of the 208nd infantry regiment, of Little Archangel, tells his story with the simplicity of the moujik and the picturesque expressions of the soldier.

"We were surrounded by the Germans at Rhev-l," he says, "and the enemy's forces were much superior to ours. It was necessary to surrender or be exterminated. We surrendered. We were sent to the Prussian receiving station at Neumunster. What we endured there you cannot imagine.

"One day an officer told us to get ready to go away. We learned that they were going to send us to the western front to help in construction work against the French. Our indignation knew no bounds when we learned we were to help combat our allies but it was impossible to resist.

"When we arrived at our destination near Therizy in Champagne we were allotted tasks beyond our strength. Life seemed insupportable to my two companions and myself. We agreed that it was better to try to regain our liberty, even at the risk of death. Finally a favourable day arrived and we decided on flight.

"For a long time we prayed God to help us and soon acquired confidence of our success. This was our scheme: Frequently we were sent to get bread for the section where we were; that is to say for five hundred persons. With this object fifteen prisoners including us three had, to go to a house rather far from our camp. In going we could, without danger, pass the barbed wire fences with which the camp was surrounded.

"A sergeant with an ugly face told us to go for the bread, first counting us twice. We left escorted by a single soldier. We reached the house where the bread was kept. The Germans entered the house first and our comrades followed him.

A Dash For Freedom.

"We three, however, started off obliquely to the right and walking fast, reached the bank of a little stream. We concealed ourselves in a thicket, listening for the least noise to find whether we had been followed. A quarter of an hour passed. Then we saw four Germans searching for us with little pocket electric lamps. Without making any noise we crawled away.

"Before us was a little hill, quickly crossed. Then we were in open country. A road led us to a village that we could not avoid. We had to cross it without delay before an alarm could be given. In order not to arouse suspicion we marched forward coldly. The streets were barely lighted everybody seemed asleep. We met very few soldiers. Some didn't see us and the others, who were very drunk, staggered away. Once past the village we felt as if relieved of a heavy burden.

"Again we came to the little stream. To pass it we had to cross a wooden bridge guarded by a single sentinel. We reached the bridge and he cried out 'Halt! Wer da?' Without saying a word the three of us threw ourselves on the soldier knocked him down and ran across as fast as we could. We heard a shot. It was the sentinel firing in our direction, but the night, which was very dark, was favourable to us concealing us from the sentinel.

"This danger passed, a new peril arose. Before us we saw a camp of soldiers from the first lines. They were dead asleep and the few shots did not awaken them. We stepped along a wall and soon came to a path which led up a high hill.

"Suddenly the moon shone out between two clouds and prudence counselled us to stop. A very leafy tree seemed a favourable refuge. We climbed up and hid ourselves as best we could. B-r-r-r-! the night was cold. But day came and with it danger. German soldiers passed and repassed all day. Some even stopped under the tree, smoking slowly big cigars.

"The day waned, the soldiers became rarer and we continued our journey. The moon must certainly be an ally of the Germans for it shone brightly as if it wished to betray us. Nevertheless we had to seek some refuge to pass the day. Finally we found an abandoned trench which we marked with bougies.

Pass German Trenches.

"Night had almost fallen again when we left our shelter. The firing was very lively. The Germans hid themselves in their trenches and we passed along in the open like ghosts, at the mercy of the bullets. Wide trenches, full of soldiers barred our route. The soldiers seeing us thought we were comrades who had lost our way and made ready to give us room, calling out, "Komm! Komm!"

"Finally we found a trench where there was only one soldier. We rushed over him in a hurry, leaving him dumb with amazement, and came to the barbed wire entanglements. Then we were like trapped fish trying to get out between the meshes of a net. Our peril was very great. Every minute they were firing in our direction. Finally, my flesh torn and bleeding from the barbed wire after a thousand efforts, I succeeded in getting free and jumped into a trench. Soon my comrades joined me and we lay down in the narrow hole crowded like herrings in a barrel.

"Before us there was another network of barbed wire. We tried to pass but at every movement the wire made a noise and attracted a lively fire. Suddenly I fell against the body of a French soldier, caught in the net and riddled with bullets. Every time that a rocket dissipated the darkness the Germany took it for a target.

"Early in the morning we decided to put an end to our critical situation. We raised a white handkerchief and shouted, "Comrades! Comrades! Rousski! Rousski!" For ten minutes there was no reply. Finally we saw a helmet. What a misfortune! A helmet! These then were Germans. All was lost. But, looking more closely, we seemed to recognize the sky-blue colour of the French uniform. Five minutes afterwards we were in their trenches and were received with open arms."

HUNGARIANS AT ODDS WITH ALLY

Budapest, May 25.—Another quarrel has broken out between the German and Hungarian political and military authorities owing to the intrigues of some of the officers and agents of the German army operating from Hungary as a base. The most prominent figure in the quarrel is Field Marshall von Mackensen, who delivered an extraordinary speech the other day to the officers of the Hungarian Honved contingents.

He complained that the Germans in Hungary are being oppressed and that the feeling in Hungary as regards the German troops in the country just now, that they came to free the oppressed German-speaking people is not quite the aim of the Germans, but as they are here they will see their way to improve the position of the Germans in Hungary.

However, there are more than two millions of German speaking people in Hungary and they are just as well off, even in some things better off, than any of the other nationalities. They inhabit the most fertile lands of Hungary, the Banat and the Bacska; they are the most well to do section of the population; but naturally they have to learn Hungarian in the schools, and they are just as much under the Magyarisation policy of the Hungarian government as are the other nationalities. The Saxons of Transylvania and the lower Hungarian plains are continually grumbling on account of the Magyarisation policy, and they have formed Pan-German societies. They are permanently in touch with the Pan-German propagandists and do their best to sow discussion among the non-German neighbours.

Field Marshal von Mackensen, when he was stationed at Temesvar, before the offensive began against Serbia, was living amongst these Saxons, and they converted him also to the anti-Hungarian feeling predominant in that region. In consequence he has been trying his best to promote Pan-Germanism among these elements, but never dared up to now to go so far as to give open expression to his views on the subject.

The papers were not allowed to print the speech itself but some comments have appeared nevertheless, especially in the semi-official press, and these tend to show how deep rooted is the feeling against the Germans. The Az Est, Count Tisza's pet journal, and the semi-official paper of the government is allowed to print a most vehement outburst against the German aspirations, and against their "liberating" policy. It says:

"This country has been acquired by Hungarian blood, has been defended by the blood of Hungarian soldiers; the majority of its people is Hungarian, and even in the districts where the language is not Magyar the sentiments and feelings of the people is Hungarian nevertheless. The Hungarian state knows its duty to defend the national rights and aspirations of the country, even in those parts where the tongue is other than Hungarian, against all anti-national aspirations of uninvited foreigners."

THE WAITE CASE

NEW YORK, May 25.—Four [illegible] headed the throng of witnesses gathered in the criminal branch of the Supreme court for the trial of Dr. Arthur Warren Waite. The young New York dentist, sportsman and man-about-town is charged with murder, first degree, in poisoning his father-in-law, John E. Peck, a wealthy manufacturer, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Since he has confessed the deed, the prosecution believes that the defence will rely upon a plea of insanity.

To combat this tendency the State has assigned three medical experts and seven lay witnesses who knew the defendant at different periods of his career, many of them to testify that his behaviour in their presence had shown no signs of mental disquietude. The defence has summoned one alienist.

Probably the most interesting figures at the trial, however, next to the prisoner himself, will be his wife, Mrs. Clara Peck Waite, and Miss Margaret Horton, a young New York singer, with whom Waite associated at times in a "studio" at an uptown hotel. Altogether the State has prepared 150 witnesses. Eleven panels of 50 talesmen have been summoned each, it may be a day or two before a jury is selected.

Indications soon after the trial got under way were that it probably would require the better part of the day to select a jury. Percy L. Pelton, the first talesman examined, declared he had formed an opinion and was peremptorily challenged by the defence. The second talesman called was excused by the court. Robert Bell, a mechanical engineer, was next examined and being acceptable to both prosecution and defence, was sworn in as the first juror.

TO LAY CORNER STONE OF NEW ST. JAMES' CHURCH

On Thursday Afternoon Next—Growth and Progress of This Church Has Been Phenomenal—Started in 1908

The growth of St. James' Church and its enterprising spirit is worthy of more than passing reference. Its growth has been phenomenal. Rev H. M. Manning laid the foundation of this new cause in 1908, worshipping in a tent, at which 31 persons were present.

A Sunday School was started with an attendance of 30 which has grown until now its various departments include over 500 members. The Church membership numbers nearly 300.

The Sunday School hall was built in 1908 and 1909, at a cost of nearly $15,000.00.

The erection of Trinity Methodist Church paved the way for the trustees said congregation to give the old Charlotte Street Church, with its entire equipment to the St. James people.

The generous gift has led this sturdy stripling to undertake the erection of a new church, the corner stone of which will be laid (D.V.) next Thursday afternoon, June 1st between 4 and 5 o'clock. The pastor Rev. S. Gunstrix, asks the Christian friends, especially the Methodist fraternity, to make this a memorable occasion by their presence.

The ladies of the Congregation will serve a tea in the Sunday School Hall, at the close of the ceremony.

Woman Hurt in German Food Riots

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 26.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that eighteen women were wounded in a fight between the police and food rioters at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, on Wednesday night.

The riot started owing to a shortage of meat in the local butcher shops.

The women forced their way into one butcher shop, securing some meat.

The police attempted to take the meat from the women, and a general fight followed, in which the officers used their swords. One woman was arrested for shouting, "Down with the Emperor."

A leading article in the Schleisiche Zeitung, the organ of the great Silesian land owner, says: "It is childish to continue always to hide the truth. Let us openly admit that the difficulties that have arisen mainly in the great towns are caused, not merely by a lack of system, but also from the fact that the supply of such necessary articles is inadequate.

venience to our soldier boys and add greatly to their stomach comfort on their route marches. — Havelock Standard.

The statement made at Lindsay yesterday that 4,000 residents of the united counties of Victoria and Haliburton had enlisted is somewhat along the lines of the Cobourg claims. Even counting the hundreds of men that were brought from Toronto last spring for the 39th Battalion and those from Kingston, Toronto and other places for the present 109th Battalion, as residents of the county, which of course they are not, it is hard to figure anything near the mark claimed. For it must be remembered that there has been no recruiting in Lindsay for artillery or mounted units.

Troops at Barriefield are forbidden to use water from wells or springs for drinking purposes unless the water is marked as being fit to drink. All ranks are cautioned as to the necessity of guarding against waste of water. All faucets must be left tightly closed.

The Kingston Whig says: Barriefield camp is now in "full working order" with over 1,500 men already under canvass and waiting to give proper reception to the remaining battalions which will be coming in every day from now until the last of the month. The headquarters staff is well established in the old Administration Building and an annex that is rapidly being completed by the contractors, Campbell and Wright, who certainly deserve great credit for the speed which they have shown in making the erection. The building is large enough to accommodate all the headquarters staff now without undue crowding.

A few days ago there was the constant click of typewriters at the Armouries in the city. Those typewriters are now working overtime grinding out letters at Barriefield camp.

ESSEX GIRL, LONG MISSING, FOUND BY POLICE HERE

Created a Sensation by Disappearance From Home in December

Girl Worked in Factories in This City and Lived on Waterloo Street.

LONDON, May 26. — After being missing from her home since Friday, December 26, 1915, and thought to be dead or in the hands of abductors, Ettie Fox, 16-year-old and only daughter of Joseph Fox, a well-to-do farmer of Blytheswood, was located in this city yesterday by the local police. Some weeks ago a member of the 99th Battalion who knew the girl at her home, thought that he saw her on the street. Remembering the circumstances surrounding her disappearance, he reported the fact to the police, who immediately began working on the case, and arrested her yesterday afternoon at her boarding house, 528 Waterloo street.

Great interest was aroused through the country over the mysterious circumstances surrounding her disappearance, and police all over Ontario were instructed to be on the lookout for her. The girl was last seen on one of the main streets of Leamington, where she had gone to make some purchases, her father's farm being within a few miles of the town.

The case was rendered more mysterious by the fact that about six months before her brother had mysteriously disappeared.

Was Thought Abducted.

After her disappearance people remembered seeing a strange automobile speeding through the neighbourhood of Leamington on the day upon which she was last seen. It was rumoured that she had been kidnapped and taken away in this automobile, and a sharp watch was kept for the machine. A few days later her parents received a letter written in Detroit, but posted in Windsor, which said that she had been arrested by a British secret service agent as a spy, and probably would be taken to England under custody. The letter said that she was being well treated and was in good health. As the handwriting did not resemble her's it was thought that she had been forced to write the letter to throw pursuers off the tracks of her abductors. Since then no word had been heard of her until she was recognized in London.

Under Assumed Name.

While in London she had been known as Helena Sydney, and had been living a very quiet life. Under the name of Sydney she had been employed in several factories, where she bore a good reputation. Her parents have been notified, and she will probably return to her home with them.

When taken by Detective Nickle, she at first denied that her name was Fox, but soon admitted her identity. She was not talkative, but intimated that she was not happy at home. She will appear before Magistrate J. C. Judd in the police court.

BASEBALL

On Central School Grounds in the Junior series of the Public School Baseball League on May 22nd the home team defeated the King Edward team by a score of 16-4.

Batteries—

Central—McGill and Dutton.

King Edward—Bowden and Allen.

Yesterday evening another game in the same series was played between the teams of King George and Central schools. The latter team was successful by the score of 7-0.

Batteries—

Central—McGill and Dutton.

King George—Lipsett and Anderson.

In the former game Mr. S. McNeely made a satisfactory umpire, and in the latter game Messrs. Roper and H. Long umpired most efficiently.

In a Junior League baseball game played yesterday afternoon at the King Edward School Grounds, the Queen Mary team defeated the King Edward team by the score of 21 to 11.

Batteries—

Queen Mary — Barraclough and Hamilton.

King Edward—Sowden and Sabine.

Mr. Milton Frost umpired the game very satisfactorily.

The first game in the Church Baseball League will be played Monday evening, May 29th, between Murray Street and Trinity Church.

The game will be called at 6.30 sharp, and it is requested that every player make an effort to be on hand sharp on time.

TENNIS

The following will likely be the clubs to enter the Church League which will commence on June 1st: All Saints, George Street, Trinity Sacred Heart, St. Andrew's, Knights of Columbus, Y.M.C.A., and St. Paul's or Knox. Should either of the latter clubs not enter, the League will be divided into two divisions, and St. Andrew's will enter two clubs, one in each division. The schedule and full conditions of the tournament will appear in to-morrow's (Saturday) papers. Any information about the League can be obtained from the President, G. B. Langley, or the Secretary, E. Walton, 'Phones 1521 or 910.

To Investigate

Albion, May 23.—Sheriff Chester M. Bartlett has been asked to investigate the stealing of a horse, harness and whiffletree, besides nineteen registered Plymouth Rock hens from the farms of Henry Glidden and Robert Sargent.

Wednesday night an automobile party were stuck in the mud in the road near the Glidden home, north of Clarendon. Instead of asking at the Glidden home for help, the members of the party it is alleged, went into the barn and took a horse and the tools necessary to drag their car out of the mud. When through with the horse they tied it to a tree where it was found yesterday morning. It later developed that nineteen choice Plymouth Rock hens had been stolen from the Sargent farm, which is located a short distance from the Glidden home and it is assumed that the automobile party committed both of the thefts.

The car was traced by Sheriff Bartlett as far as the State road and a short distance thereon but information has been obtained by the sheriff which will lead him to believe that the marauders made their way into Rochester.

"That man irritates me!" "Why?" "He knows so much that isn't so—and he can prove all his statements!"—Judge.

FRENCH READ MORE THAN THEY DID BEFORE THE WAR

"At the recently opened book fair in Lyons, France, one has an excellent opportunity to study the literary taste of the public at the present time," says a writer in the Paris Temps.

The war has upset our intellectual life as well as our political and economic affairs," he adds, "and since one can judge a nation's moral character fairly correctly by the literature it prefers, it is interesting to notice what kind of books are in greatest favour just now.

"It is an incontestable fact that people do more reading these days than they did before the war for the simple reason that our existence now adays offers us fewer of the recreations and pastimes to which we were formerly accustomed. Many kinds of sport which in fate generations had forced the taste for literature into the background have been altogether abandoned. The gravity of the prevailing situation sobered all minds and during the anxious waiting for developments which may change the whole aspect of the Old World one now turns again to reading, the most suitable diversion to enliven the sad hours.

"Naturally, the war literature occupies the foremost place in the attention of the public. All our thoughts are centred on the formidable struggle in which our heroic defenders are engaged. At the Lyons Fair more than a thousand books on the war are represented. By inquiries among publishers it has been found that there are two distinct classes of readers at the present time. One consists of the civilians and the military officials not at the actual front. These readers prefer books dealing with present military events, stories of the men on the firing line, correspondence from prisoners of war, and the like. Then there is the other class, made up of officers and soldiers at the front, who clamour only for romance and novels, classical works no less than modern ones.

"Those on a higher intellectual level are reading over again Pascal, Montaigne, Corneille, Racine, La Rochefoucauld, Rabelais, Mendhal and Maupassant, while the average soldier finds relaxation from the sordid trench routine by devoting his leisure hours to popular editions of the latest love novels. The divergence of taste between the two classes of readers is quite natural. It is easy to understand that the people at home, while constantly following the gigantic conflict in their thoughts, should wish to have the pictures of their imagination verified in the concrete form of the printed word. On the other hand, the fighting men themselves, who have faced death daily for months, are rather callous to the incidents of the world drama before them and prefer to let their fancy return to the things that in happier times make life sweet and charming. It is only part of human nature to indulge in dreams of an existence under circumstances and in surroundings entirely different from those in which one is actually living.

"That the general public is still so intensely interested in the war literature after more than twenty months of fighting is a striking proof of the excellent morale of the French nation and of its firm resolutness to prosecute the conflict to a decisive end. If the French spirit had weakened or was wavering this would be plainly indicated, as is the case in Germany, by a sort of indifference, if not real repugnance, at everything reminding of the unselfish deeds and glorious sacrifices of the soldiers in the field.

Certain publishers are encouraging soldiers at the front to write down their experiences for publication and although this may occasionally result in some really good literary product, it is not a prudent policy on the whole. It not only tends to encumber the war literature with a mass of mediocre works, but it also inspires futile ambitions in many a poor 'poilu,' who may get a notion that he has literary ability merely to be cruelly disappointed afterward when he endeavours to gain due recognition of the same."

ADVANCES ARE FUTILE SAYS ITALIAN OFFICER

New York, May 26.—The reported Austrian successes in their present drive on the Trentino front, consist in the capture of a few outposts thrust forward by the Italians beyond their regular lines of defence, according to Captain Piero Tozzi, of the 80th Italian Infantry, who arrived here yesterday on a six months' leave of absence after a year on the Isonzo front.

Captain Tozzi, who is well known here as an artist, was wounded in the fighting at San Michele on October 21, in a bayonet charge which he led, and for which he was decorated with a silver medal by King Victor Emmanuel. He was recently discharged from a hospital in Florence and has come here for a rest.

The Austrians, he said yesterday, at the Vanderbilt Hotel, never can advance beyond the Asiago plateau. Here artillery and infantry positions, with men to withstand any onslaught and artillery increasing in strength as fast as great factories from Sicily to the Alps can turn it out, are massed. The defences, he added, extend back for miles in a great labyrinth of very heavily protected trenches.

The Austrian drive, he says, marks another great step toward the isolation of Germany and a great advance in the military activities of Italy. He believes it is part of a series of desperate efforts being made by the Teutonic allies to find a weak spot in the hardening armour of the Entente Allies, that a hole may be torn in the iron ring that is crushing Germany.

Italy has 3,000,000 trained men on whom she may call, and in June, evidently as a preface to a great drive, which will be part of a concerted effort by the Allies the call for all men capable of bearing arms from the ages of 20 to 40 years, will go out.

"Italy," Captain Tozzi said, "is having a Renaissance. There is being born in the spirits of the people that sturdiness of heart that seemed to have died out within the last two centuries. It is the flame of the old Romans come back. Everywhere the country is a beehive of activity. The great factories are making guns of all kinds, the muskets we carry and the giant artillery pieces which are tearing the Austrian lines. The manufacturers are developing an ability they never believed that they had. They are producing necessities on which previously we have been dependent on Germany, and with the knowledge of this ability growing every day Italy's determination to fight this war to a victorious end is increasing.

"This war has taught us that we cannot march into Trieste and Trentino. The day of great military manoeuvres has gone. Italy realizes that the war is one to be determined by forces of men and of arms. We have all of both that we may need. We are not only making our own munitions but we are helping to supply Russia too.

"My country is not feeling the war severely. The streets are full of men. The opera at Milan is well patronized and in Rome the gayety is as great as ever. Our enemies seem not to believe that. The psychology of the Latin is a mystery to them just as the psychology of the Teuton is not understood by us."

Captain Tozzi said the Austrians had taken the Italian outposts on the Trentino front through the fact that the patrols of the defence, that being once having them they were valueless from any point of view, as the rifle bomb squads had instructed them as protections and even to their original strength they were under the fire of the Italian artillery from the first line of defence.

HAMILTON MOVES CLOCK.

Will Begin the Saving of Daylight on Sunday, June 4.

HAMILTON, Ont., May 26.—The controllers decided this morning to put into force the daylight-saving scheme on Sunday, June 4th, hoping that Toronto will do likewise. On that date all citizens will be asked to put the clock ahead an hour when 2 o'clock is reached.

Efforts are being made to have all cities in Ontario follow the example, the clocks to be put back an hour on October 1st.

GERMANY'S SHORT MEMORY.

Germany's official memory is exceedingly short; already in the fervour of her protests against the hardships imposed on non-combatants by English food blockade, she forgets that when Paris was besieged in 1870-1871 the weekly death rate in that beleaguered city was nearly 6,000 (civilians only), as against a normal rate of 1,200 weekly. It is nearly impossible to find alive in France now a person born in Paris during the siege, because the hapless infants that entered the world at that time were so weak and so poorly provided for that most of them died. When Germany agreed, late in 1870, to an armistice as a preliminary to peace negotiations, she flatly refused to permit small amounts of food to enter Paris daily for current consumption if civilians. And in the whole 132 days of the siege, not one attack was made on the French lines, —starvation was their best weapon."

OBITUARY

MRS. CLARENCE PROPHET.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Mrs. Clarence Prophet, at her late residence, Lot 10, Concession 5, North Monaghan, at the age of twenty-one years. Her maiden name was Miss Pearl Brisbin, daughter of Mrs. Wm. Brisbin. Her husband, mother and three sisters are left to mourn her loss. The sisters are Misses Gladys, Irene and Mary Brisbin, of this city.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 from the family residence in North Monaghan to the Little Lake cemetery.

GERALDINE BIGGS.

The news of the death last night at half-past-ten of Geraldine Biggs, the twelve-year-old daughter of Sgt.-Major Biggs, now with the Strathcona Horse at Shorncliffe, England, came as a great shock to her many young friends. She passed away at the family residence, 108 McDonnell following an illness extending ten weeks. She was a bright and able child, and she will be much missed in her class at the Central School and at St. John's Sunday School, as well as in the home circle. Much sympathy is felt for the family in their sad bereavement. The father and mother and one brother, Russell, and a sister, Aileen, are left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the family residence, to the Little Lake cemetery.

POTATOES REPLACE BREAD.

Scarcity of Grain Affecting Seriously the Population of Austria.

That the people of Austria are being compelled to substitute potatoes for bread as the staff of life is shown by the following telegram sent out from Vienna by the Wolff Bureau on March 27 as an announcement from the War Press Bureau and printed in the German press:

"Considering the obligatory economy with the supply of grain for bread making, potatoes are at present the only things with which the food requirements of the broad masses of the population, especially of the hard working members of the working class, can be met in a satisfactory degree.

"In order to economize in the use of grain on a large scale, the army administration is striving to increase the use of potatoes for the sustenance of the men not at the front and of the numerous prisoners of war. The districts occupied by our troops in Russian-Poland dispose of rich stocks of potatoes, part of which must not be allowed to remain concealed in case of need.

"Collections and deliveries must now be carried on in an intensive manner during the spring season just opening. The quickest way to make the best of the supplies is promised by a business organization, heartily supported by the military administration. Such an organization will be brought into existence through the establishment of a purchasing agency by the Ministry of the Interior."

Sentenced to two years in the Mercer Reformatory on Jan. 10th, Annie Kelly, convicted of vagrancy, has not yet been removed from the County Jail. A number of women sentenced since January have been removed, among them Cecilia Roy and Mrs. Tobeau, the latter of whom resided at the corner of Bethune and Smith streets. Hhey were sentenced a short time ago, and were taken away this morning.

STREET CAR TICKETS MAY BE COLOURLESS

General Manager Fleming of the Toronto Railway Co., whose worries never seem to cease, is up against another obstacle. For once the City Fathers are not the basis of the trouble. The reason attributed is the war. The supply of aniline dye in Canada, which is employed for colouring street car tickets used in limited hours, is about exhausted, and there is no more to be obtained.

After the present supply of coloured tickets is exhausted General Manager Fleming says he will be obliged to use white tickets, such as are used on Sunday, the seven for a quarter kind. The only difference will be that the standard six for a quarter will prevail. Consequently the genial Manager has no fault to find. On the other hand, the public will have to be satisfied, though seven tickets for a quarter for daily use would be greatly welcomed.

DILUTING THE COLOUR.

According to Manager Fleming, the colour of the tickets, principally pink and blue, is slowly fading and getting thinner. The thinness is caused by the half-cooked sulphite pulp, which results in an inferior quality of paper. Before the war aniline dyes cost 45 cents per pound; now they cost $40 per pound. As an expedient to meet the needs of the Toronto Railway Company, the dyes are being diluted in vats, through which the paper for the tickets is passed very rapidly in order not to absorb too much of the solution.

TICKETS FOR THREE MONTHS.

The present supply is not expected to last more than three months. If the dyes actually give out, car tickets, theatre tickets and milk tickets will be white. While several tons of coloured car tickets are used yearly by the Toronto Railway Company, over 50,000,000 war tax tickets alone have been printed for the theatres of Ontario.

Similar conditions prevail in Peterborough.

NO DUES FROM SOLDIERS.

OTTAWA, May 25.—The Orange Young Britons of British North America have prohibited any of their number engaging in the sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquors. The Grand Lodge also introduced a new regulation which provides that all members of the Order who have enlisted for overseas service since 1914 will be relieved from paying lodge dues until the end of the war. Any who have already paid since that date will have the money returned to them.

King Victor Asks Army and Navy For Greater Efforts

Rome, May 27.—King Victor Emmanuel has addressed the following order of the day to the army and navy.

"Soldiers of Land and Sea: Responding with enthusiasm to the appeal of the country a year ago, you hastened to fight, in conjunction with our brave allies, our hereditary enemy, and assure the realization of our national claims.

"After having surmounted difficulties of every nature, you have fought in a hundred combats and won, for you have the ideal of Italy in your heart. But the country again asks of you new efforts and more sacrifices.

"I do not doubt that you will know how to give new proofs of bravery and force of mind. The country, proud and grateful, sustains you in your arduous task by its fervent affections, its calm demeanour and its admirable confidence.

"I sincerely hope that fortune will accompany us in future battles, as you accompany my constant thoughts."

Boil 2 small tongues in salted water until tender. This will take about 3 hours; remove from the kettle and skin. To 3 cups of the liquid add 2-3 of vinegar, 1 cup of sugar, a clove of garlic, 1-2 dozen cloves, 1-2 dozen kernels of allspice, a bay leaf, 2 cardamom seeds, 2 slices of lemon and 2 dozen raisins. Return the tongue to this mixture and boil slowly one hour. When ready, strain the liquid and thicken slightly with flour, returning the raisins to the sauce. Turn over the tongue and serve.

Gen. Gallieni the "Saviour of Paris" Has Passed Away

PARIS, May 27.—Gen. Gallieni, until recently French Minister of War, and popularly known as the "saviour of Paris," died to-day following an operation for kidney trouble. He died at Marseilles.

Gallieni, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, was one of the most brilliant members of the French General Staff. His daring stroke against the Germans early in the war not only had much to do with saving Paris from capture by the Kaiser's armies, but marked a turning point in the European struggle.

HINDENBURG QUOTED AS DECRYING PEACE TALK

London, May 27.—An order of the day said to have been issued recently by Field Marshall von Hindenburg on the Russian front is quoted as follows in a Central News despatch from Basel, Switzerland:

"For some time a rumour has been spreading among the troops that peace negotiations are about to begin, and this fact, coupled with the instinct of self-preservation, which is constantly growing, is having a bad effect on the morale of the men.

"In the name of the Emperor I declare that there cannot be any peace until we have crossed the Dvina. Soldiers, if you wish peace, go and seek it on the other side of the Dvina."

NEW FRENCH AEROPLANE IS SWIFTEST OF ALL

PARIS, May 26.—The French papers were recently allowed to state that France now possessed an aeroplane which had beaten the world's records for speed. By courtesy of the French War Office, I was allowed to visit Louis Bleriot's factories at Suresnes, near Paris, and inspect the wonderful new aeroplane which is making rings round the Fokker. M. Bleriot gave me such details as can be published of the new marvel.

The Fokker has been described as a hawk. The newest French machine is a swallow, a graceful, almost frail looking biplane. It is called a spad, the word being derived from the initial letters of the Societe pou l'Aviation et Derives. It climbs rapidly and smoothly and can attain a speed of more than 125 miles an hour. The Fokker's speed is 100 miles an hour. On account of its swiftness the spad can be entrusted only to the most expert pilots, because although the speed can be reduced a little, only the most skillful airmen can alight without smashing the machine. The deadly work of the spads may be traced through the daily French communiques.

I asked M. Bleriot his opinion of the Fokker.

"It is a very greatly overrated machine," he said, "and no better than the aeroplane we have had in France for a long time. I refer to Morane-Saulnor. The German machines are without doubt inferior to ours or yours, but they have an engine, the Mercedes, which is as good as, but not better, than the French engines. Never for a moment has Germany had the mastership of the and and now that we have this machine we have established a lead which will never be wrested from us."

NOTHING TO HOPE FOR.

German Officials See That an Early Termination of War Impossible.

NEW YORK, May 25.—A despatch to a news agency from Berlin says: "German officials cherish no high hopes of an early termination of the war, despite the increasing amount of peace talk in Berlin, Washington, and London.

President Wilson's peace remarks at the Mechlenburg celebration last Saturday impressed the German public sympathetically, and won much notice in the German press. Officials however, are not optimistic. Though they believe Great Britain is tired of the war, they hold that France may exert such pressure on British statesmen as to prevent peace until the expected allied offensive."

LIQUOR DETECTIVE HEAVILY FINED

LINDSAY, May 27.—Mr. J. E. Anderson, of Lindsay, conducted the prosecution on behalf of the municipality of Cannington in an interesting police court case at that village on Friday and Saturday of last week. It appears that three liquor detectives, acting for the Liquor License Department had been in Cannington looking into alleged violations of the law. One of the number, Alex. Armande Corrian, it appears, fell by the wayside, and indulged in too much fire water. The authorities at Cannington laid a charge against him of being drunk in a local option district, and he appeared before Justices of the Peace Foster and Purvis. Accused was defended by Mr. J. H. Hammond of Orillia.

Judgment was reserved until the evidence was weighed, and on Thursday the accused was fined $50 and costs or one month in jail. Corrian is an Armenian.

Women Attack Priest's House

Bridgeport, Conn., May 27.—Four hundred women parishioners of the St. Syril and Methodius Slovak Roman Catholic Church here, attacked the parish house with clubs, stones and eggs, demanding that their temporary pastor, Father Gaspard Panik, leave the house at once. The women alleged that the priest was intemperate, had made sacrilegious statements from the altar and was too fond of entertaining and automobile riding.

Father Panik and his guests, Father Stephen, of St. John's Slav Roman Catholic Church, New York City, and the Missy Ofstrofsky, who are said to be his relatives, were forced to barricade themselves behind furniture in an upper room of the rectory. They were rescued by the police and taken to the second precinct station for protection but not until all the windows of the house were broken and the exterior and the interior showered with eggs.

Thirteen ringleaders of the riot were arrested. Father Panik was appointed temporary pastor of the church when the late Father Mathew Jankola, who built the edifice, had was greatly beloved by his people, was taken ill several weeks ago.

A committee of the men of the church went to Hartford yesterday to ask Bishop John J. Nolan to remove him but they were unable to see the bishop, so the women decided to take matters into their own hands.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine — double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

A Real Flesh Builder For Thin People

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your feed doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of this folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are probably sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy sawdust diets. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Let the scales be the judge. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay-there" fat may be the net result. Sargol aims to charge weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food to prepare it for the blood in an easily assimilated form. Thin people tell how they have gained all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol and say that the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a careful combination of six of the best assimilated elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive and all good druggists in this vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in every large package.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

America Urged To Take Part in World Peace Pact

By Sir Leo Chiozza Money.

Leading English Economist and Member of Parliament.

London, May 27. — Americans are increasingly realising the truth that no part of the world could in these days afford to be indifferent to the sufferings of any other part.

While Europe is in flames, Americans cannot afford to be simply onlookers, viewing the sufferings of other nations with more or less emotion, and supplying them with food and munitions with more or less profit.

The United States has even now to enlarge her armaments. It will be impossible for her in the future to avoid enormous warlike preparations, if the issue of the European conflict is either adverse to the allies or ends in a stalemate.

America has the liveliest interest in preventing a recurrence of a conflict which imperils the lives and the wealth of neutrals.

I should like to think of a determination which would add to a great European part, with its 300,000,000 population, the 100,000,000 inhabitants of the United States, and perhaps the greater part of the 70,000,000 in Latin America.

Such a combination could hold the peace of the world in its hands. It would enable all men to devote their energies, not to destroying or thwarting each other's efforts, but to that eternal contest with nature which we call civilisation.

Three Men Fought a Bear Had No Guns

MINDEN, May 27.—To kill a bear without a gun, after a fierce struggle, was the thrilling experience of Bruce Kellett, of Minden, Jack Adams and Ford McDuff of Gooderham.

The above named sturdy sons of toil were in the employ of Mickle & Dyment, as river-drivers, at River Bay Camp, Hollow Lake, when, as they were passing along the trail one morning they suddenly came upon a large black bear, which showed a quarrelsome disposition and made an attack upon the young men, who were armed only with pike-poles and peavy. The boys soon realized that these were not the most formidable weapons to handle in the bush in an encounter with an infuriated wild beast. But after a sharp struggle the huge animal (which afterwards was found to weigh 300 lbs.) lay dead at their feet.

After the battle was over, the boys were not surprised to find blood flowing from Adams and Kellett. McDuff had escaped unhurt. They were the victors, but would rather not repeat the experience.

Washing Woolens.

A sweater of a knitted shawl should not be hung up. Dry it on a towel in a basket, turning the garment frequently. Woolen things may be soaked for half an hour in lukewarm water in which three tablespoonfuls of borax and a small cake of white soap have been dissolved. Then wash as usual and rinse in warm water. Blankets should eb hung on the line without rinsing; then turn the garden hose on them. This method does not mat the wool and the blankets seem much fluffier after such treatment.

"STUDIO" PARTNER TELLS OF WAITE'S DUAL CHARACTER

"Little Man From Egypt" to Play Part in Effort to Save Dentist.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Mrs. Margaret Weaver Horton, the young woman with whom Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, confessed poisoner of his wife's parents, studied dramatic art and shared a 'studio" in a fashionable New York hotel, described late Wednesday at Waite's trial for murder what she considered the dual character of the prisoner. This alleged Jekyll-Hyde nature of Waite, the one side of which he has asserted, was defeated itself in the form of a "little man from Egypt," gave the first inkling of the theory upon which Waite's lawyers will proceed in their effort to prove he was insane at the time he killed John E. Peck, and thereby save him from the electric chair.

Although called as a witness for the state, Mrs. Horton seemed to be much relieved when Walter L. Dunn, counsel for Waite, began to cross-examine her. Not a line of testimony had been brought out by the prosecution touching upon Waite's mental condition when the district attorney rested after Mrs. Horton had finished her story. Several alienists were in the courtroom, however, waiting to be called in rebuttal. The defense, it was expected, would open yesterday in a vigorous attempt to prove that Waite was insane when he committed his crime.

"A FAST FRIENDSHIP"

Mrs. Horton first told how she had met Waite last January when he was singing in a New York theatre. They struck up a fast friendship, she said. Waite was interested in her voice, and later inquired the name of her local instructor. 'He said he would like to take vocal lessons himself," she added, and I introduced him to my teacher."

Mrs. Horton then told how she and Waite took the studio, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Walters.

Mrs. Horton declared they occupied the studio for the purpose of studying dramatic art and modern languages, and that their friendship was purely platonic. She testified that Waite was usually bright and cheerful except when she played or sang, when "he would cry like a child."

Doctor Says Phosphorus and Iron Makes Your Nerves 200% Stronger in Ten Days

Iron For Your Blood and Phosphorus For Your Nerves, Make You 200 p.c. Stronger in 10 Days.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who look ironand who are all for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food simply passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation people become generally weakened, nervous, and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is handicapped with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at nights; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless; but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than useless to take stimulating medicines containing to any considerable extent alcohol or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your lagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your future set up. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test for how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Phosphorus with iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous and run down people who were ailing at the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles as from iron in this form does like magic by taking it into the blood proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can tell no one from pictures about all the strength he may receive from any remedies, but when it comes down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best tonic builder in the world. The only caution was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the more modern forms of iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Phosphorus with iron, for instance, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost ... Get it at any druggist.

NOTE—Nuxated Phosphorus with iron recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that only a little of this nerve food of that is worth a whole bottle of some ... dispensed in this city by F. OUR SERIAL STORY

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

He had never seen her look so beautiful. The wealth of her black hair was coiled about the top of her head like a crown, and held in its depths a silver butterfly.

Her gown was Quaker gray in color, and of some soft clinging material that enhanced the lines of her figure. It was an evening gown, and cut just low enough to be at the same time modest and beautiful. Code, with out knowing why, admired her taste and told himself that she erred in no particular. Her mode of life was, at the same time, elegant and feminine—exactly suited her.

"You are easily made happy," he remarked, referring to her last sentence.

"No. I'm not," she contradicted him seriously. "I am the hardest woman in the world to make happy."

"And helping me does it?"

"Yes."

"You are a good woman," he said gratefully, "and always seem to be doing for others. No one will ever forget how you offered to stand by the woman of Grande Mignon while the men went fishing."

Again Elsa blushed, but this time the color came from a different source. Little did he know that her philanthropy was all a part of the same plan—to win his favour.

"And the things I know you must have done for my mother," he went on. "These are the things that I appreciate more than any. It is not every woman who would even think of them, let alone do them."

Why would he force her into this attitude of perpetual lying, she thought. It was becoming worse and worse. Why was he so straightforward and so blind? Could he not see that she loved him? Was he one of those cold and passionless men upon whom no woman ever exerts an intense influence?

Though she did not know it, she expressed the whole fault in her system. A man reared in a more complex community than a fishing village village would have divined her scheme and the result would have been a prolonged but most delightful duel of wits and hearts.

But Code, by the very directness of his honesty, and simplicity of his nature, cut through the gauzy wrappings of this delectable package and went straight to its heart. And there he found nothing, because what little of the deeply genuine there lay in this woman's restless nature was disguised and shifted at the will of her caprice.

When Code had experienced the pleasure of lighting a genuine clear Havana cigar after many months of abstinence, she leaned across the table to him, her hands clasped before her.

"Code what does loneliness represent to you?" she asked.

"Oh I don't know," he temporized, taken aback. "I don't go in for loneliness much; but when I do, why all I want is—well, let me see, a good game of quoits with the boys in the front of the church, or a talk with my mother about how rich we are going to be some day when I get that partnership in the fishstand. I'm too busy to be lonely."

"And I'm too lonely to be busy!" He looked at her unbelievingly.

"You!" he cried. "Why, you have everything in the world; you can go anywhere, do anything have the people about you that you want. You lonely? I don't understand you."

"Well, I'll put it another way. Did you ever want something so hard that it hurt, and couldn't get it?"

"Yes, I wanted my father back after he died," said Code simply.

"And I wanted Jim after he died," added Elsa. "Those things are bad enough; but one gets used to them. What I mean especially is something we see about us all the time and have no chance of getting. Did you ever want something like that, so that it nearly killed you, and couldn't get it?"

Code was silent. The one rankling hurt of his whole life, after seemingly being healed, broke out afresh—the engagement of Nat Burns and Nellie Tanner.

He suddenly realized that, since seeing Elsa, he had not as much as remembered Nellie's existence, when usually her mental presence was not far from him. Elsa with all her luxury and alluring feminine charms seemed to cast a spell that bound him helpless like the music in the fairy stories. He liked the spell, and after all she had done, he confessed to an extraordinary feeling for the enchantress.

Now had come the memory of Nellie—dear, frank-eyed, open-hearted Nellie Tanner—and the thought that her fresh wholesomeness was pledged to make glad the life of Nat Burns seared his heart. A cloud settled down on his brow. But in a moment he recalled himself. His hostess had asked him a question; he must answer it.

"Yes, I have wanted something—and couldn't get it."

"Yes," said Elsa slowly, "a thing is bad enough; but it seems to me that the most helpless thing in the world is to want a person in that way." Her voice was dreamy and retrospective. Its peculiar, vibrant timbre thrilled him with the thought that perhaps there was some hidden tragedy in her life that he had never suspected. Any unpleasant sense that she was curious was overcome by the manner in which she spoke.

"Yes, it is," he exclaimed solemnly.

She looked up in astonishment at the sincerity of his tone, her heart tingling with a new emotion of delicious uncertainty. What if, after all, he had wanted some one in the way she wanted him? What if the same one were herself and he had been afraid to aspire to a woman of her wealth and position? She asked this without any feeling of conceit, for one who loves always dreams he sees signs of favor in the one beloved.

"Then you have wanted some one?" All her manner, her voice, her eyes expressed sympathy. She was the soul of tact and no mean actress at the same time.

Code, still in the depth of reminiscence and averted happiness, scarcely heard her, but he answered:

"Yes, I have". Then, coming to full realization of the confession, he colored and laughed uneasily. "But let's not talk of such personal things any more," he added. "You must think me very foolish to be moaning about like this."

"Can I help you?" she asked, half suffocated by the question. "Perhaps there might be something I could do that would bring the one you want to you."

It was the crucial point in the conversation. She held her breath as she awaited his answer. She knew he was no adept at the half-meanings and near-confessions of flirtation, and that she could depend upon his words and actions to be genuine.

He looked at her calmly without the additional beat of a pulse. His color had died down and left him pale. He was considering.

"You have done much for me," he said at last. "And I shall never forget it, but in this matter even you could not help me. Only the Almighty could do it by direct intervention, and I don't believe He works that way in this century," Code smiled faintly.

Elsa for Elsa, she felt the grip as of an icy hand upon her heart. It was some one else that he meant. Was it possible that all her carefully planned campaign had come to this miserable failure? Had she come this far only to lose all?

The expression of her features did not change, and she sought desperately to control her emotion, but she could not prevent two great tears from rolling down her cheeks.

Code sat startled and nonplussed. Only once before in his life had he seen a woman cry, and that was when Nellie broke down in his mother's house after the fire. But the cause for that was evident, and the very fact of her tears had been a relief to him. Now, apparently without rhyme or reason, Elsa Mallaby was weeping.

The sight went to his heart as might the scream of a child in pain. He wondered with a panicky feeling whether he had hurt her in any way.

"I say, Elsa," he cried, "what's the matter? Don't do that. If I've done anything—" He was on his feet, and around the little table in an instant. He took her left hand in his left and put his right on her shoulder, speaking to her in broken, incoherent sentences.

But his words, gentle and almost endearing, emphasized the feeling of miserable self-pity that had taken hold of her and she suddenly sobbed aloud.

"Elsa, dear," he cried, beside himself with uncertainty, "what is it?" Tell me. You've done so much for me, please let me do something for you if I can."

"You can't Code," she said, "unless it's in your heart," and then she bowed her beautiful head forward upon her bare arms and wept. After awhile the storm passed and she leaned back.

He kissed her suddenly. Then he abruptly turned to the door and went out.

Schofield had suddenly come to his senses and disengaged himself from Elsa's embrace.

CHAPTER XXV
THE GUILT FIXED.

It was the following afternoon before Code Schofield ventured on deck.

When he did so it was to find that all naval uniforms had been laid aside, the imitation brass guns forward had been removed, and the schooner so altered that she would scarcely have been recognized as the Albatross.

The wireless had been erected again and now the apparatus was spitting forth an almost constant series of messages. The crew, spotless in dungarees and without a vestage of a weapon, manoeuvred the schooner as Code had never in his life seen a vessel handled. At a word from the officer on the watch they jumped as one man. Every order was executed on the run, and all sails were swayed as flat and taut as boards.

Code found Elsa ensconced with a book under the awning amidships. Big comfortable wicker chairs were about and the deck as lately cleared for action had an almost homelike look.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice how eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many needlessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmoa Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

An ophthalmist City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, stated: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its combination ingredients meet with the approval of eye specialists and widely recognized by them. It can be obtained from any druggist, and is sold on the plan that if it does not help the eyes you get back your money. It is a credit to the manufacturers that they are willing to place it on that regular way to prove its merit."

The Wayne Drug Co., fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions and will gladly fill yours.

HALF STOCKINGS FOR GROWN GIRLS NOT WANTED HERE

Peterborough Will Not Copy Fad Creeping Into United States

No matter what the United States may start in the way of quaint half hose for grown-up girls, the women-folk of opinion among the heads of stocking departments in leading Peterborough stores is that no radical, ridiculous changes will be accepted by Peterborough's modest matrons and maids!

A report today from New York states that in New Jersey 'half-hose' are to be the thing for up-to-date girls this summer."

Those who know in Peterborough say that the same thing was tried two seasons ago in the United States, but was a failure."

"The half-hose were accepted in the western states and worn a little on beaches. As to their coming to Peterborough, why, we cannot sell socks even for children over twelve years of age.

THE HALF-TONES.

This craze was the origin of the half-tone stocking that has been in vogue lately, pink or light colored uppers and dark or bright coloured from just above the ankle to the foot."

The buyer at another big store says:

"Emphatically no! We will not attempt to sell such hose. Peterborough people are not ready for such fads. Imagine the fashionable short skirt coupled with the stockings — why the skirt is an added reason against their innovation."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Several years ago Charles Lounsberry, a Chicago lawyer, who at one time ranked high in his profession, died an insane patient at the Cook County Asylum at Dunning. Although this man died absolutely destitute and penniless, he left the following will:

"I, Charles Lounsberry, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do hereby make and publish, this, my last will and testament, in order as justly as may be, to distribute my interest in the world among succeeding men.

"ITEM: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the fields and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely according to the custom of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns.

"And devise children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odors of the willows that dip therein and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees.

"And I leave to the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night and moon, and train of the milky way to wonder at, but subject, nevertheless to the rights hereinafter given to Lovers.

"ITEM: I devise to Boys, jointly, all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played; all pleasant waters where one may swim all snow clad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes, one may skate, to have and to hold these same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods, with their appurtenances, the squirrels and the birds and echos and strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found.

"ITEM: To lovers, I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red roses by the wall, the bloom of the Hawthorne, the sweet strains of music and aught else they may desire to figure to each other, the lastingness and beauty of their love.

"ITEM: To young men, jointly I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength, though they are rude, I leave to them the power to make lasting friendships and possessing companions, and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses to sing with lusty voices.

"ITEM: To our loved ones with snowy crowns, I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep."

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is richer, or happier or wiser for it. It commends no one to society; it is disgusting to the refined and abominable to the good.

We want girls with hearts;; girls with tenderness and sympathy, with tears that flow for others ills, and smiles that light outward their sunny thoughts. We have clever girls and witty girls and brilliant girls. Give us a consignment of jolly unaffected, natural girls, warm-hearted girls, with lots of fun and no coarseness; girls who can go out and romp in the snow and wash the snow in each others' faces, tug at a hand sled, roll a snow ball and think it no forfeiture to their dignity to frolic with their ten-year-old brothers. With a few more such girls the world would brighten up as June does under showery weather. Speed the day when the world is full of them, to the extinction of the airy, affected, brainless mynxes who think of nothing but of self and face powder.

* * *

Teach children to be polite. Teach them there is nothing but goodness of heart of so much durability as a pleasing deportment. They will lose the idea after a while that it is smart to be pert and boisterous, and take pride in being little ladies and gentlemen. Teach them to say, "How do you do" or "Good morning," to everybody with whom you are acquainted; never to contradict, whisper, hum, beat a tattoo with the fingers on the furniture or loll around in lounging attitudes in company; to say "Yes, ma'am," and "No, sir," "If you please," and "Excuse me," if it is necessary to pass before any one, or to leave the table before the rest, and never to do any of the things for which it is necessary to ask to be excused unless it is absolutely unavoidable."

In an eastern divorce case, the judge gave this advice to a young husband and wife: "There has been a bad exhibition of temper on both sides. Unless the temper is curbed evil will come to both of you. It's a thing that from a small beginning reaches quickly a bad ending."

THE NEWSPAPERS ARE PREACHING BETTER THAN PREACHERS.

Newspapers received an unusual and marked tribute the other day when the Rev. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of one of the largest churches in New York City and one of the foremost clergymen in the country, resigned his charge in order to carry on his chosen work, not in another pulpit, but through the press.

It is Dr. Eaton's belief, shared by many others, that public opinion in this country must be awakened to its responsibilities in the readjustment which is bound to follow the great war. Dr. Eaton will preach this subject, but not from the pulpit. The newspaper will carry his message to the world in future. In relinquishing his post the eminent clergyman said:

"At present the newspayers are preaching better than the preachers, and it is through the press that I hope to work. In common with the rest of the world, America is entering upon a new age, and I feel it my duty to help in forming public opinion and interpreting the vast and complicated problems which confront us."

The foregoing is but another proof of the growing influence and power for the community exerted by the newspaper to-day. It is not so many years ago that any close connection between the clergy and the press was sufficient cause for a considerable raising of eyebrows among the reverend gentlemen and their followers. Time and experience and, it must be admitted, a higher standard among newspapers have changed this attitude.

The press and clergy are to-day working hand in hand, as they should work, and preaching religious as well as civic righteousness through the newspapers is an accepted fact, for, while the pulpit addresses itself to hundreds, the newspaper speaks to thousands.

* *

The best brought-up family of children we ever knew were educated on the principle of always commending them when it was possible to do so, and letting silence be the reproof of any wrong doing which was not really serious. We have heard the children of this household, when their mother had failed to say any word of commendation after some social occasion, ask as anxiously as possible "What was it, mamma? I know some thing was wrong. Didn't we treat the other children well, or were we too noisy?" In that house reproof was never bestowed unsought—only commendation of whatever it was possible to commend, was gratuitous. We think this system would be as good for those grown-up children the husbands and wives, as for those still in the nursery.

LITTLE WORRIES IN THE HOME

It is These That Bring Wrinkles and Make Women Look Prematurely Old

Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. They may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but it is these same constant little worries that affect the blood and nerves and make women look prematurely old. Their effect may be noticed in sick or nervous headaches, fickle appetite, pain in the back or side, sallow complexion and the coming of wrinkles, which every woman dreads. To those thus afflicted Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy and certain cure; a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eye, a hearty appetite, and a sense of freedom from weariness.

Among the thousands of Canadian women who have found new health through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Mrs. N. Worrall, Broughdale, Ont. who says: "After the birth of my second child I was so weak and run down that I was unable to do anything. The doctor said I had scarcely any blood in my body. I could not walk half a block without being completely exhausted and all the treatment of the doctor did not seem to help me. I called in another doctor, but with no better results. My feet and legs became frightfully swollen; I suffered with severe pains in my back and sides. I would be all day dragging around at my household work, and I was beginning to give up all hope of recovery. I had been urged to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills but, like many others, thought they could not help me when doctors had failed to do so, but after much urging I decided to try them. To my surprise in a few weeks I found myself getting better. I then gladly continued their use and found myself constantly growing stronger, and eventually able to do my house work without fatigue. I strongly advise every weak woman to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUMMER FURS MODISH AGAIN THIS SEASON

Capes and Pelerines of Taffeta Also Favoured With Frocks of Voile and Organdy

THE OSTRICH BOA RETURNS

New York, May 25.—From Fashion's New York court comes the word that summer furs will be more modish this year even than they were last. The huge boa of white fox held the favored place last summer, but this season the shops are offering a variety of furs for summer wear. In spite of the apparent absurdity, a wide soft stole of mole, mink, seal, or ermine often proves very great help fwyp ily often proves a very grateful addition to the sheer summer dance frock on seaside porch or board walk. While the round, soft fox boa will in all probability continue to be popular with tailored suits and dresses, the long, wide stole will be more used for evening. A particularly interesting stole of tailless ermine, shown in one of the large fur shops, is lined with a startling black and white striped taffeta, while one of moleskin has a vivid orange lining. Here again is offered an effective way to introduce the bright bit of color so necessary to the summer costume.

7153-7164

THE SPANISH FLOUNCE DRESS

THE POPULARITY OF VOILE

Plain, striped, checked, dotted, and patterned voiles, in all colors and combinations, are in demand for the corded, ruffled, fluffy, lingerie frock. Of course there are voiles and voiles; the true voile wears and washes well, is sheer and dainty, quite as attractive as the more expensive cottons. There is a hint here and there of the return of hand-painted muslins for blouses and dresses. Probably the stencilled hat suggested the idea, which is quaint and pretty, if not exactly practical. All sorts of clever notions might be worked out by the woman with ingenious brain and fingers, but if the material were to be purchased or ordered, the fad might prove rather expensive. Sashes and scarfs, however, will carry out the notion with voile and organdy frocks very effectively.

FLOWER-TRIMMED HATS

Summer would not be summer without the flower-decked hat, but the notion rarely lasts longer than Easter, except on the large picture hat of Leghorn, crin, or hemp, which completes the June bridesmaid's costume, or the summer beauty's dainty frock. This season, however, there is a strong indication that flowers will play more than their ordinary role in summer mill linery. The medium brimmed, rather stiff tailored hat, with its upstanding bouquet of vari-colored blossoms, so popular some years back, is being noticed here and there; one sees, also, a number of flower turbans; flower crowns are favoured with certain costumes, and wreaths are quite popular. The flower-stenciled hats are very well liked indeed. Ribbon, too, is smart for trimming, and ostrich, in the form of fringe and fancies, is a popular trimming.

Home is the greatest school of life. Few can receive the honours of a college education, but all are graduates of home. The learning of the university may fade, its knowledge may moulder in the halls of memory, but the simple lessons of home impressed upon the hearts of childhood, defy the rust of years and outline the vivid picture of life. "Mid pleasures and palaces we may roam. Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

Choice Recipes

VEAL AND HAM PIE

A half pound of veal, a half pound of ham, both cooked and cut small. Two cups of cooked macaroni cut small a quarter cup of chopped onion, one teaspoon of chopped parsley, two hard boiled eggs, chopped fine. Season to taste. Beat into this a quarter cup of melted butter and a half cup of veal gravy. Put into pie crust and bake.

GRAPE JUICE PUNCH.

Dissolve one cup of sugar thoroughly in one pint of water. (The easiest way is to heat it for about two minutes. Add the juice of three lemons and one pint of grape juice, and just before serving, one orange, sliced thin. Serve in a tall glass pitcher with cracked ice and garnish with sprays of mint and red cherries.

CIDER JELLY

Two tablespoonfuls of granulated getatine one-half of cold water, one cup of boiling water, two cups of cider. Make same as lemon jelly.

STEAMED GINGER PUDDING

Cream one-third cup of butter; add gradually one-half cup of sugar and one egg, well beaten. Mix and sift 2 1-4 cups of flour, 3 1-2 teaspoonfuls of baking powdeer, one-fourth teaspoons of salt and two teaspoonfuls of ginger; add alternately with one cup of milk to first mixture. Turn into buttered mold, cover and steam two hours Serve with clear vanilla sauce.

CREAM WHIP.

For a cream whip, which is very simple to make, fill sherbet glasses half full of preserved or ripe fruit, heap them with whipped cream which has been flavored with vanilla and sprinkle the tops lightly with cocoa, cocoanut, or minced nuts.

BREAKFAST GEMS.

Take one pint of sour milk, one cup of graham and one cup of wheat flour, one egg and one-half teaspoonful of salt; also one tablespoonful of sugar makes them nicer. Beat the egg first and then stir everything well together. Butter your tins and have them hot when you put the mixture in. Bake in a hot oven.

CLUB SANDWICHES.

Make two square slices of toast, previously trimming off the crusts of the bread. A ter buttering, lay upon the lower slice two thin slices of crisply cooked bacon, a slice of seasoned cold chicken, a tender lettuce leaf and a spoonful of mayonnaise. Cover with the other piece of toast and cut diagonally. Serve while the toast and bacon are hot.

Mayonnaise may be used if liked.

DOUGHNUTS

One cup of sugar, 1 cup of sour milk 1 tablespoon of melted butter, pinch of salt, teaspoon of soda, and nutmeg; flour to make a stiff batter. Fry in very hot lard.

BRITTLE FINGERNAILS

The best remedy for brittle nails is oil, and plenty of it. I advise you to soak the finger tips for five or 10 minutes every night in warmed sweet almond oil. The same oil may be used over and over again, and it should be warm, not hot.

When the surface of the nail shows ridges and there is a general appearance of coarseness, apply grease about the edges wherever possible. Cleanse the nails with grease instead of using soap or nail bleach. It will produce a satin-like appearance and the tinge of pink that is so desirable.

Many women use cold cream about the nails, but I find that vaseline is far better. After you have soaked the finger tips in the heated almond oil take an orange stick and proceed to fill the cuticle about the base of the nails with vaseline. The superfluous grease may be removed with a piece of chamois or absorbent cotton.

Mrs. Goodwife says:—

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The skirts for sport and practical wear show just as much diversity of style as every detail that is introduced to make them smart and attractive. You have no doubt planned upon a new skirt and you want it to show the newest and most interesting style note. Therefore, in order that you may wear one with perfect confidence that it is in the test of the day, use a reliable pattern, such as No. 7728.

If plainness is the single excellence in a garment this one certainly has excellence. The pockets at either side are of generous size and aid quite a bit in giving the suggestion of a panel front to the skirt. A strap is buttoned to each pocket at the belt line in the side front and again at the back part of each back gore. An outside belt of the material is used decoratively, passing underneath the straps, as the picture shows, and fastening in the front. The closing is at the left side of the front.

The pattern is cut in sizes 24 to 32 inches waist measure. To make up in size 24 one 4 yards of 36 inch material this gives a width of 2¾ yards to the lower edge. You may obtain the pattern the model in "dress-up" and express by sending 7 cents to the office of this fashion's final word by being correct in publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Simplicity, Love of Peace, Characteristics of Kaiser

Little Brochure Has Been Published in Berlin in Which the Virtues of the German Emperor Are Highly Extolled.

(Special Dispatch.)
PARIS, Saturday.

In Berlin a little brochure has just been published in which the virtues of the Kaiser are highly extolled. "This booklet spells at demonstration," says a commentator in the Journal des Debats, "that the two principal characteristics of the German Emperor are his love of peace and his simplicity."

It was on August 16, 1914, that the Kaiser first left his capital for the front. He was dressed in the field-gray uniform generally worn by the German troops, and this proof of his democratic taste was enthusiastically acclaimed by the populace. They saw in it a symbolic meaning. Their Emperor wanted, in these grave times, to display even outwardly his submission to the simple life of a soldier which he was henceforth to lead. The only luxury he allows himself in the way of dress is a special waistcoat of silk, which is a veritable work of art. Buttons included, the entire garment weighs only 75 grammes. The Kaiser's menu is in style with his dress—very plain. It comprises usually soup, some kind of meat, a light dessert and a glass of beer. The bread used at the Imperial table is of the same quality as that commonly used all over Germany these days, the so-called kriegs-brot. When actually at the front, the Chief Commander of the German armies likes to get his food directly from the field kitchen supplying his soldiers.

When the Emperor writes to his children he always signs himself "Papa Wilhelm." Just think of the fatherly tenderness, the intimate affection on the part of this mighty war chief. It is like a sweet perfume, that pervades the whole letter. The Kaiser has also a little pet dog, which is allowed any liberties he may choose to take, even to the extent of taking a snooze in the Imperial lap when his master himself sits down for a little rest. Such regard for a mere animal surely indicates the amiable disposition characteristic of William II. in all his dealings with human beings. While on tours of inspection in the trenches he entertains himself in a comrade like manner with the soldiers, sometimes playfully pinching the ear of a bashful youth. Toward the wounded in the hospitals he is always sympathetic, showing great solicitude for their comfort and addressing them usually as "my dear son" or "my dear boy." Nor does he forget, when opportunity is offered, to visit the graves of the fallen, often placing flowers on them and asking his adjutant to notify the families of the deceased that their Emperor has honored the memory of their loved ones.

Along these lines runs the entire composition, which gives the impression of a rather naive attempt to produce dramatic effect and appeal to the sentimentality of the readers.

DESCRIBES DESTRUCTION OF IRISH CONVENT

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.—The destruction of the famous Irish convent at Ypres, with its many treasures, is related by a Sphere correspondent:—For the first time since its establishment, in 1665, the community of the Irish Convent at Ypres was compelled to leave its walls last year and take refuge in England. Since then the building which housed the nuns in the Rue St Jacques, and which dated from 1664, has been bombarded and finally burnt to the ground by incendiary bombs. The convent belonged to a group of religious houses of the Benedictine order which were founded in Flanders and Belgium after the Reformation. The other houses were dispersed at the time of the French Revolution, and have since then been settled in England. The Ypres house, however, with its Irish community, was the one religious house which remained standing in the Low Countries, or in France, right through the Revolution and the Reign of Terror.

Among the many treasures in the convent was the flag of an Irish regiment which was hung up in the choir of the convent after the battle of Ramillies, in 1706; this flag was of dark blue with a harp of gold. There were also portraits of Abbess Butler and King James II. on the walls of the building; the former was a cousin of the first Duke of Ormonde and was also the first Irish abbess of the convent. King James II. was the patron of the convent, and he presented the portrait of himself to the nuns. It hung in an honored place in the parlor. During the successive bombardments of Ypres, before the community decided to leave Belgium, it was walled up with the other treasures to await better days.

After the arrival of the nuns in England a building was purchased in county Wexford for the community. Thus, after many years, Ireland once more becomes the home of the Irish Convent.

SOLDIER CRAZED BY WAR KILLS SIX NEAR VIENNA

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

Advices from Vienna give details of a tragedy which occurred in Rudolfsheim, on the outskirts of the city, where a soldier ran amuck and killed six of his comrades, wounded six others and also seriously injured a fireman.

In the military hospital for convalescents at Rudolfsheim was an infantryman named Fichtner, who was suffering from nervous trouble brought on by his experience at the front. He was not considered at all dangerous. At nine o'clock in the morning he suddenly broke into the dining room with a pistol in one hand and a rifle in the other, and began firing promiscuously at the other patients assembled in the room. Four were killed by his shots. He then took refuge in an upper room and barricaded himself in, firing from the window at the crowd in the street, killing two more. The Fire Department was called out, but despite the fact that it played the hose on him he continued firing for two hours. He was finally overpowered and declared that he only did his duty.

Among the six killed were a major of infantry and two privates. Traffic in the streets was held up for two hours and the tragedy caused great excitement.

HOW FRANKFORT STOPS WOMEN'S ALLOWANCES

(Special Dispatch.)
PARIS, Saturday.

Married women whose husbands are at the front only have to present themselves at the office to obtain repayment of the relief of their seats.

Such was the notice which, the Paris Figaro announces, was flashed on the screens of all the moving picture places in Frankfort one day last month. The women, agreeably surprised, hurried out to the ticket office, where another surprise less agreeable, awaited them. Officials stationed there hurried them off to police headquarters, where they were bluntly told that, discovering they had money enough to go to places of amusement, the city had concluded to stop their meal allowance.

HOLLAND PAYING DEAR TO MAINTAIN NEUTRALITY AGAINST ALL COMERS

Keeping Army on War Footing to Guard Approaches by Land and Sea, Ready to Resist Violation of Territory by Any of the Belligerents, Is Costing the Little Kingdom $600,000 in Addition to Ordinary Taxes.

(Special Dispatch.)
THE HAGUE, Saturday.

Eternal vigilance, plus about 1,500,000 gulden ($600,000), is the price Holland is paying for her liberty and the preservation of real neutrality. This sum must be obtained in addition to the taxes imposed by the budget in order that her army of nearly 300,000 men and her small but smart navy shall be maintained on a war footing, guarding her approaches by land and sea and ready to resist violation of her territory by any of the belligerents.

It was the anticipation of violation of her neutrality as one result of "a great offensive" which did not eventuate—not the circulation of an alarmist report by Germany's army of agents here—that was responsible for the hurried mobilization of all of Holland's forces during the early days of April and the resultant widespread belief that the kingdom was on the verge of entrance into the great war.

Wherever one went one heard the disturbing report "made in Germany," and circulated here by Germany's hirelings, that England had demanded from Holland permission to land an expeditionary force on Dutch soil. This canard is still afloat despite peremptory denial of its truth by Jonkheer Dr. J. Loudon, Holland's Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Dr. Loudon Denounces Canard.

Dr. Loudon not only denounced the report as absolutely baseless, but when he received your correspondent he asserted that neither Great Britain nor France, whose attitude toward Holland has always been cordial and correct, had never, directly or indirectly, approached his government on the subject.

Nevertheless, Germany's agents here—and they are legion—affected to regard Dr. Loudon's blunt repudiation of the rumor as a pronunciamento dictated by diplomatic requirements, adding insult to injury by spreading broadcast reports that if British or French troops entered Holland a German army would be hurried across the border to support the Dutch.

This offensive report drew from Dr. Loudon the stirring declaration that Holland, determined that her soil should be inviolate, would draw the sword against any and all invaders, that her neutrality would never be of a doubtful type, and that she would exhaust all her resources, military and financial, to compel respect for her sovereignty and to prove that she is worthy of her independence.

This proud sentiment is dominant throughout the kingdom—even in pro-German Rotterdam—and, though the cost of maintenance of this position is staggering, the government has the whole people behind it, including the many thousands who are idle as a result of the paralysis of the nation's great shipping trade by the ever increasing severity of the British blockade.

The blockade has transformed Amsterdam into a gloomy city, but I am informed that the situation there is improving, as the Holland-America line has decided to keep the Nieuw Amsterdam and other big liners in commission. This example will be followed by other steamship companies.

As for the rest of Holland, merchants, farmers and bankers are enjoying unprecedented, if ephemeral, prosperity.

Shrewd financiers, such as Mr. C. J. Van Aalste, president of the Great Netherlands Oversea Trust and the Netherlands Lloyd Steamship Company, and Mr. G. Vissingen, president of the Royal Netherlands Bank, are worried over the outlook if the war lasts much longer. Mr. Van Aalste, who discussed the situation with your correspondent, admitted that the cost of maintaining armed neutrality is tremendous.

Germany Buying Greedily.

"The worst sufferers," said Mr. Van Aalste, "are persons with fixed salaries or incomes. These are stationary, while the prices of foodstuffs and all other necessaries of life are soaring skyward. Our farmers are enjoying unexampled, but I fear transitory, prosperity, as Germany is sending any price for their produce.

"Only a few years ago, you will remember, Germany rejected our cows because of alleged foot and mouth disease; our hogs were barred through fear of trichinosis. To-day our cattle, our vegetables and foodstuffs generally are received with open arms at the German border.

"In Amsterdam business generally is quite good. Our manufacturers are benefiting by the realization on the part of merchants that many things that were formerly 'made in Germany' can be made here and that the workmanship is of a high order."

I may interject here that the diamond industry in Amsterdam is thriving, too, as many Germans are purchasing these gems instead of investing in war loans, against the day when the great struggle ends, as the brilliants will, then yield handsome profits.

"Our shipping interests," Mr. Van Aalste continued, "especially the companies with headquarters in Rotterdam, have been badly hit by losses through mines and submarines, but primarily by the effectiveness of the British blockade, which has become so rigid now that our trade with our eastern colonies is seriously threatened.

"Many of our merchants are protesting against this as indefensible, but war is war, and the concessions granted to the Netherlands Oversea Trust have enabled us to protect to a substantial degree the interests of many of our merchants and Dutch commerce as a whole.

"The Trust, which is under guarantee to the chief belligerents—and this guarantee is indorsed by the government—not to convey cargoes to enemy countries, is not a profit making enterprise, as all earnings above four per cent revert to the government for the relief of sufferers by the war and for other charitable purposes. The mission of the Trust is to keep the Dutch merchant marine busy and to protect and promote Dutch commerce.

"I hope," said Mr. Van Aalste, "to have good news soon, as we hope to recover $1,000,000 of the $1,500,000 in American gold which was recently seized by the British when it was in transit to Holland. I am afraid that the remainder, $500,000, will become the subject of prize court legislation. However, now that Britain has proclaimed gold to be absolute contraband there will be no friction, as the N. O. T. will not handle the metal."

"What action has been taken in connection with the interruption of Holland's commerce with her colonies?" I asked.

Mr. Van Aalste's eyes twinkled as he said:—

Holland "Note Writing" Too.

"I understand that the government, following the example set by the greatest neutral Power, is writing a note.

"But seriously," he added, "things could be made much worse for Holland by the contending Powers, and it is because we have resolved to preserve our privileges that the government, through Dr. Loudon, announced its readiness to resist by force of arms any violation of Dutch territory."

Setting Foward the Clock First Proposed by Franklin

He Told Paris a Century Ago That $20,000,000 Could Be Saved Every Year by Using More Daylight.

(Special Dispatch.)
PARIS, Saturday.

A little comedy of Alphonse Allais at the rising of the curtain shows a gentleman listening to the striking of a clock and counting the strokes, one by one, up to nine. Then, satisfied, he exclaims:

"It is three o'clock."

This little piece was produced at the Théâtre des Capucines, Paris, doubtless without the author imagining that his satire would some day receive legislative sanction. But the innovation of advancing the time by setting forward the clocks one hour, which has already passed the Chamber of Deputies, is before a committee of the French Senate. All the members of this committee, however, are opposed to the proposal.

The Academy of Sciences was surprised when the subject was first broached. Scientists naturally considered themselves bound by an intellectual rigor from which members of Parliament are dispensed and only occasionally allow themselves diversions of imagination. The eminent perpetual secretary, M. Faillemand, formulated his objections with an ardor that is rarely found among geologists. The prestige of Mr. Painlevé and his authority, which is weighty with all the scientific societies of the world, were impossible to convince them.

But when Mr. Painlevé, who is not only a mathematician but a Cabinet Minister, showed the financial advantages of the project the opposition suddenly quieted down and the members of the Academy of Sciences patriotically submitted the laws of the universe to the "sacred union" for the defence of the country.

Benjamin Franklin's Estimate.

Considered merely in its economic aspect, the Figaro states that the law, for which Mr. Honnorat is sponsor, besides having certain advantages, is a strange paradox. It is believed that advancing the hour will save $20,000,000 a year. This was the estimate of Benjamin Franklin, who in 1784 wrote to the Journal de Paris:

"I have made an important discovery. About six o'clock in the morning I was awakened by a noise, and was much astonished to see my room brightly lighted. At first I thought somebody had lit a dozen lamps. But, rubbing my eyes, I recognized distinctly that the light came through my windows and that the sun was rising at the moment. Many persons will doubtless be astonished to learn that the sun rises so early. They will be none the less astonished when I assure them that it gives light at the very moment it rises. I am eye witness of what I state, and on repeating the observation the three following days I obtained constantly the same result.

"My taste for economy led me to make the following calculation.—The six months from March 20 to September 20 contain 183 nights. I multiply this figure by 7 to have the number of hours during which we burn our candles, and I have 1,281. As there are 100,000 families, here I have 128,100,000 hours of burning light, which represent an annual expense of 20,675,000 Tours pounds for wax and tallow (more than $20,000,000 for the city of Paris alone.

"It is impossible that a wise people would have made use of unhealthy and expensive candle light if it had known, as I have just learned, that there can have for nothing the beautiful and pure light of the sun."

Must Satisfy Officialdom.

But, the Figaro declares, a reformer of 1916 must be more circumspect than Benjamin Franklin, who suggested that the people of Paris be awakened earlier by the ringing of bells and the firing of cannon. To-day one cannot shorten by sixty minutes the legal hour of sleep without consulting by the customary of an official clock that no change has been made in the bureaucrat's hours of service. An employee of the State who sits down at his desk at seven o'clock would think himself cheated unless he were assured by a decree sanctioning the agreement of the authorities and the Observatory in virtue of which his superiors tell him it is eight o'clock.

The Figaro tells of a rural politician who promised to abolish the sunset mean of April and was elected to the Chamber of Deputies by a large majority. As the season advanced toward spring the Deputy was in an embarrassing position. But a politician, especially after election, is not easily embarrassed, and the Deputy laid the blame on the Treasury Department, declaring that the barometer of the Observatory, which in France regulates the weather, had been taken away by the Prussians in 1871 and the Treasury Department had not yet brought it back.

The Figaro concludes that the citizens of France will gladly offer the nation the hour that is asked. An hour which passes into eternity and has not been lived makes little noise, it declares, but the gift is important if it promises for the French army in shells and shrapnel a fine spring morning.

USE OF ZEPPELINS AS NAVAL SCOUTS

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.—A correspondent in the Sphere describes how the Zeppelin is used in the war as a naval scout as follows:—

From the point of view of its real and effective use in war the Zeppelin is at its best as a scout for the battle fleet. At an altitude of 5,000 feet it surveys a huge circular area of land and sea, the circumference of which is ninety miles away from the observer in the central cabin. The aerial scouts can remain far out at sea and on a clear day spy upon the movements of the ships of the enemy, and even spy upon the number of ships sheltering in harbor. At the same time, by means of its wireless plant, it can keep in touch with its own fleet, and within the limits of its own installation, which has a range of approximately 200 miles, can keep in communication with headquarters ashore.

Forty Mile Range at 1,000 Feet.

The Zeppelin as a scout has an advantage over ships, for whereas the vessel has a comparatively small visible horizon, the aerial scout can see a squadron of vessels far beyond the range of vision of the ship. At the very low altitude of 1,000 feet the Zeppelin has a visible horizon of about forty miles, while the ship can only see a little over sixteen miles.

Of course, in hazy weather the limit of vision of a naval Zeppelin would undoubtedly be reduced, but the opponent's men are at the same time struggling to pierce the same dense atmosphere, and as they are looking horizontally through a belt of mist the advantage is probably with the observer poised at one thousand or five thousand feet above the sea. There is no difficulty as to communication. The Zeppelin observer, as soon as he has signted the poles of certain war ships, can begin to transmit his information by wireless to the nearest ships, or to a land station if that is not too far distant. By a system of relaying, the observer who is being high over the sea can transmit his observations to the distant headquarters, the loss of time in transmitting the messages being negligible.

Reporting from such a height the observer to search upon get with the level sea. Inside of which Cattaro in the striking example, can no ships unobserved if the aerial observers are on

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Was He Really a Hero?

By F. A. MITCHEL

A man, quite the worse for wear, a crutch under one arm, opened a gate and limped up the walk. In the center of ample grounds stood the house, the whole forming one of those old English places that denote age and respectability. On the way he met a girl, leading a big dog, which, seeing the disreputable person who had entered the grounds, growled. The girl reproved the dog, then looking at the man, said:

"Would you like something to eat?"

"I certainly would."

"Go up to the house. I'll be there in a few minutes and will see that you are given something."

The man hobbled up to the house and going on to the porch seated himself on a wicker chair. In a few minutes the girl returned and seeing him sitting on the porch gave him a look that was intended to annihilate him. He paid no attention to her, and after regarding him for a few moments she went into the house. Presently a butler came out on to the porch with a waiter on which was a meal, and set it down on a table. The man, who was evidently very hungry, applied himself to it, then asked the butler if he could give him anything to wash it down. The butler gave him a more crushing look than his mistress and disappeared. After a conference with her he returned with a decanter and a glass. The man took a stiff drink, then told the butler to say to the young lady that he would like to speak with her. In a few minutes she came out and stood waiting for what he had to say.

"I am a discharged soldier," he said, "from the army in Belgium."

The girl's manner changed at once.

"Did you ever meet Captain Trevellion there?" she asked.

"I was with him constantly!"

"Indeed."

"That accounts for my making myself at home in this house."

"If you had told me that you were a friend of his I would have given you a more cordial reception."

"You are one of those who rented the place after Trevellion's departure, I suppose."

"Yes; we moved here a few days after he went to the front."

"You never saw him?"

"No. I've been told he is a very handsome man."

"Handsome! Who told you that?"

"Every one who has ever seen him considers him handsome."

"I've seen him every day for ten months, and I never saw anything good looking about him."

"That's probably because you've seen him dressed no better than you. You can't expect a man to be fine looking got up as you are."

The man smiled. "You would never take me for a handsome man, would you?"

There was no reply to this. Silence gives consent.

"I suppose," said the girl, "you will admit that Captain Trevellion is brave, since I hear that he has won the cross?"

"How did he get it? He simply went out in advance of the line and hauled another fellow in. There was nothing more in that than all going together. In fact, when we went together they were firing at us together."

"You can't be a friend of Captain Trevellion and be jealous of him."

"I jealous of him! I'm just as brave a man as he, and when I'm dressed up am just as handsome."

"One thing you are not," retorted the girl angrily. "You are not as modest as he." She was going into the house when he called her back.

"What would you say if I told you that I have the cross as well as Trevellion?"

"I wouldn't believe you. Only modest men are brave."

He put his hand inside his flannel shirt and drew out a cross made of gun metal. The girl looked at it with wide open eyes. But she was evidently not convinced.

"How did you get it away from him?" she asked. "Did you take it when he was asleep?"

The man laughed. When his mirth had subsided he said:

"I'll not bother you any longer. You are very good to have had so much patience with me. I'm Trevellion. I've come back with the cross, but I've come back a wreck. I felt that I must come to my old home, though it is in the hands of strangers. I wonder if I can be taken in here till I get some strength?"

He said this so despondently that the girl's heart was touched.

"I've no doubt that you can, Captain Trevellion. I'll go and ask mamma."

"Stay," he said. "We men who are accounted heroes are not heroes. They give us these baubles to make us think we are that they may make us fodder for shrapnel. Let me rest for a moment, then I will go on. I said what I did about remaining here in a moment of weakness."

He poured out another glass from the decanter, drank it and, rising, made as courtly a bow to the girl as he could under the circumstances, then slowly descended the steps and limped down the walk.

"Poor fellow!" she said. "I wonder if he is really brave or a liar and a coward. He certainly don't look like the heroes I've read of in story books."

Very likely he was all three. War has its realism as well as other departments of life.

Old Time Witchcraft.

Jane Wenham was indicted at the Hertfordshire assizes on March 4, 1712, for "conversing with the devil in the form of a cat," under the provisions of the act of 1604, repealed in 1736. Her prosecutors wished to have her also indicted for practicing witchcraft to the harm of Ann Thorn, a servant girl sixteen years old, but this was not allowed, although evidence was produced at the trial to show what injury had been done the victim by means of crooked pins and by placing cakes and cats' hair in Ann Thorn's pillow and how the prisoner had caused the death of some cattle simply by walking through a turnip field.

The jury brought her in "guilty," and Justice Powell passed sentence of death, but took steps to quash the verdict. Wenham's prosecutors published an account of the case, but their arguments were pulverized by scientific men. Jane Wenham herself was liberated and taken under the protection of Colonel Plummer, who gave her a cottage, and we are told by Dr. Hutchinson that in 1720 the whole country was fully convinced of her innocence.—London Spectator.

The Game of Life.

Life becomes, as the stoics more than once tell us, like a play which is acted or a game played with counters. Viewed from the outside, these counters are valueless, but to those engaged in the game their importance is paramount. What really and ultimately matters is that the game shall be played as it should be played. God, the eternal dramatist, has cast you for some part in his drama and hands you the role. It may turn out that you are cast for a triumphant king. It may be for a slave who dies of torture. What does that matter to the good actor? He can play either part. His only business is to accept the role given him and to perform it well. . . . Success or failure is a thing he can determine without stirring a hand. It hardly interests him. What interests him is that one thing which he cannot determine—the action of your free and conscious will.—Gilbert Murray.

Suffered From Nerves

Could Not Sleep

To the thousands of people who are tossing on sleepless beds night after night, or who pace the floor with nerves unhinged, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber.

They restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres, thereby producing peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and will cause you to get up in the morning feeling that you have the strength and vitality to go through your day's work.

Mrs. Hollas Knox, St. John, N.B. writes: "I suffered greatly with my nerves, I could not sleep at night, nor work, and the least little thing worked on my mind and bothered me. Last winter I thought I would go out of my mind, I would screech out, and my mother really thought I was going crazy with my nerves. It was so terrible I would hold my head and cry. I tried two doctors, but they did not do me any good. I thought I would tell you that to-day I am perfectly cured by using three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I can recommend them to all sufferers from nervous troubles. You can tell everyone that they are the only thing that did me any good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for nearly a quarter of a century, and are universally known as the best remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

TRAPPING A PYTHON.

The Monster Is a Victim of His Own Greedy Appetite.

The python's weak point is its stomach; it is a glutton. Not satisfied with a full supper, it will start at once on next week's breakfast if by chance that future meal happens to be within easy reach.

A python generally lives in a hole in the ground or a hollow in a tree, but if it can find an old ruin in the jungle—and there are many old ruins in India—it likes to take up its sleeping quarters there, because even in the heaviest rains the water runs off the ruins quickly, whereas a hole in the ground is likely to be flooded. The python needs to eat only once a week, and to get that meal it lies flat along the bough of a tree near a stream and waits for its prey to come to drink.

When the natives see the long trail that the python's body makes near the bank and find a heap of ruins near by they make a hole in the ruined wall just exactly big enough for the python to get through. Then they tie a pig to a stake near the hole on one side of the wall, and on the other side of the wall opposite the hole they tie another pig to a stake. They also tie a wire to the leg or the tail of the near side pig, and as evening draws on they twist it from a distance, and the pig squeals. As the python comes home to bed it hears the squeals.

So the python comes along merrily and seizes its supper at a single bite. Down goes the pig into the big snake's throat, sucked in slowly by sheer muscular action. In about half an hour the pig has passed completely down the long neck, and in another half hour it is down a couple of yards farther into the python's stomach.

Most animals would go to sleep right away after a gorge like that. But meanwhile the second pig on the other side of the wall has realised its unhappy brother's woeful fate and has set up a most distressing noise. The python puts its head through the hole and sees it.

"Ah!" it says to itself. "Here's my next week's breakfast."

And instead of waiting for next week to come that greedy python swallows the second pig too. The wily natives wait until the second pig is well on its way down the python's body; then they have the snake caught. Pig No. 1 prevents it from advancing, and pig No. 2 prevents it from retreating. The natives lasso the python around the neck, break down the wall and pass a coil of rope between the two lumps of pig before they can amalgamate. Then they bear away the python to captivity.—"Wonders of the Jungle."

Interviewing a Humorist.

"Good morning, Waggs. What's on the carpet today?" asked Bingleton.

"Dust," said Waggs.

"Clever boy! But I mean what have you on foot?"

"Shoes," said Waggs solemnly.

"Oh, come off, Waggs. What are you up to these days?"

"Data," sighed Waggs.

"I'll give you just one more chance, you poor frivol, you. What are you doing now?"

"Everybody," said Waggs.

"As usual, eh?" said Bingleton as he shoved the remains down the nearest available coal hole.

RUNNING NOSE COLDS CURED SNEEZING STOPPED INSTANTLY

The worst of a cold is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it's too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand — it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.

The West Crowded Street.

The supreme sensation of New York's east side is the sensation of the astounding populousness. The most populous street in the world—Rivington street—is a sight not to be forgotten. Compared to this, an uptown thoroughfare of crowded middle class flats in the open country is an uninhabited desert! The architecture seemed to sweat humanity at every window and door. The roadways were often impassible. The thought of the hidden interiors was terrifying. Indeed, the hidden interiors would not bear thinking about. The fancy shunned them—a problem not to be settled by sudden municipal edicts, but only by the efflux of generations.—Harper's Magazine.

Uncontrollable Curiosity.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "Everybody seems willing to take a chance of being talked about for the sake of hearing what she says about the others."

A Hungarian Barbizon.

All that is most vital and interesting in present day Hungarian art is directly or indirectly traceable to the activities set in motion at Nagybanya, a beautifully situated little town in eastern Hungary. Here, under the inspiring leadership of Simon Hollosy, a group of the most progressive artists were united by kindred aims. They reaffirmed the gospel of light and air triumphantly enunciated by Monet and Manet; they introduced into Hungarian art a fresh and vigorous note of realism that liberated personal and racial traits of character. "Nagybanya became the Hungarian Barbizon in the sense that here art returned to nature and was purified." With this return to nature came a revival of interest in their long neglected peasant art, and thenceforth naturalism developed hand in hand with a marked tendency toward decoration that found its inspiration in the oldest traditions of the race. After many and diverse wanderings Hungarian art came back to its own and was rejuvenated.—J. Nilsen Laurvik in Century.

FEAR U.S. HEIRESS INVASION.

British Mothers Flustered Over Prospect for Their Daughters.

English mothers of marriageable daughters are worrying over their daughters' prospects, according to a writer in the Liverpool Daily Post. Not only is the war decreasing the supply of eligible men, but fears are expressed that American girls, with fortunes made in war stocks behind them, will come over after the war and carry off the titled prizes.

"They are making pots of money in the States," the mother of a young woman of 19 is quoted as saying, "and after the war the marriageable daughter of every new plutocrat will come over with her mamma just to buy an English husband. Think of the distinction, not only in New York, but in St. Louis or Denver or Chicago, of importing a husband not only connected with our peerage, but who has been under fire! Mamma will make a deal with someone in English society to introduce her daughter, adding the promise of a further big cheque on a graduated scale according to the rank of the man she marries. I believe it would pay me better to run an American heiress than to speculate in rubber."

The writer asks if it is possible to institute "Protection for Eligible English Girls."

Every Shovelful Counts

THERE'S satisfaction in having a Sunshine Furnace. You know that the coal you put in the big wide door will be turned into heat for the house.

What makes the Sunshine a coal saver? Two things:

1 THE STUDY—the science you might call it—that has gone into its design.

The air passages are wide, the radiating surface is large. The heat from the flames is spent before the fumes get to the chimney. This means more heat through the hot air registers.

The fire-pot, which is the main source of heat, is always kept clear of ashes that would prevent rapid conduct of heat from the burning coal to the radiating surface of the fire-pot.

2 THE WORKMANSHIP that produces a permanent "heat-tight" job.

The doors and dampers fit closely. When you shut off the Sunshine Furnace, the heat is held without burning up coal; and tight construction at every point directs the heat to the warm air flues and avoids the waste of coal.

Would it be wise to look for fuel-economy in any but a modern, dependable furnace like

McClary's Sunshine Furnace

When you are planning a heating system for your home, wouldn't you like to know what McClary's Sunshine will cost you, installed? Well then, our Heating Engineer will be glad to give you this information. He will show you how to plan your heat distribution so as to get the most out of it. No, there is no charge. Simply write to him fully at the factory. Meanwhile, mail the coupon for our booklet "Sunshine."

Facts Worth Knowing

Take a district containing a hundred houses and a hundred families living in them. You will find that over ninety per cent. of the buildings are insured against fire loss. Of the heads of the families occupying them, according to the known average, not one in five will be carrying life insurance. Look forward fifty years: How many of the houses will have been destroyed in that period? Not over one of the hundred. Take the heads of the families in the same fifty years: How many of them will be alive at the end of that period? Not over ten out of the hundred.

We insure against fire as a matter of course, and rightly so. In the fact of a fifty-year record, how vastly more important that the two kinds of insurance be reversed, or better, that the life insurance be brought up in its totality to the volume of the fire insurance. The one house burns, insurance is paid, and the property rebuilt. The man who is in the great class of the uninsured dies, and the loss to himself and those dependent upon him is a total one. You cannot compare a fire loss with a death loss, and yet we go on and on thinking of the more meagre loss of fires and protecting against them, while overlooking and forgetting the greater loss that death brings, and neglect protecting against it.

It is a matter of congratulation that fire losses are universally recognized and protected against. How much greater a matter of congratulation it will be when the same unlimited recognition is given to loss through death, and life insurance protection becomes as universal as fire protection.

PAWNED WIFE FOR $34.

Husband Paid $41 to Redeem Her—Court Upheld Deal.

In January, Spurgie Gates, of New Orleans, then jobless, faced tough times and an unpaid board bill for himself and wife.

Everything of value the couple possessed had found its way into the pawnshops, but still $34 was due the landlord, who was growing irate. Gates figured that he had one more possession that he could pawn. It was his spouse.

Would the landlord take Mrs. Gates and hold her as security for the uncollected account? Sure! In fact, he beamed upon Gates' proposal. The pawn ticket was duly made out, the wife delivered to the landlord, and Gates set out with high resolves.

Recently the husband had enough money to get his wife out of pawn. The landlord asked for the return of the pawn ticket before delivering his security. Gates couldn't find it. Thereupon an argument ensued over the question of principal and interest, and the two men fought while the woman sat on her trunk.

Judge W. D. Chahberlain settled the argument. He allowed the landlord $41, and Gates to receive back his pledge. Then the judge fined the men $15 apiece.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disease.

Complexion Wash for Warm Weather.

A very good tonic for the skin is made of two ounces of cologne water, camphor tincture one ounce, benzoin tincture one-half ounce. A few drops of this mixture put into the washbowl when bathing the face will be found delightfully refreshing.

FRENCH PLANNING POST-WAR BOYCOTT

Manufacturers Instructing Consumers How to Detect and Avoid Articles of German Importation.

PARIS, May 26.—The proposed boycott after the war of German products in France and other countries of the Entente might have been looked upon until recently as the manifestation of a point that a reasonable peace treaty could overcome. The idea is now apparently so deeply rooted in the minds of individuals as to constitute a menace that may resist any sort of peace treaty. The only official action regarding trade between citizens of France and the Central Empires applies solely to the period of hostilities. Private initiative, however, has gone far in the direction of a permanent ostracism of merchandise from countries at war with France. If it continues to develop along the same lines, it may make official action superfluous.

Nearly every French trade corporation that has felt German competition in the past is not only spreading the doctrine of preference for articles made at home or by the Allies of France, but is organizing for the eventual boycott with an ardor of initiative that was rare in French business circles prior to 1914. It involves the systematic education of consumers as to what German articles and products they bought before the war without knowing it, and what French, British, Russian, and Italian articles may replace them. Starting with the characteristic Parisian industry, which makes the minor articles called "articles of Paris," local manufacturers were informed in detail how the Germans lowered the manufacturing cost and competed with them even in their home market; this was done by a public exhibition of German-made "articles of Paris" and by explanatory documents spread among the little manufacturers. The movement extended to a propaganda with the families, showing them the difference between the French and the German made articles.

The Scientific and Medical Committee of the Allied Nations is being organized for the purpose of exposing to scientists, chemists, and medical men the reasons why before the war 75 per cent. of the products and apparatus used by them came from Germany, and how they may be replaced herafter. Most of the French manufacturers of surgical instruments had become simply commission merchants handling German-made articles; for instance, all of the medical thermometers came from Germany, nearly all the fine graduated glassware used in laboratories, and eight-tenths of all the microscopes came from either Germany or Austria, as well as a great proportion of eyeglasses, opera glasses, and field glasses sold by French opticians. The preponderance of German chemical products, drugs, and dyes on the French market was well known even before the war, but it was not so well known that Germany furnished nearly all of the synthetic remedies.

All of the allied countries since the war began have been obliged to develop their facilities for the manufacture of explosives. The raw materials employed are quite the same as those that must serve in the preparation of the dyes, perfumery, and medicines. It is concluded, therefore, that there is nothing whatever in the way of replacing these German products after the war, since the considerable number of works constituted for the preparation of raw material for explosives will be obliged to turn to some other industry, and can be immediately utilized in the production of chemical products.

The scientists interested in the organization of this committee have discovered in many different obscure corners of France men who are manufacturing on a small scale scientific instruments that they declare are equal in every way to those made in Germany. In the past these little manufacturers have satisfied themselves with a small output, without endeavouring to make the merits of their production generally known. The French contingent of this committee is already practically formed, comprising many well known men. The English, Belgian, Italian, Japanese, and Russian contingents are being organized, and, working in common with the French contingent, will prosecute a thorough propaganda with the general public as well as with doctors, scientists and opticians.

While this committe has no official sanction, its work is being seconded by the Government so far as concerns corporations for development of chemical and other industries. The Minister of Commerce has constituted in his department a technical service charged with the examination of questions relating to supplies of raw material and to the operation of industries not employed exclusively in the national defense. This technical service is divided into three sections—metal, textiles, and divers industries, to which has been added a department of chemical and pharmaceutic products. This department is charged with the distribution of phenol, so important to the aniline dye industry. It will not only furnish this important product, but will take measures to develop that industry as well as the manufacture of drugs in France. It has already succeeded in reconstituting the manufacture of synthetic indigo with resources of the country.

BLAMES GERMANS IF BELGIANS WANT

Confiscation of Native Supplies Charged—Waits to See if the New Agreement Will Be Kept.

LONDON, May 23.—In an interview with reference to reports of scarcity of food in Belgium, Lord Eustace Percy, who is in charge of the department of the Foreign Office which is in intimate touch with the problem of feeding the civil population in the occupied part of Belgium, emphasized the point that if the Belgians were allowed to suffer for want of food it was the fault of the Germans. He dwelt on the sinking of ships of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium by mines planted in the North Sea by the Germans in an area where mine-laying could only injure Dutch trade and Belgian relief vessels as one reason for the shortage of the food supply to Belgians. Last year the commission lost six ships, four of them loaded with food cargoes, while this year five have been sunk, four of which were loaded with food cargoes.

Also from the sinking of ships, Lord Eustace said that if the Germans would keep the word given a short time ago not to confiscate native Belgian food products, which they have been doing until recently, there would be no lack of supplies for the suffering Belgians.

"It all comes down to what the Germans intend doing as to the food shipped to Belgium by the American Commission," said Lord Eustace. "If they will keep their hands off the food intended for the starving Belgians and not confiscate it for the use of the German Army, and if they do not appropriate native food products—in other words, if they hold themselves to the agreement recently made—the plight of the Belgians will not be desperate. It is too early since the new agreement of the Germans has been in effect to tell exactly its workings, but we will soon know. We hear piteous stories of the plight of Belgians to-day. There are many reports of attempts on the part of the Germans to interfere with the work of the local relief committee with a view to force the inhabitants to work for the invaders.

"Every effort is being made now to see that any shortage of the food supply is at once remedied. From all we understand the food supply that has been going into Belgium, together with the food and livestock produced in the country itself, has been ample to sustain the whole population, but it has been a fact that they have not been getting all the products which should have been available.

"It has been an enormous task to keep track of all movements of food supplies imported into Belgium and to prevent leakages and smuggling. Belgium is full of German officers and inhabitants who are always anxious to get supplies for the army or buy them cheaply in Belgium in order to sell at high prices in Germany.

"There are more than 4,000 local relief committees, all of whom have to be controlled by a neutral organization through the employment of a huge system of relief agents. The Belgium National committee employs some 40,000 persons, I believe. Actual tabs is, we hope, kept on all food that gets to the border, so that leakages must now be reduced to a slight proportion, if any at all. The sink of the Relief Commission's ships with food cargoes, of course, is most serious, and the Germans, if they actually cared to aid in the work of keeping the Belgians from suffering for want of food, could stop the planting of mines in the track where ships have to pass and where no warlike purpose is served by planting them."

Officials of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium and the British National Commission in London feel sure, they told The New York Times correspondent today, that there was no appreciable leakage now of food shipped in Belgium. They expect, they say, within a few weeks' time to be able to announce that the new agreement of the Germans is working acceptably, with no confiscation, either of food supplies shipped into Belgium or of native products by the Germans for their army. While Germany in the early days of the war drove a great part of the Belgian stock of cattle across the border, relief officials say the Germans are now letting the Belgian cattle supply alone, except in perhaps sporadic instances when they may be able to get small herds over.

Relief officials admitted that, although response the world over had been lively to the call for money to feed the Belgians, in addition to the financial support from the Allied Governments, they were not able to get any more than enough to put the Belgians on approximately two-thirds of the ordinary diet. Little meat is to be had in Belgium to-day, and the price of that runs to 75 cents a pound, so as to be prohibitive to the average family. German occupied Belgium to-day is subsisting largely on bread and vegetables, of which potatoes form a conspicuous part.

A Sample Gave Relief

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

"Victoria, January 18th.

For several years I have been troubled with Kidney and Bladder Trouble, caused by uric acid, and the pains caused by the intermittent stoppage of urine was very severe. For this I was taking something or other continually with but little or no relief. At last a friend handed me a sample package of your Gin Pills. The contents of a sample gave me relief that I had not experienced in a long time. Since then I have been taking Gin Pills occasionally and have had no return of my former trouble. I am very gratified for the benefit derived, and feel sure that any one ailing as I was will find your Gin Pills will give the desired results."

This letter is from a well-known traveller of high standing in the City of Victoria. His name will be furnished to anyone desiring to obtain further information direct from him.

If you have any difficulty in getting Gin Pills from your dealers, order direct from us, enclosing 50 cents for 1 box, or $2.50 for 6 boxes. A sample box will be sent free upon request. (Mention this paper.)

PART OF CUMIERES RE-CAPTURED BY THE FRENCH

THE GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS BEATEN OFF

FRENCH RECAPTURE PART OF THE VILLAGE OF CUMIERES

War Office Announces Launching of Successful Counter-Attack---Heavy Fighting Followed French Success but Desperate German Attacks Were Beaten off---French Also Make Progress on East Bank of The Meuse.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, May 27.—(French Official).—The French troops recaptured a large part of the village of Cumieres, nine miles north-west of Verdun, in heavy fighting last night, the War Office announced to-day. Despite the most desperate counter attacks, the French retained possession of the eastern part of the village, as well as several German trenches to the north-west. The French counter attack was launched from the Grove between Cumieres and the west bank of the Meuse. After pressing forward into this wood in grenade fighting on Thursday, the French commanders massed detachments there yesterday, and last night threw these forces against the Germans, who had occupied Cumieres earlier in the week. At the same time another French force attacked in the Cumieres Wood, north-west of the village, capturing the German trenches. The Germans counter attacked with great fury, but when the latest despatches were filed to the War Office the French were still holding the eastern portion of Cumieres, three-quarters of a mile from the Meuse. East of Hill 304, French grenadiers made some progress during the night. On the east bank of the Meuse, the Germans attacked the French trenches near Fort Deaumont, but were completely repulsed. The artillery was very active on the northern front of Verdun last night.

Small German States Making Complaints

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 27.—The smaller States of Germany are up in arms against the appointment of the new food dictator, asserting a plan to "suck them dry" for the benefit of Prussia, according to the Chronicle. Members of the Bavarian Diet have complained in open debate that the new dictator will draw food from Bavaria for Berlin, the Chronicle says. Wurtemburg and Saxony have made similar protests.

Germans Have Lost 300,000 At Verdun

Examiner Special:

PARIS, May 27.—The Germans have lost 300,000 men at Verdun, while the French losses have totalled not more than 120,000, Col. Feyler, the Swiss military critic, estimates in a Geneva newspaper. "The Germans must remember that they are the assailants, and that they have lost 100,000 men a month without decisive results," continued Col. Feyler. "The French on the other hand have lost less than half as many men, and are confident of success. Included in the French losses are 20,000 African troops. The Crown Prince used five new divisions in this week's fighting. They now have at least fifteen or sixteen army corps now engaged, or a force of effectives of at least 800,000 men.

Public Funeral In Paris For Gallieni

Special to the Examiner.

PARIS, May 27.—The French Cabinet to-day decided to give General Gallieni a public funeral and a big patriotic demonstration, and inter remains in Hotel des Invalides, where Napoleon's tomb is.

A BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, May 27.—The British steamer Denewood, 1,280 tons, has been sunk. The crew was landed.

FURIOUS FIGHTING AROUND VERDUN.

BERLIN, May 27.—French troops succeeded in penetrating Cumieres village during furious fighting north-west of Verdun, but were driven out, the War Office declared this afternoon. The Germans took sixty-three prisoners.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The suggestion from Theo Marburg, formerly Minister to Belgium, that former President Taft be sent abroad at the proper time to line up the Allies in favour of a league to enforce peace, brought delegates to their feet cheering to-day at the league to enforce all peace meeting. The demonstration stopped only when Chairman Taft arose and said he feared his efforts might be a burden. Interest grew at to-day's session in the speech of the President's to-night. It became known to-day the President will lay down what he believes will be the basic principles of a world peace. The fundamentals out of which peace may come and endure are expected to be freely discussed by the President during the fifteen or twenty minutes he will talk.

TWO CORNER STONES FOR ST. JAMES CHURCH

Laying of Corner Stone on Thursday Next Will Be a Feature Event

On Thursday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock, the corner stone, or rather, stones, for there are two of them, of the St. James' Methodist Church will be formally laid. Mr. W. G. Morrow will lay one of them, and Mr. B. F. Ackerman will officiate at the other. The corner-stones will be placed on the buttresses on either side of the main entrance fronting on Romaine Street. Rev. Mr. Greatrix stated yesterday that he had invited all the members of the Methodist Conference to attend, and expected that the occasion would be a memorable one in the eventful history of St. James' Church.

The new church is 100 feet by 62 feet, 6 in., extending along Aylmer Street. It is directly opposite the Church of the Sacred Heart, which thus becomes a dignified corner indeed. The concrete foundation is practically completed, and Mr. Herb Sherwood is about ready to proceed with the stonework. The main structure will be of brick and when completed will provide accommodation for 650 persons.

DO YOU SLEEP WELL?

Life is short. One-third of your life is spent in bed, supposedly in perfect repose, healthy, restful sleep. Do you so spend it. If not, now that spring housecleaning time is here, and the need of a new mattress is felt, why don't you try an Ostermoor at $15.00. It may seem high-priced, but it is the cheapest mattress in the world when you consider the wearing quality. Sleep on it 30 nights and if not satisfied we will refund your money. J. D. Craig, corner George and Brock, exclusive agent.

A Ruling From Patriotic Fund

By a recent ruling of the Patriotic Fund Conference, it was recommended to the Executive Committee, at Ottawa, that for the future the wives of soldiers married after enlistment would not be placed on the Fund. Should additions come to the family of the enlisted man, then the wife and mother will com on the fund as prescribed by the rules. The local committee desire it to be made public that after June 1st, no applications in line with the above conditions will be recognized, until circumstances as noted, warrant going on the fund.

ATMOSPHERE OF IRELAND TENDS TO IMPROVEMENT

The Outstanding Ulster Difficulty is Still An Obstacle---Orange Ulster Cannot Be Forced Into Home Rule By Bullets or Bayonets

AMONG THE SLAIN

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, May 27.—There is reason to hope that the atmosphere of Ireland now so changed, will gradually improve. The outstanding Ulster difficulty is still an obstacle, but even in Ulster the temper of conditions has greatly improved. The Sinn Fein rebellion and the war killed all possibility of the employment of force on either side as a factor in the Ulster problem. Orangemen recognize that rebellion no longer is a possibility to contemplate, while the Nationalists equally recognize that Orange Ulster cannot be forced into Home Rule by bullets or bayonets.

The Nationalists must accept there fore, in principle, the right of Ulster to exclude herself, if she still remains of that mind, but much haggling will occur, regarding the size of the excluded area.

Another essential provision of exclusion will be that nothing be done even to suggest a paramount breaking up of Ireland's unity; but on that point Orangemen are now reasonable I believe, therefore, a settlement is certain.

Determination to have a settlement remains equally strong and pratically universal with all parties, British and Irish, with the possible exception of William O'Brien's small group Official negotiations do not yet exist, but active conversations are taking place in all quarters behind the scenes.

Sympathetic Support.

Mr. Lloyd George has charge of some of this preliminary work. Every member of the Cabinet gives sympathetic support and Mr. Asquith more than any, as he has returned from Dublin with the inflexible conviction that the settlement must come now or not at all. The Orange leaders are putting forward rather extreme terms just at the moment, but they are conciliatory in temper and show the same eagerness for settlement as the other sections. Every English Tory member is all right. Of course, the Liberals also will be delighted if their Irish policy reaches its full fruition at last.

One dark spot on the horizon is the difficulty created by the exasperation of opinion, especially in Dublin, by the severe measures taken to put down the rebellion, and the large number of arrests throughout the country, sometimes of men who were ardent Redmondites and hated the whole Sinn Fein movement. But the military regime soon will come to an end in Ireland. Releases are going on daily in considerable numbers. Prison treatment is now entirely reformed of such incidents as the shooting

FUND WILL BE PRESENTED TO 93rd MONDAY AFTERNOON

Arrangements Made for Ceremony in Central Park---Athletic Events for 93rd Battalion Held To-day---Drum Head Service in Victoria Park---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The presentation of the regimental fund raised for the 93rd Battalion in the city and county will take place on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Central Park, and the public is cordially invited to be present. Representatives of the different municipalities in the county have been invited to attend, as well as the members of the 93rd Battalion Fund Committee, and the ceremony will undoubtedly be an interesting one.

The 93rd Battalion ran off the balance of the sports left over from the 24th celebration at Central Park this morning, and some good contests were seen. There were large fields in most of the events, and the sprints had to be run in heats, and the finishes were close. Wednesday's prize-winners were barred from competition to-day. The events resulted as follows:

100 yards dash—1, Pte. R. Wedlock, Machine Gun Section; 2, Pte. J. Scullie, A Company.

440 yards dash—1, Pte. R. Willshaw, A Company; 2, Pte. H. Lebar, A Company.

Running broad jump—1, Pte. R. Gadona, B Company; 2, Pte. R. Dyer, Band.

Running hop, step, and jump—1, Lance-Corp. Bell, B Company; 2, Pte. F. Walno, Band.

Walking race—Pte. Thomas, B Company.

Standing broad jump—1, Pte. Trew, A Company; 2, Pte. Hardman, A Company.

Rev. H. D. Kennedy Will Preach

The Rev. H. D. Kennedy, evangelist, whose present home is at Winona Lake U.S.A., is at present spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, 600 Water Street. Mr. Kennedy who will preach in George Street Methodist Church on Sunday evening, has spent twenty years in evangelical work both in Canada and the United States. His address on Sunday evening will be of special interest to everyone. His subject will be "Good Cheer."

SUNDAY EVENING

On Sunday evening, Rev. J. A. Mackenzie, of Knox Church, is to occupy the pulpit of Murray Street, while the pastor of Murray Street is preaching at Knox, Mr. Mackenzie has been persuaded to preach a special sermon to young men and women. All young people will receive a hearty welcome to this service. The music will be of an appropriate character. This is the first time that Murray Street and Knox have had an exchange since the coming of Mr. Mackenzie to the city.

"Do you know, leap year has hardly begun and I've been proposed to ten times." "Yes? I suppose the girls like to practice on something easy."

NEW $100,000 FACTORY FOR BONNER-WORTH CO.

Will Manufacture a Dry Spun Worsted Yarn Required by the Makers of Cashmere Hosiery and Underwear—Will Employ Mostly Men.

RATEPAYERS TO VOTE ON BYLAW

The Bonner-Worth Co. Ltd. propose to break ground next fall for a new factory 100 by 70 feet adjoining their present buildings on McDonnel street for the manufacture of dry spun worsted yarn which virtually means that Peterborough gets a new industry capitalized at $100,000.00. Orders have already been given for the machinery which will not be delivered, however, within eighteen months because of the delays which war conditions impose. The yarn produced under this, the French system of dry spinning worsted, will be used in the manufacture of cashmere hose and underwear. It is anticipated that when operations commence, about the end of 1917, work will be provided for seventy-five employees mostly men. Certainly those acquainted with the plans agree that this new unit in the Bonner-Worth plant will be a splendid acquisition to Peterborough's lengthening list of flourishing industries. It will be located along McDonnel street immediately west of the present factory.

At the Council meeting last night a by-law was introduced by Alderman Weir, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, providing for the submission of a by-law to the ratepayers on Tuesday, June 27th, offering the company a free site and exemption from taxes for ten years. The cost of the site and the work of presenting the by-law to the people for their sanction is estimated to cost $2,000.

In introducing the by-law to aid the Bonner-Worth Company in their latest project, Alderman Weir presented the following review of what the company had done since coming to Peterborough, and how they had more than fulfilled their promises.

I wish to briefly state the circumstances connected with this by-law and I believe it will commend itself to the Council and to the electors. The Bonner-Worth Co. was established in 1911. The company at that time agreed to erect a building 75 x 80 feet, two stories high, and to employ at least 80 operatives, and the city loaned the company $12,000.00 and gave them a fixed assessment. The company has much more than kept their agreement with the city. They have made their payments on the loan, and a couple of years after they were established they erected a building which about doubled their capacity. Last year they added an office building, and they are now erecting another addition 96 x 66 feet for the factory proper, and a building 96 x 37 feet for an addition to the dye house, besides putting another storey on the present dye house. When these additions are completed, they will employ 200 operatives instead of the 80 they agreed to employ.

The company has been making one class of worsted yarn, which they supply to a number of Canadian factories, and there has been such a demand for it, and the company has supplied that demand so satisfactorily that their business has increased to the extent I have indicated.

To Make Another Yarn.

There is another class of yarn, which is largely used by other manufacturers, and which those using it have difficulty in obtaining. The proprietors of the Bonner-Worth Co., decided to erect another factory to make this class of yarn. Their plan was to organize a new company, with a separate charter, and with a capital of $100,000. When the question of location came up two places were considered, Peterborough and another city.

WILL BE GREATEST CRIMINAL TRIAL IN HISTORY OF CANADA

Crown Will Endeavor to Have Contractor Kelly Tried Before the Ex-Ministers Case is Heard in Winnipeg

WILL FIGHT OVER JURY

Special to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 27.—Next Wednesday the greatest criminal trial ever staged in a Canadian Court will open here in the assize room of the new law courts, before Judge Prendergast and a jury. The great preliminary encounter will be when the Crown will endeavour to have the trial of Thomas Kelly, contractor for the parliament buildings, placed ahead of the ex-ministers. The selection of a jury will also cause a bitter fight.

Since the preliminary hearing of ex-Ministers Sir R. P. Roblin, Hon. Geo. R. Coldwell and Hon. J. H. Howden, one of their number, Hon. W. H. Montague has died. Roblin is in good health and is anxious to have the trial over. Coldwell is the Paymaster in the randon Regiment, and Howden has been living in Neepawa. All three are out on $5,000 bail.

Kelly is in the Provincial jail, bail having been refused. He is not even allowed to smoke, but has his meals and all the reading matter he asks for brought in.

The hearing of Dr. R. M. Simpson, on a charge of conspiracy, will also open before another judge at the same time as the big trial. Simpson is out on $50,000 bail, and has been appointed Chief Medical Officer at Camp Hughes.

Hon. Robert Rogers has been here for a week and has taken great interest in these trials.

Fine Showing of Living Room Furniture

Exploiting An Unique Idea in Individual Chesterfields and Arm Chairs at Richard Hall & Sons

If you are interested (and everyone is who likes comfort) in the modern living room furnishings, you should not fail to see the large south show window of Richard Hall & Son Limited.

Here are shown comfortable Chesterfields and arm chairs made up in the modern way by expert upholsterers in the Upholstering Department of the Hall Store. The very latest styles of coverings are shown made up and by the yard. This work is all done by expert workmen and in the most modern way at a very small cost.

If you desire to tone up your living room, these interesting examples will prove very helpful. Luxurious, easy-reclining Chesterfields and arm-chairs are shown in Walnut and Mahogany frames, with spring seats, stuffed back, wide, comfortable arms, and covered with verdure, Chintzes and tapestries.

Every woman to whom pretty furniture appeals will promptly surrender to the charm of these exhibits at Richard Hall & Sons, who are making a special feature of this work in their upholsterin. section. In keeping with everything else in this store, these house-furnishings present unusual types that have a marked difference from those of the commonplace.

SIGHT IS PRECIOUS.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1916

A GOOD ROADS LETTER.

The reader is entreated to read the communication in another place in this issue, over the signature of "Bon Chemin." It may be unnecessary to explain to the average reader that "bon chemin" means good road; but it may be necessary to say this to authorities and responsibilities that do not know, or apparently care what good road means, whether it is expressed in French or English, or is to be constructed and maintained. The communication, "Bon Chemin" is timely and apt. We have in the vicinity of Peterborough, magnificent drives in almost every direction, but we might as well not have them, for all the enjoyment we can get out of them by using the roads under our wheels. The drive to Lakefield, on the hither side of the river, with its undulating stand of evergreen wall, with its flashing glimpses of the shining river, through cedar openings, and all that is beautiful, but it cannot be enjoyed except at a mighty slow speed of auto or other vehicle in the present condition of the roads, which seem to have been seriously neglected. As pointed out in the communication, there is a general lack of good roads, and this in a county whose soil and facilities for drainage, and abundance of available road metal, are unsurpassed in Canada. If we were at liberty to tell the name of the writer of the communication, the public would see that he represents, in position and character, the very best and most progressive element of the community, as he represents in sentiment, in the matter of roads, the disgust, discomfort, disappointment and humiliation of all who have occasion to use our extra city highways converging upon the much-the-same streets of the city. We must have good road surfaces as well as fine scenery and bracing air to enjoy our drives or even move on, for ordinary traffic purposes. We could easily have them, if we had a mind above mud and realized that the only effective way of doing things is to do them.

SUMMER PLEASURES OF CANADA.

After showers, sunshine. Is it not probable that Victoria Day wrought, or brought, the charm, with its "Queen's weather?" The warm days have made the leaves fairly leap from their folding buds; and we have a fore-longing for their green shelter from the directer rays of the sunlight. We begin to think of holiday lounges in shady nooks amidst the country silence listening to the chirp of the birds, that seem less to break than emphasize the silence. The warm flowing water of the streams, the placid depths of the lakes throw out their prophetic beckoning, and rod and reel and basket and bait—and, to some, other concomitants — begin to mingle with our day dreams. Nature's magnificent open tempts us all; and touring and travelling and sight seeing and pleasure-seeking work their spell. We are planning holidays and jaunts and seaside expeditions, and many of us hope to strike the transcontinental trail. In Canada's three and three-quarter million square miles from the Atlantic to the Pacific, scenic beauty and lure to leisure abound in infinite variety of form and altitude, and environment. The sedate east, the restful, lake-strewn mid-Dominion belt, and the vigorous and wide-awake West—the 900 miles of wheat field, and lone and thrilling leagues of mountain-peak and deep valley, sheer-walled canyon, and abysmal chasm—are all reached by the luxurious and comfort-cushioned trains of the Canadian Pacific Railway with a rolling panorama of scenery without end, and without equal. From the Atlantic shores to the western coast splendid hotels, conducted by the Company's officials, insure a commissariat de luxe, in class and character on a level with the train service.

To the sanctum have come three folding C.P.R. tourist booklets, bright with the hall marks of C.P.R. literary, illustrative and typographical excellence. These beautiful charts of the navigation of Canada's sea of tonic beauty and travel delight are poignant temptations to the tourist, whether he be of some less-favoured land or a Canadian, with proud sense of possession, and whetted appetite of appreciation. Happy is the man with a country with half of the scenic beauties and summer charms and comfort of Canada, as reached by the splendid railway lines and the rolling mastery of C.P.R. transcontinental trains. Canada is a country worth fighting for, worth living in, worth seeing. "See Seville and die," is the dead antithesis of a visionary castle in Spain compared with the slogan that fits this country—"See Canada and live."

HAVE WE GERMAN "FRIGHTFULNESS" AT HOME?

We are combing the population of our city and country to get soldiers to fight against German frightfulness. Destruction of life and property is the ruling spirit of the German genius.

We are fighting and spending money in heaps, and blood in streams to exorcise this spirit. But have we not evidence of its existence at home—here, in Peterborough. In last night's report of the business of the Board of Works we read that the agendum of street operations for the near future includes—

"a drain to be cleaned out and two trees in the drain at 217 Mark street to be removed."

This is a simple succinct statement of intention, and its meaning seems plain. But there is an underlying meaning that puts the councils of this and previous years on the defensive against a charge of "frightfulness," destruction of tree life, as well as neglect of street vigilance.

The intention to remove two trees is consistent entirely with the practice of our city councils. In the past few years we have had the city "remove" scores of splendid street trees, at an expense—of beauty and money, too, that would have paid the cost of planting hundreds of street trees. This vandalism has been to the direct detriment of the tree beauty of our streets and involves laceration of the feelings of citizens of taste and sense of the beautiful and — comfortable. This tree destruction has been so great, so conscienceless, so barbarous and spontaneous, that one can fancy we see some of our past aldermen and mayors, gloating over the Hunnish pleasure of laying the glad axe to the roots of a street tree.

We have a growth of centuries in majestic trees, with giant trunks upholding a forest of magnificent branchage and sheltering foliage—we have had such street trees, cut down and destroyed with no other earthly excuse, than that the tree interfered with the effect of a street lamp. Of course the street lamp couldn't be shifted; that would be destruction of man-made property; but the God-made tree, that held in its sturdy hole and soaring expanse of limb and leaf, the glorious growth, the concentrated sunshine and the life-giving showers of perhaps a century, is cut down remorselessly, as a noxious weed. The work of an hour, the cost of a dollar would have shifted the lamp post; but no labour of man's hands, no money could produce or restore the tree, whose price destruction cost more than the planting of a hundred street trees.

This practice prevailing throughout the city, as an apparently settled policy of "frightfulness," has destroyed an untellable total of civic tree beauty; and the worst feature of it is, and has been that there has been no sense of responsibility to replace the tree growth so ruthlessly destroyed. In the whole history of the city, the city authorities have not been known to plant a street tree; but the name of the number destroyed is legion.

How can we account for the development of a spirit that is accountable for such conditions? We cannot have a very high respect, for the teachings and influences of our pulpits, our schols, and social conditions, whose fruit is a lack of culture, sense of the beautiful, sense af altruistic responsibility, lack of sense of worship of God in nature, in the most beautiful and benign of His manifestations, tree and forest growth, which Ruskin destribes as "the shadow of God."

Are we of the earth earthy? Are we proud of the record that, in nearly three-quarters of a century of organized civic existence, we have never planted a street tree, and have never, till within the past few years, built a mile of properly founded, properly built street?

This brings up the point of the associated evil, neglect of street construction, and care of streets. The two trees in the street drain "at 217 Mark street" are monuments to civic inefficiency and neglect. Of course in this case the trees must be removed. They are growing in the wrong place. But they wouldn't be growing where they are, if care and attention had been given to the street. What must have been the nature of the street oversight and the length of neglect that permitted two trees to take root (from seed no doubt), and grow to obstructive size in a street drain? Keeping the drain in open order, in working condition, would have removed the trees as twigs, and have met the first requirement of good roads—good drainage.

The little item in the programme of the Board of Works is the most eloquent condemnation of the inefficiency, carelessness, and un-system of the past, and largely present, dealing with our streets and traffic interests, especially when it emphasizes the fact that the destruction of street trees, finds a much larger, and, indeed, as regard street tree beauty and utility, an exclusive place in the policy of past and present city governments.

In this regard, we cannot throw stones at German "frightfulness," the cult of destruction of life and property, when we wantonly destroy, without a thought of replacing, venerable street trees, that have, an aesthetic and substantial value—adding, collectively, thousands to the value of our homes and property, and making our streets a summer paradise for pedestrians and a summer gladness to the eye.

Problem of the Government of Ireland

Ireland is on the eve of momentous changes. Every thoughtful student of Irish affairs recognizes the necessity of finding a way out of the present impasse. A growing conviction is arising hold of the British people that to the too tardy recognition of Irish national rights are due in great part the unrest and the discontent and spirit of disloyalty that found vent in the recent abortive rising. The honour of England and the unity of the Empire alike are at stake. Ireland was the first country to be colonized by the English. It is the last of the early colonies to be freed from the noxious taint of England's colonial policy.

Through that policy feudalism, for seven centuries, has been entrenched in Ireland. Its chief citadels were the Land, the Church, and Castle Government. Of these Castle rule alone survives, and on it sentence of death has been pronounced. Those who still doubt the capacity of Irishmen to rule in their own country—at a time when thousands of Irish soldiers are fighting the battles of the Empire—will find in Irish legislation of the past century a complete answer to their objections. The overthrow of landlordism and the Established Church was the direct result of Irish Nationalist agitation. At every critical stage in the fight the Irish reformers were opposed by the same feudal classes that have stood for the veto of the Lords and that have supported Carson in a vain endeavor to perpetuate Castle rule. That England pleads guilty to the charge of misgovernment in the past is admitted in the speeches of Unionist statesmen like Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain, and confirmed by the legislation already passed. For Irish legislation has proceeded inexorably in one direction—the reversal of England's feudal policy. For generations the Ascendancy Party in Ireland has been clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day, while Ireland has sat, an outcast, at the Castle gate. Coercion and conciliation have been the variants on which Castle government has rung the changes, but the spirit of Irish nationality has been proof against both. The demand for Irish self-government is as insistent to-day as it was in the days of O'Connell.

The Irish problem has been correctly diagnosed by the leading Unionist newspaper in Ireland, The Irish Times, which writes:

"All over Ireland intelligent Unionists are disgusted at the hopeless stagnation in our industrial life, and have come to recognize the fact that England and Ireland are unequally yoked together. The fundamental differences, social and economic, are wider than the geographical."

The root evil of England's colonial policy—against which the American colonies and Canada rebelled—was centralization. It is well to remember this at a time when centralization is once more in the air. Although force of circumstances and physical barriers have tended more and more to decentralization in the outlying parts of the Empire, Ireland has been too close to avoid interference, and too far away to enjoy the material prosperity that flowed to England as a result of the centralization there of the world's trade and commerce. Decentralization in more modern times is a basic principle of British Imperialism. Castle government in Ireland represents in its most acute form the pernicious principle of centralized rule, filtered through a permanent and irresponsible official caste whose sympathies and ideals are alien to those of three-fourths of the Irish people.

Any change in the government of Ireland to be lasting and satisfactory must be in accordance with Irish ideas. It must substitute for the discredited rule of Dublin Castle the constitutional principle of effective Irish Parliamentary control.—The Globe.

Reducing Expenses

THE war has increased the cost of living. The housewife must, therefore, make her money go farther. By using a tea, like Red Rose, which is largely composed of Assam Indian teas, she can reduce her tea bills considerably. The rich Indian strength requires less tea in the tea pot.

In sealed packages only. Try it.

PAROLE FOR BANK THIEF.

George W. Coleman, Who Took $300,000 Previous to 1910, Was Released Thursday.

BOSTON, Mass., May 27.—George W. Coleman, who in 1910 was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment for looting the National City Bank of Cambridge, in which he was a clerk, was released on parole Thursday from the Greenfield Jail by order of the National Parole Board.

Coleman began stealing the bank's funds in 1906 and at the time of his arrest had taken more than $800,000, most of which went to gamblers and bunco men.

"Big Bill" Keliher, who induced Coleman to rob the bank and acted as "steerer" for the bunco men, is serving eighteen years in the Charlestown State Prison. Efforts are being made to obtain a pardon for him. Coleman will live with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Coleman, of Cambridge.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

Dr. Wilfred Grenfell of Labrador, when speaking recently in the Convocation Hall, Toronto, on behalf of the Red Cross Society, paid most eloquent and noble tribute to the spirit animating the men at the front.

Speaking of the attitude of the troops to religion, Dr. Grenfell said he could not be sure that they were all nominal Christians, but there was an atmosphere of unselfishness pervading the life at the front. "Men were so unselfish that they regarded it as a privilege to be permitted to crawl over a parapet to fetch in a wounded comrade. It is an atmosphere in which Christ Himself might walk. Though we were losing men at the war, for every man that falls two men are made. However many men Canada may lose, ten thousand times as many would have been lost if Canadians at such a time as this should have stood aside and said, "We are neutral on this question.' I feel a great reverence in the face of a Canadian audience when I think of what I saw at Ypres.

Such a statement makes one feel very humble, but also very proud. To think that in the midst of this great, ugly, brutal and unChristlike thing we term war, that it is still possible for one of the most robust and most Christ-like of Christian teachers to be able to say, "It is an atmosphere in which Christ himself might walk." Let us thank God that our men are not only heroes in the physical sense, but that they are heroes in a greater and more spiritual sense by the exercising of the great qualities of unselfishness and love towards their comrades. Dr. Grenfell's speech also carries a message to us all here in Peterborough. let us try to keep the atmosphere at home such as "Christ Himself might walk in.'

Used Too Frequently.

In a case recently tried in Toronto, the Crown Attorney was very severe on people and societies using the Red Cross name without right or authority to do so. He said in the course of his speech "far two many concerts, dances and things are got up nominally for the Red Cross or Patriotic Fund, but it is seldom that either of these organizations benefit by them. Frequently unscrupulous people take advantage of the patriotic impulses of people at this time to make money for themselves.' We do not think Peterborough has suffered much from the latter type, but this we do state without fear of contradiction, that the use of the name "Red Cross" has been used far too frequently in Peterborough and districts, in connection with efforts from which the Red Cross received neither contributions in money or supplies. It cannot be too widely known that the Canadian Red Cross Society is under Royal Charter and that it is a criminal offence to make use of its name unless a chartered branch or an affiliated auxiliary of the local branch.

A society sending its supplies to the Red Cross, cannot call itself a Red Cross Society, unless by payment of two dollars, or on behalf of its president, and it becomes an auxiliary of the local society.

It can call itself by any name it pleases, and if it sends its supplies to the Society, it can state in raising funds that they will be expended for Red Cross supplies, but if that term is used then the Society must benefit.

Food is Inadequate.

Mr Harold Tennant stated in the British House of Commons on Wednesday that many of the exchanged prisoners of war stated that the food given to them while confined in the German camps "was altogether inadequate and wretched in quality, and they would literally have starved if it had not been for the parcels sent them from England." Only on Thursday a hospital ship arrived at Tilbury Basin bringing one hundred maimed and sick exchanged prisoners, they looked pinched and wan and were clothed in all sorts of costumes.

One, on being asked, "What sort of a time have you had?" replied in a single word, "Rotten", and in view of the statement made by War Secretary Tennant it requires no great imagination on the part of any of us to fill his terse statement in for ourselves.

Red Cross nurses and helpers were there in plenty to aid in the removal to the hospital train of these broken warriors, who in response to the cheers of the grimy workers of Tilbury, tried to whistle "Rule Britannia."

War Food Fund.

Of all the various branches of Red Cross work none is carrying on a more worthy or nobler work than is the "Prisoners of War Food Fund," under the wise and efficient guidance of Mrs. Rivers Bulkely. These parcels are sustaining life in our boys "until a brighter day dawns" and until, if spared, they can return to their home and friends once more. We are always so glad when we can send a little more each month to this splendid branch of our work, but the cost of Red Cross materials is advancing so greatly that there has been no surplus to add to our usual monthly gift, and donations for this Fund will be gladly received by our treasurer, Miss Emma Morrow.

Challenge to Gossips.

"A Challenge to Gossips." from Peter McArthur (Toronto Globe):

"Toronto, March 16—It is all very well to take high ground about 'gossips' and to refuse to repeat or consider it, but during the past few weeks I have been forced to change my opinion about this pastime or vice, whichever you care to call it. So far as individuals are concerned, gossip is just as detestable and negligible as ever. But when gossip affects the efficiency of a nation at war it becomes a matter for indignant consideration. I have been forced to the conclusion that both recruiting and contributions to patriotic funds have been seriously retarded by gossip. There are all sort of stories afloat that are damaging to soldiers and patriotic workers, and I cannot think of any way to check them except by turning on them the light of publicity from the highest quarters. It would be useless for me to publish them, for I am not in a position to refute them, and I would only give them wider publicity. If you want to know what they are just listen to the gossip in your own town or neighbourhood. I find the stories the same wherever I go. And everywhere they are doing incalculable harm.

"For instance, there is a wretched story about Red Cross supplies being diverted from the purpose for which they were intended. I shall not repeat the story for fear of giving it new life. The first time I heard it the incident on which it was based was located in British Columbia. Now I hear it in every town or city I visit. Of course I can never pin it down so that it can be investigated. When I heard it in Aylmer the evidence of its truth was said to be in the hands of a person in St. Thomas. In St. Thomas I was referred to London. In London I was referred to Lobo. Wherever I heard it no one in that place had the evidence. The elusive evidence was always somewhere else. Now, this story has been refuted in the press and from the platform, but it still continues to do its baleful work. Selfish people who do not wish to help quote this story to justify their meanness, and many good people who easily moved to indignation, stop work when they hear it. I remember reading somewhere that 'a lie can travel around the world while the truth is getting its boots on,' and in this case the saying is justified. The truth never seems able to catch up with this particular line. The reason probably is that a lot of people want to believe it, though I incline to think that some kind of mob hysteria helps to give it currency and to make it carry conviction. I feel certain that it is a baseless lie, but I do not know how to disprove it. Personally, I refuse to believe any story of this kind unless I can get a chance to consider the evidence myself.

Thank you, Peter McArthur!

There is a charming little poem by Harold Begbie, entitled, "Handing Down," that we hope to give in next week's column, it goes right to the heart and makes us prouder than ever to be British born.

We wish to extend our heartiest good wishes on behalf of our society to Major Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, the husband of our President, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, on his leaving for Barriefield.

We pray that great blessings may attend his work among our soldier boys, and that when the dark cloud of war rolls by and the glad sunshine of peace reigns over our Empire again, that God will bring him back in health to those who are dear to him, and to continue his work in our city.

WAS FRIGHTFULLY WORRIED

Indigestion, Loss of Sleep, Heart Palpitation

A Case That Proves Prompt Action is Wise When Health is Poor

"At night I would wake up with vague feelings of fear and numbness in my hands and other parts of the body," writes Mr. E. X. Smeaton, of St. John's. "I had grown thin and pale, and at night it was very difficult to get enough warmth in my feet to get asleep. My digestion was poor, and appetite very uncertain. The form of nervousness that worried me most was starting at every little thing, which resulted in such violent heart action as sometimes frightened me. Finally I had to give up my work, which was inside office work, so languid, nervous and weak had I become. Through the intervention of a friend I was induced to use Ferrozone. My appetite improved at once, circulation also improved and Ferrozone accomplished the renewal of my blood and natural warmth seemed to come back to my limbs. At the same time Ferrozone built up my constitution. I became quite strong and resumed my occupation. In brief, I am well."

Ferrozone is the only remedy of its kind in the world—it makes you feel better at once; when you are tired, dull, dispirited—when you feel there is nothing in life for you, that's the time to take Ferrozone.

What a change Ferrozone makes! Your blood sings through your veins, carrying nourishment to every nook and corner of the body, you feel the exultant thrill of abundant nerve force, you learn the luxury and delight of being at your best—in perfect good health.

Just try Ferrozone and see how much better you feel; it's the one remedy in all the world that will get you bracing health at once. Sold everywhere 50c. per box; 6 for $2.50, at all dealers.

Eczema Wash Used IN Hospitals

How many hospital patients have been soothed of their frightful itch, of the scorching pain of skin disease, by the famous D. D. D. Prescription for eczema, a soothing fluid, washed in by a nurse's hand!

A Supervising Nurse (name of nurse and institute on application), writes regarding a patient. "The disease had eaten her eyebrows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

Some of our best doctors are using D. D. D. right along in their regular practice.

Come to use and we will tell you more about this remarkable remedy. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you. "D. D. D. Soap keeps your skin healthy. Ask about it.

America May Not Get German Dyes

London, May 27.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, informed the House of Commons this afternoon that a proposal had been received to permit the exportation from Germany to the American government of dyestuffs but that no answer had yet been given to the request.

The War Trade Minister denied reports which have received much publicity in England, that licenses had been given for the export from Germany to the United States of $5,000,000 worth of dyes, part of a shipment which might reach $30,000,00.

Lord Robert Cecil agreed with Sir John Lonsdale, Conservative member, for Mid-Armagh, who was the questioner, that the object of Germany's desire to export dyestuffs was to keep up German exchange with America. He added:

"Unquestionably it is not to our interest to allow this to take place, and I will bear that consideration very carefully in mind when the reply is sent to the American government. It would not be courteous to the United States to give assurances to this House before the reply to them is actually sent, but I assure Sir John Lonsdale what he says and what is the general feeling of the House will be borne in mind in any reply we send."

Lord Robert said that in 1915 the British government was willing to allow the exportation from Germany to the United States of two cargoes of dyestuffs, but that this offer had lapsed.

FALLS ON HER HEAD FROM AUTOMOBILE

Woman Is Taken to Long Island City Hospital After an Odd Accident.

NEW YORK, May 27.—As the automobile in which Mrs. Johanna Benens, of Fourth avenue, Astoria, turned a sharp curve in the road in Forest Park, Queens, yesterday, she was thrown against a door which was forced open and she fell out on her head.

Mrs. Benens was hurried to St. John's Hospital, Long Island City, where it was found that her skull had been fractured and she was internally injured. Her condition was considered serious. Her husband and several friends were with her in the automobile at the time.

BRITAIN PREPARED

THE SILENT SENTINEL

Dreadnoughts patrol the German Ocean night and day—these moving pictures give the spectator an idea of what the might of Britain means. They were taken from the actual scene of duty.

SEATS ARE NOW ON SALE

The official moving pictures of the British Government, entitled "Britain Prepared," created a sensation in London and throughout Britain wherever shown. Their Gracious Majesties extended their patronage, and the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Right Hon. Arthur Balfour, acted as their sponsor on the occasion of the opening presentation in the Empire Theatre, making a very notable speech, the text of which was cabled throughout the world.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught attended the opening production of "Britain Prepared" at the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, and extended their vice-regal patronage to the showings throughout Canada.

In arranging for the presentation of these unprecedented pictures in Peterborough, it is felt that they would prove to be an historic record which citizens of the British Empire would permanently value.

They present in pictures what the British censor refused to allow to be told in actual words. We are shown—not told, and what we see with our own eyes we must believe. The modern camera reproduces with marvellous fidelity.

There are pictures and pictures. These are moving pictures—they show not only the appearance of England in time of war—they show the life. They move and live. We are in England. We see the men of Kitchener's Army enlisting. We see their transformation into soldiers. We see them march away to the front.

We see what it meant when Lloyd George mobilized the industries of Great Britain. We see the great naval ship-yards and the building and launching of Dreadnoughts. We see where the great guns are made, and we see them tested with great charges of high explosive.

We see the munition factories organized under the "Minister of Munitions," with thousands of British women and girls at work helping to make shells.

And then we visit the Fleet!

How many people in Peterborough have ever seen a modern battleship? And yet upon battleships depends the safety of the British Empire. Were it not for the predominating power of the British fleet, Peterborough itself might well wonder what would happen.

These pictures "take you aboard a battleship"—not one, but many, all kinds of ships—Dreadnoughts, cruisers, destroyers, mine sweepers, submarines.

And airships! Did you ever go up in a Royal Naval Aeroplane? You have a chance to do so now—in effect anyway. You can take a trip above the clouds and swing and sway about in the sky—and all in a comfortable seat at The Grand Opera House.

We converse with Admiral Jellico—in all but words. We walk under the muzzles of the great guns. We see the mighty Queen Elizabeth gliding majestically by, the seas of the German Ocean smashing harmlessly against her irresistible bow.

All this is so much more graphic, so much more vivid than mere censored news despatches. One sees at a glance what a whole book of description would fail to adequately picture. And the impression once made will never fade.

As an objective expression of power—the power of man, master of nature and the elements thereof—the British fleet stands supreme in the world to-day. Nothing yet devised has confined and concentrated power under the finger of intelligence as has been done with the huge modern naval guns.

"Britain Prepared" shows these guns in action—shows the Queen Elizabeth firing her broadsides as she did at Gallipoli, when she threw her 1,500 pound shells right across the peninsula.

"The world has yet to know, and it does not yet know, how much it owes to the British fleet," said Right Hon. Arthur Balfour, in introducing these wonderful pictures in London. "It is a deep and vital lesson to all who are interested in the future of mankind."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

BOARD OF EDUCATION ASKS $15,000 FOR SOUTH CENTRAL

To Make Alterations During the Midsummer Holidays—Some of Aldermen Inclined to Less Expenditure Now and a New School Later.

ALD. DOBBIN SAID IT

The Board of Education asked the Council last night to raise by debenture issue $15,000 for repairs and improvements to the South Central School.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Chairman of the Board, presented the demand stating that the Board had put off this work as long as possible, and it had now become imperative. The problem had been carefully considered and the Board had concluded that $15,000 would be required. New heating, plumbing, and ventilation systems would have to be installed a basement dug out and floored with concrete to provide adequate room for the children when they could not remain outside to play.

Col. Miller and Mr. John Crane corroborated Mr Ackerman's statements as to the conditions of the furnaces, the faults in the ventilation and plumbing systems now provided and stated that the Board desired to begin the proposed alterations as soon as possible in order that they may be completed in September.

To Ald. Stratton's enquiry as to whether the Board was unanimously in favour of the plans decided upon, Mr. Eastwood replied that he wanted to see an entirely new school for the South Central section, but as the majority of the Board had agreed upon the expenditure of $15,000 for improvements, he was present with the majority, which of course, ruled.

Mayor Duffus said he did not think the Board of Education would ask for this sum of money if it were not necessary. At the same time he did not think that money should be expended now unless it was absolutely necessary. Wages and money were high and labour was scarce, and for these reasons it was advisable to spend as little as possible. However, the Mayor said he agreed that the South Central school should be put in a condition that would protect the children and satisfy their parents and the requirements of the authorities.

ALD. DUNCAN'S OPINION.

Ald. Duncan said he had examined the school at the request of the architect and had found the conditions very unsanitary. But an expenditure of three or four thousand dollars, he thought, would be sufficient to cover the repairs to the furnaces renovating the interior and fixing up the ventilation. The grounds were not large enough for the expenditure of $15,000. Ald. Duncan preferred the purchase of larger grounds now while the property was comparatively cheap.

Mr. Ackerman replied that the school was heated by five furnaces which were worn out. To replace them would cost $700, and if no other changes were made the same objectionable conditions would exist. Mr Ackerman could not see how the Board could avoid spending the sum asked for.

ALD. STRATTON.

Ald. Stratton commended the Board upon the close attention they had given to the city's school requirements and to the class of buildings provided. He was not altogether in accord with the spending of $15,000 on the present building as it stands. It was a good, central locality. There were not many expensive houses adjoining it, and he felt that the Board should secure options on the property that would be needed for a new and larger school. Repair the present building, said Ald. Stratton, but do not spend $15,000 on it at the present time. The cost of carrying on work was from 33 1-3 to 40 per cent. higher than it was two years ago.

With two boys attending the school Ald. Edgar gave his support to the Board's request, saying that if they believed they could fix up the school for three or four thousand dollars they would not have asked for $15,000. The basement was not in a healthy condition and the odours from it were drawn up into the rooms by the furnaces.

TO COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Ald. Dobbin remarked that the Council had to accede to the Board's demand anyway, and no remonstrance would be of avail.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that this question be referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Ald. Edgar—"Is there any object in that"

Ald. Duncan—"It will give us time to think it over."

Mayor Duffus assured the deputation that a meeting of the Committee of the Whole would be called at an early date.

READY FOR THE BIG CONFERENCE

Bay of Quinte Conference Will Open in the City on Wednesday Next

Everything is in readiness for the thirty-third session of the Bay of Quinte Conference which will open in George street Methodist church at 10 a.m. on Wednesday next. Capt. H B. Kenny, President of the Conference, will preside.

On Monday evening the Stationing committee will meet in the Charlotte street Sunday school hall, while the Statistical committee will meet in George street church.

The Conference consists of an equal number of ministers and laymen. About two hundred and fifty will be present including some of the strongest pulpit leaders of Canadian Methodism.

Public meetings, which will be held each evening of the Conference, promise to be exceptional in interest because of the great themes that will be discussed by able speakers.

BABY'S WELFARE

The welfare of the baby is the fond mother's greatest aim. No mother wants to see her little ones suffering from colds, constipation, colic or any other of the many ills that so often afflict little ones. Thousands of mothers have learned that by giving an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets to their children they can keep them well. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. Richard Boston Pembroke, Ont., says: "Baby's Own Tablets saved my little girl when nothing else appeared to help her. I would not attempt to raise a baby without keeping the Tablets in the house." They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FINED FOR WALKING ON G.T.R. BRIDGE

LINDSAY, May 27.—An East Ops farmer was asked to pay a fine and costs of $9.70 by Police Magistrate Jackson, for a breach of the Railway Act, by walking on the G.T.R. bridge which crosses the river to the east of town.

A railway employee who saw the accused in a helpless condition on the structure, stated that the man would in all probability have been killed had he permitted him to remain on the track, as a train was due about the time that the accused was on the bridge.

Firemen Want Increase of One Cent. Per Hour Each Day

If They Don't Get It They Say They Will Seek Employment Elsewhere —Petition Signed by 10 Men Received by Council.

An increase of one cent per hour each day in the week wouldn't make much difference in the envelopes of eight-hour union men, but to the firemen, whose working day runs twice around the clock it means a fairly considerable sum. And if this is not forthcoming, according to their petition to the Council last night, in their own words; "we will have to seek employment elsewhere." This communication was signed by ten firemen and referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee. Evidently, the flock of rumours and reports about the scarcity of men, and the four-dollar day jobs in the factories have decided the firemen that the green fields are realities and not the illusion that distance often creates.

THE 93rd BATTALION FUND COMMITTEE A SUCCESSFUL ORGANIZATION

As the 93rd Battalion Fund Committee is the committee under whose auspices the 24th of May celebration at Exhibition Park was held, also the campaign for funds through the county, and city, a few facts concerning it will be of interest to the general public; also to the army of workers who helped to make the whole work so successful.

The name "93rd Battalion Fund Committee" was decided upon unanimously at a meeting called by Mayor Duffus on Wednesday evening, May 17th. It was felt that this name would be representative of both city and country organizations, who were working towards the raising of the fund for the 93rd Battalion.

The executive of this committee is as follows:

Chairman of Canvassing Committee Secretary—City Clerk Armstrong.

Treasurer—Mr. P. Campbell.

Chairman of Canvassing Committee—Mr. D. O'Connell.

Finance Committee—Mayor Duffus Mr. Aylmer, Mr. Pennelather, Mrs Stevenson, Mrs. Morris.

Convenor Women's Organizations—Mrs. Stevenson.

Many sub-committees carried out the detail work of the arrangements at Exhibition Park.

A statement covering the work of the Women's organizations, will be given later.

FAREWELL AT THE S.A. TEMPLE TO 93RD MEMBERS

A very pleasant evening was spent at the S.A. Temple last evening when a fond good-bye was taken to the members of the Band and boys who attended the Army meetings.

A splendid tea was provided after which the Bandmaster, Deputy Bandmaster, Band Sergeant, and Bro. James Richardson spoke to the boys who were going. Fred Walno and Will Badley spoke for the departing men. Adjt. McElhenny wound up with a bit of advice, giving some news from some of the boys who have gone.

A word of thanks to the ladies who served, wound up a very pleasant evening.

DECLARES THAT WAITE IS SANE

NEW YORK, May 27.—Dr. Arthur Warren Waite is sane now and was sane at the time he poisoned his millionaire father-in-law, John E Peck of Grand Rapids. Dr. Smith J. Jelliff, Alienist for the State, declared on the witness stand to-day.

Dr. Jelliff said he reached this conclusion after talking with the arch prisoner and examining him as to his mental soundness.

VICTORIA DAY IN CHINA

Canadians, because they have loyalty in their hearts, carry it with them when they go abroad, even to the other side of the world, to far Cathay. A "Peterborough girl," wife of Rev. Prof. H. D. Robertson, this year observed Victoria Day in a patriotically exemplary manner—in a way that warrants the following cablegram, received by Mrs. (Dr.) J. B. Hunter, Gilmour street, this morning.

BORN

ROBERTSON.—At Cheng-tu, West China, on Victoria Day, May 24th, 1916, to Rev. Professor and Mrs H. D. Robertson, a son. All well.

New $100,000 Factory For Bonner-Worth

Some of the stockholders favoured the other city for various reasons. Mr. Edgar Worth was seen for the Manufacturers' Committee, and the proposition was made to him that if the new factory were located in Peterborough the city would give the same encouragement as it had given to other factories, that is, a free site and a fixed assessment for ten years. This proposition was considered at a meeting of those interested in the new factory at Toronto, and it was decided to locate it here on the terms proposed, and at the same time it was decided that, as the factory was to be established here and beside the present factory, it would not be necessary to form a new company, but that the present organization should be enlarged and both industries carried on by the Bonner-Worth Co.

To Move Cambridge Street.

This By-law is to authorize the submission of this proposition to the electors. The land which the city is to provide for the site includes that part of Cambridge street between McDonnel street and an unopened street registered as Cordach avenue, and Cambridge street, besides the owners of the site of the new factory. The cost of the land for the site and for the new location of Cambridge street is $3,100.00, and we have added $900.00 for the cost of the submission of the By-law and other expenses. The only ratepayer particularly interested in Cambridge strete, besides the owners of the land to be purchased, is Mr. G. Walter Green, who owns the land to the north, and Mr. Green has been consulted and will not raise any objection to the street being moved. The company agrees to erect for the new factory a building at least 70 x 100 feet, two stories high, or its equivalent, and to employ at least 30 operatives for ten years. While the minimum number of operatives is placed at 30, the same number as the company agreed to employ in its present factory, we know how far the company has exceeded that number in the present, and with their knowledge of the market for the new product, and of the facilities they will instal for manufacturing, they anticipate that the new industry will be as successful and develop with the same rapidity.

This proposition is on the lines of policy upon which the Council and electors have acted in the past, and is a good one for the city, as it will add another good industry to the long list of those already established here, and one that will be under the same capable management that has already proved so successful.

Girl A Nervous Wreck At Eleven Years of Age

Was Tired Out, Pale and Sallow—Would Tremble Till the Bed Would Shake—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured Her

In the school of to-day there is found an alarming proportion of weak, nervous children who have little chance of developing into healthy, useful men and women Nature requires the assistance of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help them over a trying period and set them on their feet.

There would be fewer wearing glasses if the nerves were invigorated less irritation in the school and home, more robust health and a greater pleasure in the school tasks.

This letter bears a cheering message to parents whose children are weak, puny, and nervous. It shows you what may be expected from the use of this great restorative.

Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes:

"My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy, and her complexion grew pale, and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and had somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes improvement was noticeable, and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether, and they cured her. She got fat and rosy, and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50 all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

IF YOU WANT

PURE, SAFE MILK

It must be Scientifically Clarified and Pasteurized, otherwise Raw Milk can never be considered Safe.

CLARIFICATION contributes to the cleanliness of all milk, by removing all impurities.

PASTEURIZATION is positively necessary for all milk for the removal of diseased germs. It is the only guarantee of Purity.

MILK as it comes from all cows is not Pure. Did you ever get a microscopic view of the sediment removed from milk by a clarifier? Didn't it open your eyes?

IT IS STATED that probably 40 per cent. of the dairy cows of Ontario are suffering from tuberculosis.

THAT IS WHY the danger to health from raw milk is greater, in many respects, than the danger from so-called pure water.

THAT IS WHY the Peterborough Creamery clarifies and pasteurizes all the milk sold to its patrons in sterilized bottles.

ALD. M'INTYRE WILL DO A LITTLE BURNS WORK IN HIS DEPT.

Ald. Stratton Wanted Coal Contracts Equally Apportioned to Three Dealers

The recently reported amendments to the Health by-law went into force last night when the Council passed them. They constitute something of a bequest from Mr. C. A. G. Spence, before the severance of his connection with the city as Sanitary Inspector.

The Property Committee's division of the city's contract for coal drew a query from Ald. Stratton as to why an equal allotment had not been made. The Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co. provide 75 tons, E Hicks Co., 53 tons, and A. Low & Co., 25 tons. If the coal supplied was of the same quality, Ald. Stratton said this did not appear to be a fair division of the contract. City Clerk Armstrong gave the information that the contract called for the best anthracite coal.

Ald. Stratton moved that the 130 tons be purchased in equal quantities from the three dealers, but there was no seconder and the Committee's report was adopted.

BY-LAWS DELAYED.

The belated by-laws providing for the sale of debentures to cover work done last year drew Mayor Duffus' opinion that the city had paid too large an interest account as the result of this delay. One by-law authorised the borrowing of $12,907.51 for sewers constructed last year, the other was for $11,810. covering other permanent work.

Ald. McIntyre wanted to know who was to blame for the delay.

Ald. Stratton laid it at the door of the Board of Works department. "They delayed bringing in the figures and the by-laws were held up The Chairman of the Board of Works should investigate his own department if he wants to find out who is responsible."

Ald. McIntyre wasn't satisfied. This had to do with last year's means

Ald. Edgar banteringly remarked that he should have cleaned off the accretions from last year's Board, and started the new year with a blank slate.

Ald. McIntyre retorted that the Chairman of the Finance Committee could not entirely escape. "I'll see who is to blame before I am satisfied," he added as a parting shot.

Patriotic Booth for 12th of July.

Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, on behalf of the 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, applied for permission to open a refreshment booth in Central Park on July 12, the proceeds to be used for patriotic purposes.

Referred to Property Committee.

Photograph of Battalion.

Capt. J. H. Burnham wrote that he had asked Mr. F. L. Roy to forward a photograph of the 93rd Battalion to the Council.

Ald. Duncan enquired about acknowledging this gift, and Mayor Duffus suggested that the Council would do so when it was received.

Want Louis Street Paved.

Council's Sympathy Recognized.

A letter was received from Mrs. J. R. Stratton, conveying her appreciation of the Council's expressions of sympathy in her recent bereavement, and of their memorial tributes to her late husband, the Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Ask Refund of Taxes.

The Campbell Milling Co. requested a refund of $376.36 of their 1915 taxes, it being an excess of their taxes under their $15,000 fixed assessment.

An Account for $36.00.

An account for $36.00 in favour of Dr. Amys, presented by Wood & Wearing, was referred to the Property Committee.

A Suit for Damages.

Mrs. John Trombly has issued a writ through John R. Corkery for damages in connection with an accident she sustained on Simcoe Street last winter.

City Has Copy of Judgment Anyway.

A copy of the judgment supporting the award of the Board of Arbitration for $154,000 to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. was transferred to the committee of the whole.

Directory of Manufacturers.

A circular requesting the city to take advertising space in a new directory of Canadian manufacturers was sent to the Manufacturers Committee.

A Tarvia Letter.

A communication from the Patterson Co., Ltd., setting forth the qualities of their tarvia product for road improvement, was put on the Boards of Works' file.

Health Officers' Convention.

A letter from Dr. McCullough, of Toronto, announcing the annual convention of Health Officers on May 30 and 31 in Toronto was received.

MISSION BAND CONCERT A SUCCESS

Enjoyable Entertainment at St. Luke's Last Evening

The Mission Band of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, achieved a notable success last evening in their annual entertainment in the shoolhouse. A large number of the parents and friends of the children was present, and judging from the applause, they thoroughly enjoyed the programme. The choir was occupied by the rector, Rev. W. H. White. An interesting feature of the proceedings was the presentation by Mrs. Harry Butcher, President of the Women's Auxiliary of certificates to Misses Florence and Bessie Adams for good attendance. Miss Florence Adams also received a pin, having attended every meeting during the past three years. Miss Bessie Adams attended every meeting during the past year. Mrs. Butcher also read the report of the annual meeting of the Diocesan Junior Auxiliary. The programme was as follows:

Piano solo—Wilhelmina Gaskins.
Song, 'Johnnie Schmoker' — The boys.
Piano solo—Miss M. Green.
Recitation, 'The British Flag' — Florence Adams, Edna Pammett, Bessie Adams, Emily Adamson.
Song, 'Along the Rocky Road to Dublin'—Verna Parker.
Recitation, "There Ain't"—Charlie Doupe.
Song, 'Grown Up Land'—The girls.
Piano solo—Margaret Turner.
Song, 'Three Maids of Lee'—Florence Adams, Florrie Green and Ernie Leon.
Piano solo—Amy Lawrence.
Song, 'Rufus Rastus'—The boys.
Presentation of certificates— Mrs H. Butcher.
Lantern slides—Gurth Pretty.

Miss Ada Morris acted as accompanist throughout the evening, and the rector at the conclusion thanked Miss Norris, also Mr. and Mrs. Knott, for their assistance in the success of the affair.

A "Word From a Methodist" in Re Church Theology

A statement in a letter printed yesterday—"a word to Methodists"—over the signature "R.V.B." referring to the "second coming," draws dissent from Rev. R. G. Peever. In regard to the statement to the effect that Methodists are not teaching Methodist theology, Mr. Peever says that "the standard of Methodist theology, as found in the fifty-two sermons of Rev John Wesley, and his notes on the New Testament, which are the basis of Methodist theology the world over, do not bear out the statement of R. V.B.—that Methodist theology supports the view that Jesus Christ will come and reign a thousand years upon the earth. "We prefer," adds Mr. Peever, "to take the teaching of J. Ager Beet and Dr. Pope, with other great Presbyterian divines, as being better exponents of correct exegesis, than even Dr. Torrie, and Dr. Chapman, who are good men in their special sphere of evangelism, but are not regarded as leaders in the exegesis of the Scriptures."

St. Andrew's Patriotic Association Had A Very Busy Year

St. Andrews Church Patriotic League beg to submit their first annual report. The league met regularly every Wednesday up to December, when they closed for two weeks during the Christmas holidays. The executive thought it wise to change the day of meeting from Wednesday to Friday. Meeting Friday did not prove satisfactory. It was again changed to Tuesday. They have met regularly every Tuesday since the change was made in February, with an average attendance of thirty-five ladies.

The league lost one of its best and most faithful workers through the removal of Mrs. Wilgar and her family from Peterborough. The league received its first financial start from the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's church, for which the league is very grateful. Donations of money and material have been gratefully received from many members of our congregation. The league also wishes to thank all the ladies who have assisted with the sale of flag pins which was such a huge success last September. And to Capt. Harris for the free use of his boat to run an excursion down the river, which was much enjoyed by all present and a handsome sum of money realized. The league is also very grateful to Dr. F. L. Robinson for his kindness in donating one afternoon's proceeds from the sale of tickets from the Empire theatre, it being a very generous donation. They also extend their thanks to the choir to the Cheese Board, and to the young people of our church for the donation of money we received from them.

A great deal of thanks and appreciation is due Mrs. Edmison from the members of the league in the way she looked after the social part of the weekly meetings in seeing that we were provided with dainty refreshments. This made the work a pleasure when the members were very tired; also for taking up the collections which amounted to a goodly sum during the year. The League shipped regularly every month through Red Cross Society, hospital supplies and other comforts for our soldiers at the front 35 boxes of Christmas cheer were sent to England to be forwarded to the young men of our church who are fighting for us at the front. Also a gold military watch to Capt. Rollins, the pastor. During the year the league have forwarded the following articles through the local branch of the Red Cross Society and through the head office at Toronto: Sponges, compresses, surgical dressings, slings, bandages, tape, sponges, abdominal binders, many-tailed bandages, mouth wipes, handkerchiefs, rest cushions, cushion covers, wash cloths, individual bags, hot water bottle covers, kit bags, operating socks, bed socks, knee caps, wristlets, pneumonia jackets, bed jackets, pyjamas, suits, nega' shirts, day shirts, hospital slippers, dressing gowns, pillows, pillow covers, sheets, blankets, towels, amounting to 44,737 articles. Besides 311 pairs of knitted socks sent to be distributed to the men in the trenches and 38 pairs presented to the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

The league also sent steamer rug, bed comforters, safety razors, dark glasses, 18 lbs. of home made candy, 144 bars of chocolates.

The officers of the league desire to thank all those who have been of assistance during the year, not forgetting the Press, who have always been courteous and kind and helped us in every way they could. Also to Mr. Robert Fair & Co. and to Mr. J. J. Cocks, for their kindness for donating packing boxes, and to Mr. Dunford for the many times we had the free use of his express for carting purposes during the year. We would like each member to put forth a special effort and not lose interest or discontinue her help during the summer months.

The old officers were all re-elected:
President—Mrs. A. R. Moore.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. H. Waddell.
Secretary—Mrs. J. John.
Treasurer—Mrs. T. Sills.
Convenor of supplies and shipping—Mrs. C. H. McFarline.
Executive—Mrs. McNabb, Mrs. Edmison, Mrs. Chisholm, Mrs. J. J. Cocks, Mrs. Latimer, Mrs. Kerr, Mrs. C. H. MacLelland, Mrs. G. A. Gillespie.

To the Officers and Members of St. Andrew's Patriotic League:

In presenting this statement for the year ending May 18, 1916, I wish on behalf of the society to extend thanks to all who have so generously contributed to our funds, mentioning especially the Cheese Board, and to Captain Harris which was entirely outside our own congregation. I think we have no reason to regret our year's work from a financial standpoint alone. The money has been raised with few exceptions among the people of St. Andrew's church. Having done so well for one year, may we not do even better for a second year? I would like to suggest that each member contribute a certain sum, however small, regularly each month and no doubt we would be surprised at the aggregate amount at the end of the year.

Let us not lose our interest or our energy during the holidays, but remember that those we work for suffer just as intensely in the hot weather, and hospital supplies are more urgent when bad weather does not hinder fighting.

I wish to thank the officers and members who have helped me with the duties of my office.

Faithfully submitted,
EDNA B. SILLS,
Treasurer.

LITTLE THINGS COUNT

Even in a Match you should consider the "Little Things." The wood, the composition, the strikeability, the flame.

Eddy's Matches

Are made of strong dry pine stems, with a secret perfected composition that guarantees "every match a lighter." Sixty-five years of knowing how—that's the reason. All EDDY products are dependable—always.

Said the Critic,——

"Give us TRACTION,——without Friction!"

MAKING the "Silvertown" Cord Tire, taught us a few lessons in the manufacture of lighter, cooler, more flexible and enduring FABRIC Tires.

The "Silvertown" Tire, you know, gains its marvellous Speed (and the Coasting qualities that demonstrate its Speed) primarily through having only TWO layers of Cords, laid transversely.

Of course, these TWO layers bend more readily than Five, Six, or Seven Layers of Fabric do (or of Cord would).

But, we found it necessary, in order to conserve that flexibility (in the Two-cord construction), to put a Rubber Tread over it which was equally flexible,—equally strong,—and elastic enough to act as a sort of spring between the Earth and the Tire-casing, when Brakes were thrown on at stopping, or clutch thrown in at starting.

So, we had to devise practically a new kind of Rubber, for this purpose, TWO YEARS AGO.

And this new kind of Rubber Compound now does for GOODRICH Tires a work paralleling that done by the wonderful Alloys of Steel and Bronze in modern Motor Car construction.

It multiplies Rubber Efficiency, for Tire purposes, while decreasing its Weight, and without increasing its Bulk, or its Cost to you.

• • •

AS we cannot yet supply half the demand for "Silvertown Cord Tires" (until enough manufacturing equipment can be constructed) we compromise with the Public by giving them, without additional charge, the highly efficient black Silvertown Rubber in all Goodrich FABRIC Tires for 1916.

This makes GOODRICH Fabric Tires the most Resilient and Responsive-to-Power,—the most Long-Lived and Lively, of all FABRIC Tires, at ANY price,—without increasing their relative price to you.

We call this new Silvertown Tread Compound by the name and brand of "Barefoot Rubber."

Because, it CLINGS to the pavement for the same sort of reason that your bare foot clings to a slippery floor, while being flexible, stretchy, springy, and light.

TENACIOUS, resilient, enduring, this "Barefoot Rubber" you today get in all black-tread Goodrich Fabric Tires,—Silvertown Cord Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Motor-Cycle Tires,—Truck Tires,—Bicycle Tires,—Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, and in none but GOODRICH products.

Get a sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Dealer. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

of Shandy Skeffington. The government will sift the facts and fix the responsibility for those.

Among the Slain.

Not for the first time in history, literature and revolution have come together and assisted each other. The irony of such a combination is increased by the fact that no person could shrink more from the sanguinary consequences of their preaching than the mild and innocent men of letters, to whom the Irish revolt owed its birth. Among the slain are poets, journalists, professors, dreamers of false and impossible dreams. But the sordid and cool gentlemen who directed all these insane though not ingenerous visionaries, still live and pursue their business in the happy security of an American home.

To understand that movement one must go back to that curious and fascinating opening of a new epoch in the English language, in old Irish literature and in the general cultivation of the essentially Irish spirit. There was no body of men for whom these intellectuals had greater contempt than the politicians, and yet it is the fact that it was the work of the politicians that made their movement possible. It was not until the politicians had dragged Ireland out of the Slough of Despond of rack renting, of eviction and of landlord omnipotence, that there was any public in Ireland to whom an intellectual appeal could be made.

All these recent movements, including the last and most disastrous, were in reality the signs and portents of the coming of the day when Ireland, with an Irish parliament, could have the free movement of a nation developing along its own lines. The Gaelic League was to a certain extent the forerunner of the new Irish developments. There the cult of the ancient Irish language was carried to a fanaticism, sincere in some, sordid in others. This organization pleaded that Irish should be made compulsory in the new Irish University, an impossible proposition in a country where nine-tenths even of educated people did not know a word of the ancient tongue. But this League did act as a pioneer in the movement to restore the National consciousness of Ireland, and in that way was the father or step-father of that gospel of Sinn Feinism which has had such tragic results. The Irish Literary Theatre—though its chiefs are more remote in sympathy from the later developments of Sinn Feinism, was also part of that new force making for a self conscious and self-sustained Ireland.

NEW CURRENTS.

Throughout all Ireland one became aware for the last few years that it was a country vibrating with new currents of thought and activity. I dined one day with a popular official in Dublin some years ago. Never did I pass through a night more curious and more illuminating. There was not a single person at the table who did not reveal himself or herself as the moving force in some new movement. One man was engaged in carrying out the new Plantation of Ireland—that is to say, the transfer of the soil of Ireland from the landlord of alien birth to the people of native birth. Another was the chief administrator of those Laborers' Acts which have replaced nearly all Ireland with neat slated cottages and a small plot of land for the hideous cabins in which the laborers used to live. Lady Gregory was of the company; everybody knows the great work that she has done in the Irish Theatre. A lady sat beside me—a Protestant of the Protestants, sister of some high official in Trinity College—who was engaged in trying to establish a stained glass factory in Ireland, so that the Irish church and chapel need not go to Bavaria for the stained glass windows of their place of worship. If I mistake not the Countess Markiewicz, who has played so large a part in the recent events in Dublin, was also of the company, and her husband, though all I can recall of them is that they both seemed to be very quiet people, suggesting the visionariness of the artist rather than that of the revolutionary. I commented on the curious sense of intense movement which this dinner party gave me, in talking with Lady Gregory. There is so much going on in Ireland, she replied, that it is not safe to be out of the country for three weeks.

To reach the other conditions which produced the Dublin rebellion you must grasp the fact that there has grown up since the death of Parnell, another generation who did not know him, who did not know the Ireland which he and his successors have taken out of the land of bondage. To youth the methods of the politicians seemed slow. They knew nothing of all the pioneer work that had gone to the original construction of the line. The young men were many of them gifted with poetic vision, finding expression in impossible visions, and they were the prophets of the new movement.

AN ALLIANCE.

At the same time there were sordid and fanatical men, mainly on the other side of the Atlantic, who had never abandoned the old revolutionary organization now known as the Clan na Gael. That organization has not been powerful, so far as my information goes, in the United States for a long time, so far as numbers or revenues were concerned. But it was powerful in its secrecy, in the number of men it was able to place in important positions, and in its well organised and disciplined efforts. Many of these men started an alliance with the German element of the United States.

To this soil prepared for some new movement, came two unexpected allies. The first of course was the Orange movement in Ulster. I have already described how that movement brought back to Ireland the faith in a resort to force. The acts which had lasted almost since the Union in Ireland against the bearing of arms, had to be repealed for the sake of decency in view of the wholesale and open arming of the Orangemen; and thus it became possible for the agents of the American revolutionaries to send arms into Ireland. There were plenty of people who were ready to greet these arms; for the Larkinite movement had produced great unrest and a strong inclination to the use of violence. This was followed by the disastrous weakness of the British Ministry in dealing with the question of Home Rule, and above all in the long hesitation and delay in putting the Home Rule bill on the statute book.

Finally there came the war, perhaps the most valuable of all the allies of the revolutionaries. For in the war, the carrying out of the Home Rule act became impossible. The Irish party were compelled into an attitude of marking time; and a political party in Ireland which can only mark time is in a perilous position. And then when Ireland had to decide between Germany and her enemies, there was sufficient prejudice against the secularisation policy of the French republic to divide the people.

A CURIOUS PHENOMENA.

We also had the curious phenomena in the Irish press as in the English. As the Daily Mail has made a steady campaign against the Ministry in England so the Daily Independent had made a virulent campaign against the Irish party in Ireland. It could never be right. Day after day there was insinuation or open attack or superior criticism, until a large number of people began to believe that the usefulness of the Irish party had gone. As a matter of sober and frigid fact, the Irish party as most sane people now realize, was the one bulwark between Ireland and anarchy; but faction does not regard these things, and the campaign went on.

Then there began to pour into Ireland the German money; and agents were sent all over the country, arms were procured, and doubtless broad hints were given that at the right moment the German army descending upon Ireland, would help an Irish insurrection to success. The War Office and the Admiralty in Berlin must have known, however, that such a campaign was impossible in view of the strength and the vigilance of the British fleet. But German politicians are not averse probably to risking the lives of a good many Irishmen providing they would help her purpose of embarrassing the enemy who is the chief instrument in her slow strangulation by the blockade. Anyhow the German money was there if the German army wasn't. And so the movement gained strength.

But the lunatics in Dublin, living in their world of visions, when they started, were convinced that there would be a German army coming to their assistance, that the country was ready in some parts for insurrection, and that these forces combined would be able to defeat a country which had such heavy military responsibilities as England. All these hopes were falsified. The German army did not arrive; the rifles Sir Roger Casement was supposed to bring, are at the bottom of the sea, and the overwhelming majority of the Irish people outside certain spots refused to move, and sometimes even sent the National Volunteers to be ready for opposing the rebel forces. Hence the collapse of the movement.

POWERFUL PLEA FOR GOOD ROADS IN BOTH CITY AND VICINITY

How a Thinking and Public-Spirited Citizen Regards Prevailing Conditions of Ineffectiveness and Indifference

The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The very wet and unseasonable spring of 1916 accentuated the poor construction and care given to our roads generally, and in Peterborough vicinity and city particularly. There is scarcely a road leading out of, or into Peterborough, that is safe to drive on with a car, or pleasant in any respect in any other sort of vehicle.

The roads of a province are one of its chief assets. We have, close to Peterborough, one of the most beautiful drives in the world,—the river drive to Lakefield, and not far behind it comes the upper road in return. There are cities in the Dominion that would be willing to give one hundred thousand dollars for the natural park which this drive and scenery affords us, and there isn't any question but what they would take care of it properly if they had it. The river roads are in a miserable condition.

Good roads cannot be constructed by merely scraping up sod or soft stuff and throwing it on to the crown to cover up what previously had been ruts and holes, for the ruts and holes are still there and will assert themselves in short order and at the first opportunity.

There is enough money spent and lost on these foolish mud roads in Peterborough city and county to provide real stone ballasted drives that would last for years and years, and afford the farmers who have to draw heavy loads to market cheap transportation as well as safety, as well as affording the man who has to put a car over the roads, either for business or pleasure, a reasonable facility for doing so.

Business will be largely conducted from now on by way of motor cars, in rural districts particularly, and it does seem that regardless of the fact that we have terrific war burdens that this subject of decent roads in the city, as well as out of the city, should be taken up promptly and all construction made on the permanent basis.

"Good-Roads" Gillespie (that's what the "G" is for, as well as himself) advises that the Government of Ontario will pay forty per cent. of the cost of construction of all permanent roads. Every township and county in the province ought to take advantage of this opportunity, and do it now.

Quite likely a number of the concrete manufacturers, macadam constructors and others engaged in road making, can be induced to put down, say a mile here and there of their various roads as a test and an advertisement, and accept therefor the Government's forty per cent., demonstrating which of the permanent road-building materials are really the most desirable.

Again, a period of one day, or two or three days, might be set apart as a "Good-Roads Construction Period," and everybody, city and country, turn out and contribute their time, their teams or their money, as they might prefer, for the purpose of cleaning up and making safe and solid the roadways of this county.

These things have been done elsewhere, and it has paid heavily for all concerned.

We have the assurance that we may count on "Good-Roads" Gillespie to the limit in doing everything that is possible, or necessary, in connection with his Parliamentary work to bring about this desirable result, and make our common arteries of traffic as pleasant to look upon and pass over, as are our seventy-five miles of concrete sidewalks.

Peterborough has an Ontario Motor League membership of close to one hundred persons, and this will count for results if we go after good roads.

Let's have at least good roads on both sides of the river between here and Lakefield as a starter. Don't spend another cent on slush and mud, but let there be plenty of dollars and effort for permanent roadways.

Yours truly,

Peterborough, May 26th. "Bon Chemin."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

The World's Biggest Goal Tender Has Passed Away

William Foulke, perhaps the biggest man who ever played football, is dead. He passed away recently in a nursing home at Sheffield. For eight seasons he guarded the Sheffield United goal, and was regarded as one of the most brilliant custodians in the Old Country. Standing 6 f. 2 in. and weighing, when fit, 270 lbs., he was wonderfully agile and a magnificent custodian, his ponderous punches being well-remembered. He kept goal for the United through all their great Cup and League campaigns 18 years ago, and had much to do with their success. He played for England against Wales in 1897. Foulke, who was obtained by United from Bakewell, a Derbyshire colliery club, for £19, also represented Derbyshire at cricket. He was born at Wellington, Salop, in 1875. During the later years of his career Foulke kept goal for Chelsea. He had the unique record of being the only goalkeeper to score a goal. This he did with a huge kick taken from his own area.

GEORGE ST. TENNIS CLUB'S ANNUAL TEA

The Executive of the George Street Tennis Club met the other evening and selected Tuesday, June 6th, as the date for their annual social tea together at Nicholls Oval. Members and friends of the club kindly make a note to keep this date open. The membership of George Street Club promises to exceed that of any past season, and a particularly interesting evening is anticipated.

A resolution was passed at the Executive meeting favouring the entrance of a team from the club for the tournaments to be conducted by the P.L.T.A. In addition, several smaller tournaments will be arranged among the players of the club. The courts at the Oval are now in good condition. Minimum Wage of 22½c an Hour For Street Sweepers and 25c For Sewer Workers Adopted by the Council

The Council adopted the principle of a minimum wage for civic labourers at last night's meeting, when they decided that street cleaners should receive 22 1-2 cents an hour and sewer excavators 25 cents an hour. This was passed in a motion by Ald. Edgar, seconded by Ald Duncan.

Ald. Langford, Weir and Evans opposed the proposal to specify the wage, preferring that the City Engineer and Street Commissioner should have a free hand in that matter. Ald. Langford felt that there might be some labourers who could not earn this minimum wage on account of physical disability or other cause.

This question of wages arose out of the Board of Works recommendation that the wages of all labouring men employed by the city be increased five cents per hour from their present rate of wages. Ald. Dobbin took a fling at the Council's increasing of salaries when only a short time ago they were cutting right and left.

Ald. McIntyre—"I never blocked the firemen and I always consider the working man."

First declaring that sewer and sidewalk work was not needed this year and that the city could do without them for a year, Ald. Langford said the Council did not have to make a hard and fast rule regarding civic wages. Mr. Parsons and Mr Evans were capable of dealing with the labour situation and of paying men what they were worth. The conditions of supply and demand governed the labour market anyway and would control prices.

Ald. Edgar: The city should specify latitude of the wages to be paid A minimum wage of 25 cents to all labourers might be set. The city should not be behind others in this

Ald. Evans—"Men on the sewers are now getting more than 25c."

Ald. Dobbin—"And earning it."

Ald. Evans—"Yes."

Mayor Duffus said that the pipelayers, the men in the water, and foremen were getting more than 25 cents.

Ald. Duncan remarked that elections were far distant and the Council could talk of the labouring man without arousing suspicions of ulterior motives. A man can't live on $1.90 a day and bring up a family. The cost of living has advanced to a point where wages had to be increased. If a man is getting 22 1-2 cents an hour on sewer work that's not enough. They should all get at least 25 cents and the street sweepers should get at least 22 1-2 cents, and so on. This would be an advance of 2 1-2 per cent. above the present wages to these labourers.

Ald. Duncan confessed that the lingering taste of the previous salary cutting was not a pleasant one. He was sorry a different method had not been adopted.

After a further cursory discussion Ald. Edgar's motion was passed.

PROMOTION FOR MR. T. G. RANTON

At the annual meeting of the American Institute of Steam Boiler Inspectors held in Boston, April 10th, Thomas G. Ranton of West Somerville, senior inspector of boilers for the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, was chosen president for the coming year.

The friends of Mr. T. G. Ranton, both here and in Boston, are glad to see his merit and ability recognized by his fellow-members of the institute and Steam Boiler Inspectors, in placing him in the position of President of such an influential and honourable body.

TUNGSTEN LAMPS TO REPLACE ARCS ON PARK AND SHERBROOKE STS.

One application for street lamps usually begets a whole flock of them. The Fire, Water and Light committee last night recommended to the Council a light where the street cars stop on Water street between Hilliard and Argyle streets, and one on Elm street east of the Monaghan road. This modest proposal was quickly multiplied. Ald. Edgar said that last year provision was made to substitute tungsten lamps for an arc on Sherbrooke street between Park street and Rutherford avenue. Mayor Duffus replied that they would have been provided but for the fact that they add to the electric peak load between 4 and 6 p.m. whereas the arcs do not present this difficulty to the same degree. They can be turned on at any time.

Ald. Edgar concluded that Sherbrooke street should get the facilities accorded to other streets. He asked for five or six tungstens to replace the arc now situated on Sherbrooke street near the end of Rutherford avenue. He and Ald. Saunders combined in urging a similar substitution on Parnell street for the arc at the corner of Park and Parnell.

Ald. Evans asked for a new tungsten globe at the west end of Wellington street. Boys have made a practice of breaking these lamps, thereby providing a degree of darkness that invited spooning soldiers and their sweethearts who found a congenial resting place on the low stone fence along Monaghan road south of Wellington street.

These extra lamps were included in the committees report and Ald. Weir added one for Rogers street north of Douro street.

J. Gates Offered to Accept Mr. Spence's Position for $650

The Council was informed last night that Mr. F. W. Miller had withdrawn his agreement tentatively given to the Property committee to undertake the Sanitary Inspectorship.

Mr. Spence's resignation was duly received last night, with the following applications for the position.

Albert E. Juby, 248 Charlotte street
Jas. Gates, Sr.
Geo. Metcalf, 278 Dublin street.
R. Howden.
A. Holt.
F. Russell.

Mr. Gates told the Council he felt capable to fulfil the duties Mr. Spence is passing up and moreover would be satisfied with a salary of $650.

The Council decided to advertise immediately for applications to be forwarded by Monday next at 4 p.m. stating salaries and references. Mr. Spence retires on Wednesday, May 31st.

The 57th Band Had 26 Players at Snappy Practice Last Night

The 57th Battalion Band still lives. Like the brook, it goes on forever, though men may come and men may go. And during the past year they've been mostly going; in fact to such opinion that the Band had gone. However, a few of the old guard remains and some of the older guard, the landstrums, have been called out and have responded to the call. The Band had a snappy practice last night. New uniforms are on the way, music is assured for Victoria Park, and any other engagements for future recruiting or otherwise will doubtless be filled in a satisfactory manner.

Free Gasoline for Thirty-three Hundred Miles—the Ford Owner's Saving in One Year.

The light, economical Ford with its smooth running engine averages about twenty-five miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Compare this with the gasoline consumption of the Sixteen-Mile-to-the-Gallon car.

Then figure the difference, having an eye on the present price of gasoline.

Six thousand miles is a fair season's travel. The Sixteen-Miles-To-The-Gallon car, going six thousand miles, burns up one hundred and thirty-five more gallons than does the Ford going the same distance.

This means that the Ford owner saves enough during a single season to pay for his gasoline for an additional thirty-three hundred and seventy-five miles.

You can travel a year and a half in a Ford for what it costs you to travel one year in the Sixteen-Miles-To-The-Gallon car.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is lack of oxygen-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the mal-assimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. To do this, go to any good druggist and get oil of orilene, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orilene in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe.—F. J. T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Nicholas Doidge.

The death of Christian Oke, relict of the late Nicholas Doidge of Alnwick, occurred at the Cobourg Hospital for the Insane, on Friday morning last. Her remains, after preparation for burial, were taken to to home of her niece, Mrs. (Capt.) Hugh McCullough, where they remained until Sunday morning at 10.30 when they were taken by the undertaker, Mr. McArthur to the Centenary church, Alnwick, where a large concourse of her old friends, neighbors and relatives met at 4.30 and an impressive service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Washington of Roseneath, was held after which the remains were interred beside that of her late husband, who had predeceased her twenty-three years since. She was born in Cramahe Township, 75 years ago and was the second wife of the late Nicholas Doidge, uncle of Mrs. Hugh McCullough, whom she married in 1867. Two step-daughters, Mrs. John B. Sherwin, of Edmonton, Alberta, and Mrs. William Taylor of Roseneath; several step-grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Singleton of Peterborough, survive her.

She was a first cousin to the Rev. Samuel and William Tucker of Toronto, and also of the Tuckers of Alnwick.—Cobourg World.

MRS. HENRY OWENS.

The death occurred at Nicholls Hospital this morning of Mrs. Henry Owens, of this city, following a lengthy illness. The deceased, who was seventy years of age, was a lifelong resident of Peterborough, having been born here. Her maiden name was Sarah Kingdon. She was well known and highly respected, as a woman of many sterling qualities. Her husband predeceased her some years ago.

One brother, Mr. Geo. Kingdon, of this city, and three sisters, Mrs. Wm. Argue, Cobourg; Mrs. John Madden and Mrs. Wm. Hill, City, are left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her brother, 584 George Street, on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

MR. SAMUEL McKINLAY.

After a lingering illness Mr. Samuel McKinlay, 310 Margaret Avenue, passed away at 6.30 o'clock, last evening, at his residence. The deceased who was fifty-four years of age, came to Peterborough six years ago from Scotland, and was before his illness, employed for some time in the Canadian General Electric Company. He was born in Thornliebank, Scotland, and for twenty-six years was employed with the Singer Manufacturing Company.

Pte. Sam. McKinlay of the 2nd Battalion, who has been missing ever since the Battle of Ypres, was a son of the deceased. Other sons are Pte. Willie McKinlay, who left here with B squadron, 8th C.M.R., and is now at the front, Pte. Frank McKinlay of the 93rd Battalion, and Alex. Nathaniel and Murdock, all living in Peterborough. Five daughters also survive, Mrs. Thompson, King street; Mrs. Lashbrook, wife of Pte. A. Lashbrook, 93rd Battalion, Mrs. Jones, Perth, Australia, and Jennie and Mary, in Peterborough. His wife also survives him.

The deceased had made many friends since coming to Peterborough who will regret to learn of his death.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery. No flowers, by request.

Rev. J. R. Webb At Knox Church

Rev. J. R. Webb will preach at Knox Presbyterian church to-morrow evening. His subject will be "The Need of the Hour."

"Britain Prepared" Film Works On Stupendous Theme

No War in History Has So Roused Britain—Moving Pictures Show Preparations on Gigantic Scale—They Show the Grand Fleet at Work —Coming to the Grand Opera House on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of Next Week

Moving pictures have been used to portray staged representations of great historical events, enacted by dramatic artists with the aid of all the scenic accessories that money and brains could provide. A recent instance in the public mind will be quickly recalled in the case of that wonderfully successful film, "The Birth of a Nation," portraying the American civil war and the dramatic incidents in the history of the "reconstruction" of the South.

The American civil war occurred before the development of photography to anything like the stage which has become matter of course for the present generation. It took place before moving picture photographers were even thought of. Consequently, the "Birth of a Nation" had to be reproduced from memories of those who took part in the epic happenings of that great time in the history of the United States; from written history, and from such photographs as were possible to take 50 years ago and which have been preserved. A great deal had to depend upon the power of visualization possessed by the artists who produced the film.

The present war in which Europe is engaged is an infinitely greater struggle that that which threatened to tear the American republic in twain in 1865. Like the civil war the principle of liberty is at issue. In the case of the American war it was the freedom of the blacks. In this war it is the question of the freedom of the human race—not in one country, not on the one continent of Europe, but freedom throughout the world. "Britain Prepared" is a film produced on that scale.

No war was ever fought upon such proportions. No war was ever fought with more widespread consequences of victory or defeat for the one side or the other

Britain's Greatest War.

Britain, the home of personal and political liberty, has fought and struggled for her ideals for two thousand years. One by one the tyrants and the autocrats who have climbed to power in Britain succumbed to the pressure always surging forth from the people of those islands. Romans, Danes, Normans—they all gave way. The rule of kings by divine right was intolerable to Englishmen, and Charles I. was beheaded just as William II. of Germany, had he ruled in England in that period, would have been. Responsible government was established and the rule of the people by the people has reached the point when to suggest any other form of Government for the British would be considered simple madness. William of Germany is indeed regarded as mad, and his ambitions to become personal ruler of the world, that of a madman, born several centuries after his time.

Is it any wonder that the British people are aroused over the war as never before in all their history of two thousand years? These moving pictures will show you.

The wars of Napoleon one hundred years ago, when the liberty of Europe was threatened, did not compare for a moment with the magnitude of the present struggle. In Napoleon's time mere armies were engaged. To-day nations are fighting each other—actually in the trenches. Napoleon's armies were numbered in thousands. The armies engaged to-day number in millions. In the last 100 years has occurred the industrial, scientific and mechanical development the world now recognizes as the modern renaissance. The population of Europe and the world has increased at an enormously greater ratio than ever before recorded. All this weight of human material, all this power of mechanical development, has been thrown into the struggle in Europe, and chapters of history are to be written which will dwarf all the preceding events in the annals of civilization.

Moving Picture History.

Into this great situation comes the moving picture. Where before colorless official reports, meagre press despatches, and imaginative sketches of artists formed the basis history, now we have the camera the wonderful moving camera, which sees more clearly and more truthfully than the human eye, and records the vision not in fleeting, treacherous human memory, but permanently on a film for all time.

The British people were always conservative and the British Government, whatever its political name, were never quick to take up with new things. They waited for them to be "proved out." But they have taken up the moving picture camera. There could not any longer be any doubt about the utility of moving pictures. The British Government have found in modern photography an answer without words, a proved dignified irrefutable answer to the question "What is England doing in this war?" She has found a way to show the world, without vain boasting or the betrayal of knowledge of any use or comfort to the enemy, just what a mighty function Britain and the British are performing. Not for nothing has Britain maintained supreme naval force on the oceans of the world. Not for nothing has she enlisted 5,000,000 men and trained them during all these months. Not for nothing did Lloyd George mobilize the industrial organization of Great Britain and set even the girls to work making munitions. Britain is in this war to see it through, and the official moving pictures entitled "Britain Prepared" are conclusive evidence of this fact.

Coming to Peterborough

These pictures will be at the Grand Opera House, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. They are so filled with news interest and current history that one would think the British censor must have been converted to the policy of publicity. And so he has—to a certain extent, go. But, while they reveal the thoroughness and the might of the British Empire and the activity of preparation in England, care has been taken to prevent any military secret from publication. When they were shown in England they created a sensation. The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty was present at their opening presentation in the Empire Theatre, London and made a notable speech in which he referred to the pictures as "marvelous examples of the photographer's art, and big with lessons of the deepest import to us and to the world."

Lesson to the World.

"I am convinced" he continued, "that such representations as you are about to see, which I have done my individual best to further, will do much in this and in other countries to put the great operations of war that are now going on in their true perspective. In that true perspective the most important place is undoubtedly occupied and ought to be occupied by the British fleet. The world has yet to know, and it does not yet know how much it owes to the British fleet, and how the assured victory which is coming to us in a future is coming; at least as much as the gift of the British navy as it is of the splendid valor of the allied troops, whether British or foreign. That is the lesson I desire to inculcate. It is a deep and vital lesson to all who are interested in the future of mankind."

Presentation to Miss A. K. Peacock

By the Members of the Y. W. C. A. Board At the Home of Miss Morrow, Weller Street, Last Evening

The ladies of the Y.W.C.A. Board spent last evening in a particularly happy manner at the home of Miss Morrow, Weller street, Miss A. K. Peacock, the General Secretary, who is about to sever her connection with the "Y" was the guest of honour. Mesdames Buchanan, Widdess, Middleton and Porter contributed greatly to the pleasure of the occasion by their musical numbers.

Mrs. Roger read an illuminated address to Miss Peacock, supplementing it with a few well chosen remarks. To Miss Peacock, General Secretary of the Y.W.C.A.:

We the members of the Y.W.C.A. Board of Peterborough avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our appreciation of your helpfulness to us as a Board, and the stimulus you have been to the work of our local organization.

One of the outstanding characteristics of your untiring efforts in this city have been your staunch loyalty to high Christian ideals which cannot but have its effect on the girlhood amid which you have laboured. Permit us, dear Miss Peacock, with this little remembrance to couple our sincere and hearty wishes that your future may be very happy and increasingly useful.

(Signed) Martha Dickson, Pres.
F. Daisy Cruickshank, Secretary

Miss Dickson presented Miss Peacock with a case of handsome silver toilet pieces, adding a few remarks relative to the regret felt at Miss Peacock's departure.

Miss Peacock made a suitable reply, expressive of her appreciation and gratitude.

Thanks was tendered Miss Jean Neill, who so cleverly designed an executed the work on the address.

Refreshments were served by the young ladies of the Board.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Morrow for the kind hospitality of her home.

Sanitary Inspector Wanted

Applications addressed to the Chairman of the Property Committee will be received at the office of the undersigned up to 4 o'clock, p.m., on Monday, May 29th, for the position of Sanitary Inspector of the City of Peterborough. Applicants are asked to give qualifications and references and to state salary expected.

Trent Valley Canners Sued

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, May 27.—That there is a combination to increase the cost of canned goods to the consumers is charged in the defence of the Trent Valley Canners, Limited, to the action brought against them by the Canadian Canners, Ltd., for alleged breach of contract.

The Canadian Canners allege that they had a three-year contract for the entire output of the Trent Valley Canners, Ltd.

The answer of the Trent Valley Canners, Ltd., is that Davis Marshall, M.P., Hon. C. D. Smith, J. J. Nairn, Samuel Nesbitt, M.P.P., R. L. Innis, F. R. Layer, M.P., W. P. Innis, W. Lumbers, H. Bedell, Mark Smith, John Wall, T. Bell and others unknown entered into a combination in restaint of trade for the purpose of reducing the price payable to farmers and raising the selling price of canned goods to the consumers.

The Trent Valley canners say they refused to cooperate in this combine.

School Board to Equip Playground at King Edw. School

The Board of Education decided last night to provide the equipment for the King Edward School playground, to cost not more than $200. Mr. Eastwood introduced the matter stating that the Board would own this equipment which would ultimately become part of a general system of playgrounds in the city. The Playgrounds Association will have control of the grounds this summer.

88 MEMBERS IN LOCAL ASSOCIATION

The local Auto Association have had the services of Mr. R. E. Watson, the organizer for the Ontario Motor League, during the past week. They are gratified at the response made by the auto owners of the city. A membership of eighty-eight has been secured. This may be taken as an indication of renewed interest in the Good Roads movement, etc.

At an early date a meeting of the Association will be called to discuss plans for the coming summer.

MUSICAL GIFTS OF MISS AGNES LOGAN SHOWN IN TORONTO

Hector Charlesworth in Saturday Night pays the following compliment to the musically talent and skill of Miss Agnes Logan, a young pupil of Miss Killmaster, the Peterborough Conservatory of Music:

A child pianist of really exceptional powers was heard at the Nordheimer Hall one afternoon last week in the person of Miss Agnes Logan a Peterborough youngster. She is but ten years old and a pupil of Miss Jeannette Killmaster, of Toronto. From such a tot one does not expect power, but little Miss Logan astonished those who heard her by the firmness and expression of her playing, and by her clearness and finesse in rendering intricate music like the Bach "Partita". Her gift of memorization is amazing in a child, for she played ten numbers, with an encore in addition, and never made a mistake. Her delicacy and charm of phrasing were especially notable in Mendelwolfs "Moto Perpetuo" and Moskowski's "LeEtincelles". An interesting revival of a once very popular concert number was her rendering of John Field's Nocturne, "Midnight". Field, who, though an Englishman, lived largely in Russia, invented this musical form which his friend Chopin carried to much finer development. In the Nocturne played by little Miss Logan there was little of that profound pensiveness which we associate with the Polish composer, but the final imitation of midnight bells was an effective harmonic passage.

Sewage Disposal System is Condemned—Storm Sewer Outlay Excessive

LONDON, Ont., May 27.—The Provincial Board of Health has registered its annual complaint with the city in regard to London's sewage disposal. The grievance is stated this time in more severe terms than usual, and trouble is intimated to be in store for the city if it does not comply with the board's demands. Two years ago, it alleges, it asked the City Engineer for information, and that while the letter was acknowledged no effort was made to furnish the data. London in just now completing a quarter-million-dollar storm-sewer system, and this comes in for the Provincial Board's criticism. The city could have remedied the rain water trouble by an expenditure of $40,000, it declares. On the other hand, its sewage-disposal system is so defective that seventy-per cent., of the whole sewage of the city is emptied into the river, polluting it

No Peace Party in Russia, Says the President of Duma

Russia Will Fight For 20 Years If Necessary To Crush the Germans

Russia Will Continue to Fight Until Germany Puts Her Cannons in a Pile and Accepts the Allies' Conditions

PETROGRAD, May 29.—Russians will fight for twenty years if necessary until Germany is forced to accept the Allies' terms of peace, Michiel Rodzianko, President of the Russian Duma, told the United Press in an exclusive interview to-day. He scoffed at the danger of a revolution in the Czar's Empire.

There is no peace party in Russia, said Rodzianko. This is a German lie. The Duma is solid on its demand that Russia continue to fight until Germany puts her cannons in a pile and accepts the Allies' conditions. The Emperor, Duma and peasants of Russia are united in this. Tell this to the people of America as emphatically as you can. Rodzianko has just arrived in Petrograd, from home provinces for the reopening of the Duma to-day.

The Duma president declared Russia was not only willing but prepared to carry the war to a victorious end.

Russia is ready to support her share of the burden much better than at the start, he said. The army has almost double the spirit it possessed early in the war. It is better equipped, better supplied with munitions, and better fed than a year ago. The fortunes of war vary, but whatever happens Russia will fight until Germany is beaten. There is no danger of an internal revolution. You can tell Americans that.

VIOLENT ARTILLERY ACTIONS AGAINST BRITISH POSITIONS

French Capture Trenches and Take About 50 Prisoners --Turks Retreat at the Point of the Bayonet

LONDON, May 29.—British official statement issued Saturday night says the enemy artillery is very active against our positions at Souches, Loos, St. Eloi and Ypres.

PARIS, May 29.—The French official statement issued late Saturday night says the French captured several sections of trenches southeast of Le Morte Homme, taking about fifty prisoners. We took one hundred prisoners and two machine guns in an attack on Cumieres.

PETROGRAD, May 29.—In the vicinity of Mossul, Turkish troops took the offensive, but were forced to retreat at the point of the bayonet.

LONDON, May 29.—The German statement Saturday night says a German flying squadron raided a Russian aeroplane station at Papenholm, on the Gulf of Rigo, doing considerable damage.

DUBLIN, May 29.—A proclamation issued yesterday says martial law will be continued throughout Ireland until further notice.

PARIS, May 29.—Violent artillery engagements occurred along the entire Macedonian front yesterday. Kilindir was completely destroyed by German bombardment.

French aeroplanes borbarded Bulgar camps with much damage.

PARIS, May 29.—Bulgar troops have for the first time installed themselves on Greek territory. A town on the Struma River was occupied after the Greeks were ordered to leave.

LONDON, May 29.—British steamer Hercules has been sunk.

SKIRT SLASHER IS SENT TO WORKHOUSE

If Two Years There Do Not Cure Carlo Sandor Magistrate Says He Will Send Him Back.

NEW YORK, May 27.—If two years in the Workhouse does not cure Carlo Sandor of an unexplainable disease which prompts him to cut the skirts of pretty girls, Magistrate Evins, sitting in the New Brighton Court, said he would send him back for a complete cure.

Miss Rose Fitch and Miss Edna Morrison, of West Brighton, were two of the girls who suffered damaged frocks. They said that Sandor sat between them in a Port Richmond motion picture theatre last Tuesday night and that, while the lights were out, and the film running, he employed the keen edge of a knife blade to slash their skirts.

Other girls on Staten Island had complained to the police that their skirts had been cut in a similar manner, but they had not seen who did it. The police had been watching for the fellow and were glad when Miss Morrison and Miss Fitch seized Sandor and held him until a policeman arrived. Sandor denied he had been cutting skirts, but Magistrate Evans decided he was guilty and sentenced him to the Workhouse for two years. Sandor is twenty-four years old and lives at No. 24 Jefferson Ave., Graniteville.

Serbian Army of 100,000 Men Land at Salonika To Assist Allies

ST. PAUL, May 29.—J. J. Hill, railway magnate, is dying.

LONDON, May 29.—Serbian army of a hundred thousand men were landed at Salonika to assist the Allies there.

PARIS, May 29.—The French continue to recover ground near Verdun.

BERLIN, May 29.—Austrians bombard the Island of Elba in the Mediterranean.

ROME, May 29.—Austrians have stopped their attempts to further invade Italy.

LONDON, May 29.—Bulgarians have seized several more Greek forts, and are expected to meet the Allies in a decisive battle shortly.

PARIS, May 29.—Yesterday afternoon's official statement reports the capture by the French of the portions of three craters formed by an explosion of German mines in the Argonne.

Lively artillery duels continue in the vicinity of Dead Man's Hill.

ROME, May 29.—Enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs on the Grado Lagoon without doing any damage. One of our squadrons bombarded the enmey stores depots in Gail Valley doing great damage.

CAN'T GET IMPARTIAL JURY

Of 600 Veniremen Examined, Only Four Deemed Fit to Act.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., May 27.—For the first time since the Orpet trial began, attorneys began seriously to doubt whether they will be able to obtain a jury to decided the fate of the young student from the hard-grained citizenry of Lake County. Five hundred farmers were examined in the first nine days of the trial, and yielded but four men who confessed to having an open mind on the question of whether Will Orpet slew Marion Lambert or whether the girl herself drank the cyanide that caused her death. Despairing of ever getting twelve men from the farming population, the attorneys turned to the business men of the small towns in Lake County. The first one hundred examined has failed to develop a single juryman.

Yesterday attorneys began the weary questioning of the last of the seventh hundred. A new venire of 100 men — the eighth — was ready and waiting for them when they finished. To-day the trial closes its second week.

Lieut. Payne of 93rd Drowned

Was Canoeing Below the Locks When Craft Upset in the Current

While trying to "make the locks" last night, about 8 o'clock, the canoe in which Lieut. R. N. Payne and Lieut. Angus Richardson of the 93rd Battalion, were paddling, was upset in the current. Both officers started to swim to shore, but Lieut. Payne was unable to make it, and sank before help could reach him. The body was recovered a short time after. Lieut. Payne was a native of Stirling, Ont.

Convinced That Peace Is In Sight Says Ambassador

BERLIN, May 29.—United States Ambassador Gerard is convinced that peace is in sight, according to an interview published in the Munich newspaper from its Berlin correspondent. Gerard is quoted as saying: "Nothing can shake my confidence that peace is on its way."

MILAN, May 29. — The Secolo states that Roumania has decided not to conclude commercial treaties with Bulgaria and Turkey similar to those recently concluded with Germany and Austria.

ROME, May 29.—A naval dirigible threw 28 bombs on an Austrian battery at Punta Salvore, causing considerable damage.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Dr. Arthur Warren Waite was Saturday found guilty of the murder of his father-in-law, John E. Peck, the Grand Rapids millionaire.

NINE KILLED

KEMP, OKLA., ALMOST ENTIRELY DEMOLISHED BY A FIERCE BLAST.

Denison, Texas, May 23.—Nine persons were killed and 28 injured, and Kemp City, Okla., eight miles east of Denison, was wiped off the map by a tornado which last night swept a path three-quarters of a mile wide and five miles long in the Kemp City section. Only three small buildings remain standing in Kemp City.

Twelve business houses, a two-story hotel and 60 residences were demolished in Kemp City. This is the second time in recent years that the little town of 300 inhabitants has been visited by a tornado. The merchants said that the town probably would not be rebuilt.

Eight were killed in the town, while the other victim a child was killed in the collapse of its father's home just across the Red River in Texas.

Of the 28 persons injured 26 are residents of Kemp City. Most of the injured were caught in the collapse of buildings while trying to reach storm cellars shortly after the storm broke at 9:23 p.m. Saturday.

The bodies of the dead in several instances were found hundreds of yards from where their homes had stood. The two year old child of Dr. and Mrs. Brinson, who were killed, was hurled 600 feet with flying debris but the child suffered only some minor injuries.

After the storm had passed emergency treatment was given the injured in the darkness, with the rain falling in torrents.

LITERARY RAMBLES

(By F. M. Dela Fosse)

Many years ago I happened to be spending a few days' holidays at the pretty little village of Springfield-on-the-Credit, about fifteen miles west of Toronto. It was a spot calculated perhaps to suit none, but a lethargic temperament or one picturorially or poetically inclined, but I had chanced on it during a bicycle trip and the beauty of its surroundings has led me to a stay of a day or two in the course of my journey westward. The hotel, an unimposing structure bordering the highroad, commanded a magnificent view of wooded vale, of the silver Cred it meandering and murmuring over the pebbly hollow, and of the church-crowned hillside beyond. One glorious morning, I was seated on the lop-sided verandah feasting my eyes on the landscape when my attention was diverted by the sound of a deep-voiced malediction proceeding from the direction of the roadway. Turning my head I beheld a tramp trudging along in the dust dragging an unwilling cur after him at the end of a piece of clothes-line. It was evident enough that the dog had been stolen but I was not so much interested in that as in the fact that the man was addressing the animal in tones which had in them an altogether unusual amount of cultured modulation. Our eyes met and he lurched up to the gate and addressed me. "Good morning," he said; "Good morning" I replied. "Would you have any objections" he asked "to my sitting on the hotel steps for a short time and resting my weary limbs?" "Well, I answered", the hotel is not mine, but I am quite confident that the landlord would have no objection". To make a long story short, he came up and sat down and for the space of a full hour discoursed on subjects far outside the bounds of an ordinary tramp's understanding. His knowledge of the classics was seemingly excellent; his knowledge of the principles of political economy so much greater than mine that I was glad enough of the chance to change the subject and not further expose my lamentable ignorance. But it was when he talked of literature, more particularly poetry, and reeled off stanza upon stranza from Spenser's Faery Queene, from Bryon, Moore, Scott, and goodness knows how many others, that I began to realise my own absolute littleness in intellect and scholarship. For he not only recited but criticised and so far as my dim faculties could discern, with the judgment of the ripened scholar. Before we parted, he had told me his story. Educated at one of the great English Public Schools, he had gone to Oxford, passed brilliantly, obtained an excellent position as a master at a great educational institution, fallen in love, been jilted, and "consequently," to use his own expression, "was bowled over for good". He had drifted ont to Canada but being unable to settle down in any position had finally taken to the tramp life. After that hour's conversation he passed out of my existence and the last I saw of him was when he turned at the bend of the road to wave me a friendly farewell, the dog following unwillingly at his heels. Now, the spectacle of that man and that dog passing along was enough to make even a being unresponsive to most emotions pause and think. First of all there was the dog, a creature, to all seeming, living only in the present, his instinct bounded by his daily needs. No thoughts of the future to torture or to confuse his brain, a mere brute and nothing more. Then, there was the man, really quite an extraordinary being, possessed of a refinement and a scholarship far above the average. But it would have puzzled anyone to say at an off glance that the man was very much superior to the brute both were so absolutely unkempt and forlorn-looking. Yet the man had that within him that was going to prove his salvation and that was his innate culture, and love of literature. For him, the tramp life could only be a passing phase and there was bound to come a time when with sorrow deadened and energy and aspiration once more awakened he would rise to the position which he was so eminently qualified by training to fill.

The moral of all this is that education is one of the greatest boons which civilization extends to us. It is an armoury against much of the evil that mankind encounters. The man, the woman, the child who reads and continues reading through life is the one who is provided with a sheet anchor in time of storm and stress. Just as his stores of learning were a certain solace to the tramp in his misery so the reading of books cannot but be a help to those who would seek to garner the riches they contain.

Asked if he didn't think women are now very original in their dress, a wit replied: "Original! Aboriginal, you mean!"

RUSSIANS NOW IN CAMP IN FRANCE ARE FINE SOLDIERS

Are Eager to Help the French—Camp Situated in Champagne

Camp de Mailly, Quarters of the Russian Forces in France, May 20.—The Russian troops awaiting orders here to join their French comrades at the front are living an idle life in this lower corner of the old Province of Champagne; it is a life that is so full of the picturesque that it constitutes perhaps the greatest attraction that has been witnessed in the Department of the Aube.

Fraternizing with the French soldiers quartered in another part of the camp, these men show no need of repose after their 78 days of hard sea voyage. They appear as supple as their French comrades, although alongside of them they look something like giants. The entire camp exhales at atmosphere of gaiety, confidence and discipline which is quite as striking as their individual appearance.

"Tommy Atkins" can teach them nothing in the way of hygiene and cleanliness. Men, privates and subaltern officers, take pride and care in looking after the barracks.

"They are excellent soldiers," General Lotchwasky said simply to the Associated Press correspondent in reply to compliments upon their bearing and appearance.

"Many of my men might be called veterans, although you see that there are very few who are not still young. They have seen hard service and are penetrated through and through with the military spirit. What makes them particularly happy is the opportunity to come to fight for France against the common adversary on French soil."

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"Did you sleep well?" asked the girl with the entire lack of self-consciousness, as though the episode of the night before had never occurred. Code was very thankful for her tact and much relieved. It was evident that their relations for the remainder of the four days' journey north were to be impersonal unless he chose to make them otherwise. This he had no intention of doing—after his morning's battle with himself.

"Like a top, when I got started," he replied. "And you?"

"Splendidly thanks. And you should have seen the breakfast I ate. I am a shameful gourmand when I am at sea."

He took a chair and filled his pipe. "By the way, how long have you been out on this cruise. You weren't aboard, were you, the time the mystery-schooner led the revenue steamer such a chase."

"No," she replied, "but I wish I had been. I nearly died when I heard about that; it was so funny. I have only been abroad about four days. I'll tell you the history of it.

"I was having a very delightful dinner up at Mallaby House with Mrs. Tanner, Nellie's mother, you know"—she looked unconcernedly out to sea—"when I got a message, part wireless and part telegram, saying that Nat Burns had nabbed you in St. Pierre and was racing with you to St. Andrew's.

"Well, I've sworn all along that you shouldn't come to any harm through him, so I just left Freckirk Head the next morning on the steamer, took a train to Halifax, and had the schooner pick me up there. Off Halifax they told me that the Nettie B. was six hours ahead of us and going hard, so we had to wing it out for all there was in this one. I had provided all the naval fixings before, realizing that we would probably have to use them some time, and that's all there is to it."

"Well, Elsa, I'll say this—that I don't believe that there as ever a schooner built that could out-game and outsail this one. She's a wonder!

For a while they talked of trite and inconsequential things. It was very necessary that they become firmly grounded on their new footing of genuine friendship before departing into personalities; and so, for two days, they avoided any but the most casual topics.

As the weather was exceptionally warm, with a spicy salt breeze that seemed to bear the very germ of life in its midst, they had breakfast and luncheon on deck, dining below in the cosy little dining-room.

Thirty-six hours before they expected to catch the fishing fleet Cit had been maneuvered so that Code should be restored to the Charming Lass after dark). Elsa opened the subject of Code's trouble with Nat Burns. It was morning, and his recent days of ease and mental refreshment had made him see things clearly that had before been obscured by the great strain under which he labored.

Code told her the whole thing from beginning to end, leaving out only that part of Nat's cumulative scheme that had to do with Nellie Tanner. He showed Elsa how his enemy had left no stone unturned to bring him back home a pauper, a criminal and one who could never again lift his head among his own people even though he escaped years in prison.

It was a brief and simple story, but he could see Elsa's face change as emotions swept over it. Her remarks were few, but he suddenly became aware that she was harboring a great and lasting hatred against Nat. He did not flatter himself that it was on his own account, nor did he ask the reason for it, but the knowledge that such a hatred existed came to him as a decided surprise.

When he had finished his narrative she sat for some little time silent.

"And you think, then," she asked at last, "that his motive for all this is revenge, because his father happened to meet death on the old May.

"So far it has seemed to me that that can be the only possible reason. What else—but now wait a minute while I think."

He went below into his room, secured the old log of the M. C. Burns and the artificial horizon. Together they read the entries that Michael Burns had made.

"Now, Elsa," said Code by way of explanation "it was a dead-sure thing that Nat could never have beaten me in his schooner, and for two reasons. First, the May was a naturally faster boat than the old M. C., although Nat would never admit it. That is what really strated our racing. Secondly, I am only telling the truth when I say that I can outsail Nat Burns in any wind from a zephyr to a typoon.

"He is the kind of chap, in regard to sailing, who doesn't seem to have the 'feel' of the thing. There is a certain instinct of forces and balance that is either natural or acquired. Nat's is acquired. Why, I can remember just as well when I was eight years old my father used to let me take a short trick at the wheel in good weather, and I took to it naturally. Once on the Banks in a gale, when I was only eighteen, the men below said that my trick at the wheel was the only one when they got any sleep.

"Now, those two things being the case, Elsa, how did Nat Burns expect to win the second race from the May.

"I don't know. It doesn't seem possible that he could win.

"Of course it doesn't, and yet his father writes here that Nat 'swears he can't lose.' Well, now, you know a man that swears he can't lose is pretty positive."

"Did he try to bet with you for the second race?" asked Elsa.

"Did he? I had five hundred dollars at the bank and he tried to bet me that. I never bet because I've never had enough money to throw it around. A good deal changed hands on the first race, but none of it was mine. I raced for sport and not for money, and I told Nat so when he tried to bet with me. If I had raced for money I couldn't have withdrawn that day and gone to St. John for cargo the way I did."

"Then it seems to me that he must have known he couldn't lose or he would not have tried to bet."

"Exactly."

"But how could he know it?"

"That is what I would like to find out."

Code absently thrust his hand into his coat pocket and encountered the mirror he had found aboard the Nettie B. He drew it out and polished its bright surface with his handkerchief.

Elsa was immediately interested, and Code told her of its unexpected discovery.

"And he had it!" she cried, laughing. "Of all things!"

"Yes, and he always wanted it. I remember when father first gave it to me and I was working out little problems in astronomy, Nat used to take the thing and handle it and admire it. You see the back and the edges are silver plated and it is really quite valuable. He tried to get his father interested but so far as I know he never succeeded.

"It was a strange thing but that simple mirror appealed to Nat tremendously and you know how that would act on a man of his nature. He is and always has been utterly unselfish and if there was any object he wanted and could not have it increased his desire."

"But how did he get it, I wonder?" asked the girl, taking the object and heliographing the bright sun's rays from the polished surface. "When did you have it last?"

Code knitted his brows and thought back carefully. He had an instinctive feeling that perhaps in this mirror lay the key to the whole situation, just as often in life the most unsuspected and trivial things or events are pregnant with great moment.

"I had it," he said slowly, thinking hard; "let me see: the first time I remember it was the day after my first race with Nat. In the desk that stood in the cabin of the old May I kept the log, my sextant, and a lot of other things of that kind. In a lower drawer was this mirror, and the reason I saw it was this:

"When I had made fast to my moorings in the harbour I immediately went below to make the entry in the log about the race—naturally I couldn't leave that undone. I remember that I looked in the top drawer for the book, but could not find it. So then I looked in their other drawers and in doing so opened the one containing the mirror.

"I distinctly remember seeing it for the lamp was lighted and the glass flashed a blinding glare into my eyes. You see we raced in about the worst winter weather there was and the lamp had to be lighted very early.

"The log book was not there, and I found it somewhere or other later, but that has not anything to do with the case. I never saw the mirror after that—in fact never looked for it. I took for granted that it had gone down with the May along with all my other things except the log book, which I saved and use now aboard the Lass."

"And you didn't take it out or give it to anybody?"

"No. I am positive of that. I did not touch it after seeing it that once."

"Then it is very plain, Code, that if Nat Burns came into possession of it he must have taken it himself. He was very angry with you for winning, wasn't he?"

"Terribly. For once I thought he might be dangerous and kept out of his way until the thing had worn off a little."

"Just like him," said Elsa in that tone of bitter hatred that Code had heard her use before when speaking of Burns. "He must have gone on board the May and taken it, because you prized it so much. A fine revenge!"

"Yes; but we don't do those things in Freckirk Head, Elsa. You know that. We don't steal from one another's trawl-lines, and we don't prowl about other men's schooners. I can't understand his doing a thing like that."

"Perhaps not, but if not, explain how he got it."

"You're right," Code admitted after a moment's thought; "that's the only way."

They were silent for a while, pondering over this new development and trying to discover where it might lead. Under sharp commands the crew brought the schooner about on the starboard tack, for the wind was on the bow, and set a staysail between the fore and main masts. The splendid ship seemed to skim over the surface of the sea, touching only the tops of the waves.

"No, it's no good!" broke out Code suddenly. "Much as I hate Nat Burns, I do not believe he would come aboard my schooner just for the purpose of stealing a silver plated mirror. That isn't like him. He is too clever to do anything like that. And besides, what kind of a revenge would that be for having lost the race?"

Afflicted with Lame Back
THREE YEARS AGO
COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Gonshaw, 663 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WOMAN SO WEAK COULD NOT SLEEP

Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Oxford, Mass.—"I had lost three children and I was all run down and so weak I could not sleep at night. My eyesight would leave me and everything I ate upset my stomach. I was very nervous and if I would start to sweep I would have to stop and lie down before I could finish. I was looking over the paper one day and read of a woman who felt as I did and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I took it too. Now I am proud to tell you I am feeling fine and have given birth to a boy baby. He is my 'Pinkham' baby. I keep a bottle of Compound in my house always."—Mrs. PETER MARCO, Box 54, North Oxford, Mass.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, weakness, and nervousness are symptoms which indicate a lowered vitality of the female organism, and the tonic, strengthening properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs, contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, are just what is needed by every woman who is in Mrs. Marco's condition.

"I HAD ALMOST GIVEN UP."

Sarnia, Ont.—"About 27 years ago I was taken very bad, my blood, too, was in bad shape. I got so I had to go to bed and I was there for over three months. I could not eat and suffered untold agony. I had three of the best doctors I could get but it just seemed nothing was going to help me. I had almost given up. I thought I would never be any better and was willing to give up and die rather than suffer as I was. A neighbor of mine told me of Dr. Pierce's wonderful remedies and I decided to use them. My husband bought me six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I had not taken it long until I felt better. In less than six weeks I was out of bed, and in less than six months I was cured and have been well ever since. Do all my own work. I have raised three daughters, two are married and have children. They have used it and they are healthy, so are their children. I am sure it was all on account of my having them use the medicine.

"I keep all of Dr. Pierce's medicines in the house. Have 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Smart-Weed'—anything prepared by Dr. Pierce is good. I also have a copy of the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which I have had 26 years; it has been very valuable to me."—Mrs. J. WAY, 232 Ontario St., Sarnia, Ont.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form from any medicine dealer to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

A most valuable book in any home is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. A splendid 1008-page volume, with engravings and colored plates. A copy will be sent to anyone sending fifty cents in stamps, to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only, to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

ALL SEEK WEALTH WHO GET THE BEST?

Those Who Find God Now Have Greatest Gain.

Basic Cause of Man's Discontent—The Way to Lost Treasure—True Riches Found Only in God—Source and Results of True Contentment—Man's Vital Need of Fellowship With His Creator—Church of Christ Finds True Wealth Now—World of Mankind Will Find it Later, When Man Has Found His God.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Chicago, May 28.—Pastor Russell was here today, and delivered a very practical address, taking for his text, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." (1 Timothy 6:6.) We report his discourse in part:

Six thousand years ago, away back in Eden, man met with an irretrievable loss. He lost his relationship to God. He lost his right to life, and came under the penalty of death, through disobedience. Ever since that time man has unceasingly searched for his lost treasure, has searched for happiness and for rest of mind and heart. Few have known the truth concerning man's lost estate, and few have found the way back to God. The quest for the fabled fountain of youth has been unavailing. Man has continued to die ever since the death sentence was pronounced upon Father Adam.

At the time when our first parents were driven from their Eden home into the unprepared earth, there to earn their bread by sweat of face until the death sentence should be fully carried out, a vague promise of restoration was made them. Later, this promise was still more plainly stated to Abraham. Four thousand years after the fall of Adam our Lord Jesus came to earth to lay down the great Ransom-price for man's deliverance, and to open the way whereby Adam and all his posterity might regain that which was lost, and once more be godly.

To-day's text draws to our attention the true gain which man so long has sought in vain, and suggests how that gain is to be obtained. The Apostle is especially addressing the saints of God, those who have learned of Him and who are seeking to meet the conditions for gaining the true and lasting wealth. Only these are the godly; only these can have true contentment. There is a sort of contentment, however, which even the worldly may possess—a slothfulness of mind, a carelessness, an indolence. But this is not real contentment, and can bring no gain. Such contentment is not advantageous to any one. It is merely an apathy of the brain. But as surely as God has given us brains, just so surely does He expect that we shall use them.

True Contentment Based on Godliness.

The contentment of our text has a good basis and the best of reasons for its existence. This contentment is born of faith in God, of acceptance of His terms of salvation from death, of study of the Message which He has sent through His Word. Everything that the Word of God directs us to do and to be implies perfect Wisdom on God's part. Therefore those who have come to know Him and to trust Him are becoming more and more pleased with everything in that Word. They rejoice to have found the true wisdom. They find, as the Apostle expresses it, that "the wisdom that is from Above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy, and of good fruits."—James 3:17.

Since the godliness and the contentment which bring great gain come only from God and a knowledge of His Word, whoever has learned this secret can be content under all conditions. To this class the Master said, "Take no thought for the morrow." He did not mean that they should be improvident, making no provision whatever beyond the needs of the present day. By careful attention to His words and to the general teaching of Scripture we see that our Lord referred to the taking of anxious thought, to a failure to exercise faith in our Father's loving care over His children.

God's Word instructs us to take proper thought of the morrow, and gives us the ant as an illustration of thrift and provident care for the future. (Proverbs 6: 6-8; 30:25.) But as children of God we should be free from worry and anxious foreboding; for these indicate a lack of faith. We are to "do with our might what our hands find to do," and then to trust in the Lord for the rest. He has promised to care for all our needs, and to cause all things to work together for good to those who love Him.

In our text St. Paul puts godliness first. This quality the world does not now possess. When Adam was created, he had this likeness to God in his mental organism. Created in the image of God, he had fellowship with his great Creator. But when sin entered, it disturbed the relationship which Adam had sustained to God as His son. (Luke 3:38.) Then God cast him off from further communion with Himself. Adam lost all the privileges of a son of God, and was thenceforth permitted to take his own course. He has taken it, with all his posterity; and mankind will see where it will all end. After six thousand years it has brought the world into a very deplorable condition.

Present Conditions Prove Need of God.

We look over into Europe, whose people are supposed to lead the world in intelligence and civilization. There we see them in the most lamentable and abject condition, fighting—not like saints, against their own weaknesses and blemishes, but against one another—like demons. Oh, what an illustration of what man will retrograde to when God lets go of him and leaves him to his own devices! And this is the great lesson which God designs that man shall learn.

We need to keep ourselves in the love of God—in the condition where we shall love God and He will love us. We need to realize that if we thus do, then all things shall go well with us; but that if we fail to do this, all shall go wrong, as they have in the world. As we look back over the past six thousand years of sin and death, and behold the results—the sickness, disease, sorrow, insanity, death, the funerals, the cemeteries, the terrible wars and pestilences, etc.—we are led to exclaim, "Oh, that our race were back in the original likeness of God, where all could be God-like, where love would dominate instead of hatred, where life and peace would prevail instead of turmoil, strife, and death."

Ransom and Restitution.

Here the Bible comes in and tells us of God's great arrangement for the recovery of the race of Adam. The image of God lost by the first Adam is to be restored by the second Adam—the Lord Jesus Christ, as the King of earth and the new Father of mankind. And since Mother Eve had a share in the sin which brought death into the world, so the second Eve, the Bride of Christ, will have a share in the regeneration of the world of mankind. That second Eve will be the glorified "Church of the First-borns."

The Church will not give life to the world; for life comes from the father. The life of the world was originally in Adam; and when Adam was condemned, the life of the world was lost. Adam alone was sentenced to death. His children all go into death, not because of their individual trial and death sentence, but simply because Adam, having failed to maintain his perfection, was unable to give his children what he himself did not possess. By one man the whole trouble came. By another Man the whole trouble will be rectified. This is pointed out by St. Paul, who says, "As by a man came death, by a man comes also the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive—every man in his own order."—1 Corinthians 15: 21-23.

As Adam was the original life-giver to the world, and as Eve was the nourisher or caretaker of that life, so our Lord Jesus will be the second Life-giver, and the Church, the Bride of Christ, will be their nourisher and caretaker—training, disciplining, teaching, and uplifting the world to human perfection. Our Lord Jesus, the Redeemer of mankind, has the right to restore to man the life which was lost in Eden. He will be the great Regenerator of the human race. To His disciples of old He said, "In the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Matthew 19:28.

The time of this Regeneration will be the time of the Millennial Reign of Righteousness. Regeneration means re-creation. Man has gone into death; and God's Purpose is that he shall be restored to life, under the provisions which He has made in His Son. Only the finally incorrigible will fail to gain this great gift of God to man. (Romans 6:23.) These will be destroyed in the Second Death.

How happy we are to know all this—to know that God has a Plan whereby the race which has gone down into death is to be restored to life. In Acts 3: 19-23 the Apostle Peter tells us of this glad time for the world, and styles it "Times of Restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began."

"The Song of Moses and the Lamb."

How happy this knowledge makes our hearts. We can now sing "the song of Moses and of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvelous are Thy works, Lord God Almighty. Just and true are Thy ways, Thou King of saints! Who shall not fear Thee, O Lord, and glorify Thy name; for Thou only art holy. For all nations shall come and worship before Thee; for Thy righteous acts are made manifest." (Revelation 15: 3, 4.) They are manifested to the saints now, but not yet to the world.

By the eye of faith the Church can discern that this is God's great Plan. Others do not see because they have not this eye of faith. But we do not berate them for their blindness. On the contrary, we are sorry for them. And so with the world of mankind. They perceive not, neither do they understand. We rejoice, however, that this blindness will not be an injury to them in the future, but that in God's due time all the blind eyes shall be opened, all the deaf ears unstopped. Then they shall have a share in the Restitution work.—Isaiah 35:5.

The glorified Church of Christ will have a most blessed work in the succoring of the world of mankind. How glad we are that we have such a high and Heavenly Calling! We should rejoice in this, not only because we are to be made partakers of the Divine nature, but because we are to be used of the Lord as the great Mother Eve to be the caretaker of the world. We can think of nothing that would give us more pleasure than what God has provided for us. In past years, when we were taught that when raised to the Heavenly condition we would sit upon a cloud and play a harp, we used to wonder what it was all for. We guessed a few things; and we generally guessed wrong. Now we see that our Heavenly Father has a much more profitable way for us to spend our time when we reach the Kingdom. Now we see the rich provisions of grace which God has in reservation for His people.

Provision for the Church Unique.

However, in our text the Apostle is not speaking of the future, but of the present. It is to those who are now God's consecrated people that he declares "Godliness with contentment is great gain." In what sense is the Church now godly? We have not been restored to perfection. We have not had the original godliness in flesh brought back to us, such as Adam originally enjoyed. But there is a feature of God's Plan now operating by which He provides for the class called to be the Church. He is working all things according to the counsel of His will and in an orderly way. He has made an especial arrangement in Christ, whereby during the Gospel Age those who desire to avail themselves of His great offer to leave the world and to join with Christ in His sacrifice, may be able to do so.

By nature the Church class are of the condemned race of Adam, as are all the world. But God has arranged that these may be justified by faith, may have a reckoned standing with the Father through the imputation of the sacrificial merit of Christ, and thus may be counted as perfect, all their weaknesses and blemishes being covered from God's sight through this merit. Thus they may present themselves to God as sharers in Christ's sacrifice, and be accepted of Him. Christ imputes to each one whatever that one lacks of perfection.

We are justified through the blood of Christ. Thus we can give up our little all to God, who accepts us and begets us with His Holy Spirit; and we are then made members of the Body of Christ. But we must present all that we have. We must hold nothing back. Our dear Lord Jesus gave all that He had, when He came to earth to die for mankind. He gave everything in order to purchase the "field"—the world—and "the treasure hid in the field" — the Church. (Matthew 13:44.) If we are to join Him in His sacrifice, we must have the same spirit. We cannot give as much as He did; but if we give all that we possess—our will, our time, our affection, our influence—we are doing just as He did. We cannot give more than we have.

We are to have "the mind that was in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 2:5.) If we had perfect bodies, we would give perfect bodies; but we give what we have. We come to the Father, not in our own name, but through Christ our great Advocate. When we present ourselves, Jesus, our great High Priest, offers us to the Father, and guarantees that we shall be sacrificed. Then the Father accepts us and begets us with His Holy Spirit. We are now New Creatures, with new hopes, new aims, new ambitions and prospects. (2 Corinthians 5: 17.) We have a new mind—a desire to do God's will and to have His will done in us. Now we are to go on and develop more and more of the mind of Christ, growing in character-likeness to our Saviour.

Growth in Godliness.

Day by day we are on trial as New Creatures. We are to overcome the old nature with its tendencies. Daily the Lord our God proves us to see the depth of our loyalty to Him and to the principles of righteousness. He tests us as to our love for Him, for our brethren, for our neighbor. Are we daily putting on more and more the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, love? If so, we are progressing favorably; and continuing thus to the end of our course, we shall attain the prize. If we are doing the best that we can, this is all that the Lord will require of us.

This godliness is in our minds—the harmony of our mind with the mind of God. Like the Apostle, we find a continual warfare between our new mind and our fallen flesh. (Galatians 5:17.) If we have no such warfare, something is wrong; for every child of God has it. Our flesh was born under sin, and is in accordance with the world. Our new mind is begotten from Above, and is in accordance with God and with Heavenly things. So we are continually striving to keep the body under, to bring it into subjection to the mind of Christ. It is a fight to a finish. One or the other must die. —1 Corinthians 9:27; Romans 8:13.

Daily are we to grow in godliness, being more and more transformed by the renewing of our minds. As we get further along, we have a deeper appreciation of our Heavenly Father's glorious character. We love His Justice, and strive to conform our character to the requirements of the Golden Rule. We delight ourselves in the Law of the Lord. With St. Paul, we learn in whatsoever state we are, therewith to be content, knowing that our interests are all in our Father's keeping.

"Thy Law is written in My heart!" was declared prophetically of our Lord Jesus. This is the perfect standard. As we grow in grace, this Law becomes more deeply engraven upon the tablets of our heart. We grow more like our Lord. We are to add to our faith fortitude, and to fortitude knowledge, and to knowledge self-control, and to self-control patience, and to patience godliness. With this godliness we are to have contentment — full acquiescence in the will of the Lord. Then come love for the brethren, and love for all men, even our enemies.—2 Peter 1: 5-8.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musssy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

You have not converted a man because you have silenced him. — Lord Morley.

British Board Curbs Rum Evil

London, May 26.—The astonishing success of the Central Control Board, in reducing the drink evil in England, Scotland and Wales, since the Board's inauguration in June, 1915, is very strikingly shown in the second report made by its chairman, Lord D'Abernon.

The report shows the efforts of the Board have resulted in a reduction of the average weekly number of convictions for drunkenness in England and Wales from 2054 in 1914, to an average of 940 for last March, the latest month for which figures are available. In Scotland the average has been reduced from 1424 in 1914 to 794 for March.

The figures for London, where a "no treating" order went into effect on October 11, 1915, are of particular interest. The weekly average of convictions for the Metropolitan District in 1914, was 1301. This was reduced to 1008 for the four weeks prior to October 11, and in the succeeding month dropped to 718. Reductions on a similar scale were also shown in the great industrial centres of Liverpool, Birmingham and Manchester.

The Board has been especially active in looking after the great army of workers who are employed in the munitions industry. To offset the evil influences of the drinking places usually patronized by the workers "industrial canteens," where substantial and well cooked meals with light refreshments can be obtained at reasonable prices, were established. In addition the law was enforced which requires public houses to supply food as well as liquor. Lord D'Abernon reports that the canteens have proved a great success and have contributed materially to the checking of excessive drinking and the improvement of the health of the workers.

Cast Talents

Lynn, Mass., May 23.—To devote all his time to raising hogs and the producing of a national pig of red, white and blue, George C. Griffith, friend of August Belmont,, Harvard graduate, one time manager of the Harvard Advocate and originator of the Harvard illustrated magazine, has given up the practice of law in Boston so that he may spend all his time at his farm in Peabody.

The blue hog is his latest successful experiment. August Belmont named that breed the Sapphire swine. Now Mr. Griffith's purpose is to blend the red, the white and the blue into a patriotic pig. He has now on his farm 9,000 hogs of black, red, white and blue colors.

Six years ago Griffith tired of the legal profession and announced his intention of going into a "cleaner" business. He chose the breeding of prize hogs. To-day his profits exceed by far his legal retainers. He has had so much success in the hog raising business that he has purchased other farms at Salem and Wilmington, Mass. His live stock "ranch" is the largest in the East.

The blue pig he has just brought into the world has attracted wide attention. When asked how the blue pig was produced Mr. Griffith said:—"It would involve a long story to tell you how this hog was produced, but suffice it to say I did not transgress nature's laws or conflict with science but on the contrary I was governed in all my experiments by a compliance with both.

"To produce the blue hog has been a long constructive effort. Experiment after experiment was tried tried over and discarded. One in a long while offered a slight clew and it was followed. Thus ran the whole course of the making of the blue hog. The animals are a rich blue in color. The litters run large and in many instances it has been necessary to find foster mothers for as many as five or six pigs above the number considered expedient to remain on sow.

"Realizing the slow tedious nature of the undertaking and the many discouraging features and disappointments attending such a work, I set about the task quietly and prosecuted the work with as little publicity as possible, thinking to avoid disturbing the public with material for idle speculation until I should be able to demonstrate with some degree of certainty the feasibility of the undertaking. With the conception of the idea I had no material facts to justify my hopes other than a belief in its possibility. Reports of the movement however gained circulation till I began to receive letters of inquiry from almost all of the states and from many foreign countries, and persons came from all parts of the country to see the new hogs."

Mr. Griffith comes from Virginia. He is full of enthusiasm about the hog raising business. He is putting the same amount of energy into the raising of hogs that he put into the work of raising $13,000 to start the Harvard illustrated magazine and into his law business. He says however that hog raising is much more congenial than the practice of the law.

DRIVEN TO ATTACK, CHARGE OF DESERTER

That German soldiers were actually driven to the attack at St. Eloi with the threat of death if they sought to turn back is the charge of a German deserter which was recently printed in the Amsterdam Telegraaf, a Dutch newspaper. The deserter is one of four who succeeded in getting rid of their uniforms near Ypres and then making their way across the borden into Halland.

"Before the war," said one of the deserters, "I had a comfortable position and was happy in my home. Then I was forced to give it all up and go to war. None of us wanted war, but we had to go just the same. If the barriers were not so many and the surveillance so strict, thousands of others would follow our example, and make their way into a neutral country.

"The conditions in the German army at the present time are very unsatisfactory and many of the men are grumbling. The fighting at St. Eloi was especially hard. Of our detachment of 428 men, only 19 were left after the battle. The rest were killed or seriously wounded. It was in that battle that the thing happened which made us decide to desert.

"We were ordered to attack the British positions with bayonets. The officers thought that we would not go forward of our own account. They, therefore, posted soldiers in the rear who were ordered to shoot us down if we tried to evade the attack. We could not take the position and I do not know whether our own men shot at us or not when we were forced back. However, that was enough and we managed to make our way across the country disguised as peasants, and reach Holland safely."

RECOVERS HIS SPEECH.

Canadian Soldier Lost It Year Ago at Ypres.

LONDON, May 27.—Private W. H. Cox, first Canadians, now in Cheadle Hospital, Manchester, has had the remarkable experience of having twice lost and then recovered his power of speech. A year ago, at Ypres, he was thrice struck by bullets, which left him temporarily dumb. He received a visit from his wife while in hospital at Broadstairs. Her appearance caused him to cry out, but he relapsed at once into speechlessness, and was removed later to Trafford Park Hospital. Six weeks afterwards the doctors decided to send him to Cheadle, where he has now recovered his speech. Cox is a son of the late magistrate of Manchester.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

Chum Says Marion Lambert Talked of "Ending It All."

CHICAGO, May 27.—"What's the use of living and striving? Sometimes I think it would be better to end it all."

These words, alleged to have been uttered by Marion Lambert to a chum in the Deerfield Township High School, Thursday assumed importance in the trial of William Orpet, accused of the murder of Miss Lambert.

The testimony of the chum, Dorothy Mason, is expected to be a strong point for the defence, which is built upon a theory that Marion Lambert killed herself by swallowing cyanide of potassium in Helm's Woods, Lake Forest, after learning that she had lost the love of Orpet.

The remark about the hopelessness of life in general is said to have been made while the two girls were discussing a dance. Miss Mason teased Miss Lambert because Orpet was to take Miss Celeste Youker instead of Miss Lambert to a University of Wisconsin dance.

It was His 'Washing'.—Major: "Haven't I told you, sergeant-major that I won't have this washing lying on the grass on the parade-ground?" Sergeant-Major: "Yes, sir, but—" Major (bringing up his men on the muddy path): "Company, in-a-r-r-r-k time." Then they advanced on that linen and did all their drill upon it and the men thought they'd never had such sport before. But afterwards the sergeant-major's wife invited the major into the kitchen and showed him the result of his assertion of authority. The linen was his

Prisoners Insulted in a German Prison Camp

Unusual charges of cruelty and privation at the German prison camp near Schneidemuhl, in Germany, are made by Corporal W. R. Foster, of the Coldstream Guards, who was recently exchanged after having passed several months as a prisoner. That the wounded were hardly treated, that unusual punishments were inflicted on the prisoners and that frequently the prisoners were starved, are some of the accusations of Corporal Foster.

In a letter which was recently received by Mr. G. M. Stone, of No. 365 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, Mrs. Martha Hall, an aunt of Corporal Foster, who lives in Durham, England, enclosed the account of his experiences, which the prisoner wrote after he had been exchanged. In many of the charges made by the corporal, he gives specific names, dates and details of the incidents.

"We were insulted everywhere," writes Corporal Foster, "even the ladies at the station put their fingers to their noses and made grimaces at us and we came in for blows wherever we came in contact with a German soldier. Spitting in our faces occurred on several occasions. One thing more I must tell you, and that is that the wounded were treated in a shameful manner, not having their wounds dressed from the time they entered the train until they arrived at Schneidemuhl, and being packed in the trucks to take their chance. Some of them were in terrible agony, and I am sorry to say that when the guards reached the camp things became even worse.

"There were also two feeble old women with us on this journey that the Huns had brought from Belgium. Both must have been over the age of 70, and what wrong these poor women could have done I cannot imagine. But one thing I can say, and will swear to, I never saw any human being in the state of these two old women who must have been battred about in the most heartless fashion. Their faces were one mass of bruises and congealed blood.

"Not satisfied with that, the two were forced to get out of the truck to have their photographs taken in that state, for what reason I know not but it could not have been done for show, for the sight was revolting, a horror and disgrace to any country with a pretension to civilisation. Of these poor women I am too shocked and disgusted to say more, except this, that on arriving at Schneidemuhl, they were made to walk to the camp, a distance of about a mile, and there had to stand for three hours before anybody noticed them. Then they had to take their chances with the men whether they got any food or not.

"I may say that the way the food was served out then was that eight tubs were placed in a row outside of the cookhouse and the prisoners formed in one mass between the cookhouse and the barbed wire entanglements. About 6,000 men of all nationalities of the Allies used this cookhouse: so you may judge for yourself what sort of a struggle it was for two helpless old ladies when the prisoners were too hungry to study a matter of sex. Before many days had elapsed both of the women had died, and I am glad they did, for it was heartbreaking to see these things going on without being able to stop them.

"Now, I must go back to the time I myself arrived in the Schneidemuhl camp. We were formed up, counted, had our names and regiments taken, religion, etc., which took about five hours, in a bitterly cold wind, and more than half of us were without any coat or cap, standing in our shirt sleeves, with the wounded lying on the ground. I may say that these men, unable to walk, had to be carried in a blanket, in an awfully cramped condition, in the most deadly pain, from the station to the camp.

"At last all our particulars had been taken. We were marched to have some dinner. We missed all the pushing and the crushing on the first day, as we were very late by this time. What we had for dinner I could never tell you. It was a mixture between bran mash and linseed poultice and was not half cooked. Anyway, we were terribly hungry so we ate as much of the linseed poultice as we could and were thankful, but still it was dreadful stuff. In fact, it was fed to the pigs, but we had to take that or nothing.

"After this we were marched into an enclosure with barbed wire. In the place there were about four thousand Russian prisoners. There were a lot of little holes dug in the ground covered with sticks and dirt. There were no lavatories or latrines in the camp at this time. We were told that we had to live there. A more filthy, abominable place it is impossible to imagine. But the Russians were kind to us and even made room to let us sleep together, so that the English might still sleep with their chums.

"Being very tired, and having had no rest for eight or nine days, we were all soon asleep, thoroughly worn out. On waking next morning, we heard the bugle sounding the coffee call. This we answered. We received our one pound of bread and one pint of black stuff without sugar called coffee, but which is not coffee. That had to last us until the mid day soup, one pint, and that was all for that day, which was quite uneventful.

"On the second morning we turned out as usual with the morning coffee call, but, alas, when it came to our turn to get bread, we got none, as there was none left. So I have to tell you of yet another 'High Kultured' outrage. Not understanding that there was no bread, we were driven into our enclosure with big sticks and bayonets. There the gate was shut on us and two sentries placed at the gate. Then there started a scene which will be forever photographed on my mind.

"Having received no bread, we were under the impression that bread would be issued later, but we had not yet learned the German method. Naturally a good many men stood around the gate, when suddenly one of the sentries came through, and said something in German, that we did not understand. Then, behold, he charged at us with the bayonet. One poor fellow, whose name was Henry Bolem, First Coldstream Guards, did not move quickly enough and he was felled to the ground by this Sentry, whose name was Schmidt.

"Because he put up his hand to guard off the blows which were being rained on his head he was accused by the sentry of trying to take his rifle away from him. When Private Bolem was able to get away he ran and cried for mercy but no mercy could he get. After this all the English and Russian prisoners were paraded. Private Bolem was identified by the scoundrel Schmidt.

"A barrel was sought on which Bolem was placed. Then came a sight which anybody who saw it will never forget. Four Germans with sticks as thick as a man's wrist, thrashed this poor man until he could not speak, and his body was a terrible sight to look upon. After this he was taken and tied to a post where an officer actually struck him several blows across his face with his sword. The commandant even spat in his face. He was then placed in prison for some time and was afterwards liberated to take his court martial, of which I was one of the witnesses.

"I may as well state here that the court martial got no further than the inquiry stage when a notice was received from the Bromberg justices to say that considering his punishment before the trial he would not be arraigned and they would overlook the charge. The justice of such a case! It was sickening to me to be at the inquiry, knowing that justice would never be expected in that country. At present I do not know the officer's name who ordered the outrage, but he continued to visit the camp, and I will try to find out. Of course it will not surprise you, reading this, to know that poor Bolem died a few weeks after this treatment. What else could one expect?

This is only one case. There are others, hundreds of them, the victims of cruelty of which lie under the turf, and their comrades have no hope of bringing these monsters to justice. The proper punishment for these crimes I consider nothing but death. But I leave you now to think what you like of this Kultur. Do our friends at home know this when they are striking for another half-penny per hour? If so, God help England, for it is gone past redemption. But no—I don't believe that Englishmen know that their brothers are being treated like this and I hope this will be published just to show the people what we have suffered.

"I am not an educated man who writes this, but I would like to have a talk with some of these people who call themselves Britishers, who would strike for a few cents more an hour and who prefer that more than the lives of their brothers who have been and done their share of the country's work and are now being subjected to all kinds of cruelty and starvation. But, as I say, do these men know what is really happening? I think not, and I hope that someone in this country will see that this officer is brought to book and made to pay the penalty of these crimes before it is too late, and while the evidence can still be collected.

"There is another direct charge I have to make against this officer, and this happened on Sunday, November 8th, 1914. The prisoners were marched so that they might be counted into what is called the dugout. While standing in fours, this same officer, without any provocation whatever, stabbed No. 7577, Private Stimpson, of the First Coldstream Guards, in the hip with his sword, at the same time calling him an English swine.

"The sword pierced the hip to about three inches, and it was a very ugly gash indeed. From this time onward this man began to lose the use of his legs. He was taken into the hospital a day or two after Christmas, and has suddenly disappeared, no one knows where. I don't doubt for one moment that the man is dead and buried. No one knows, however, as to where or how he died. I have no doubt from his symptoms before going into the hospital that this man died from poison brought on by the sword thrust. Now, is it right that this man should go unpunished? Cannot some of our ministers get an inquiry made into the charges stated above, and which I and others are willing to swear to to be true?

"Now, just a word about the treatment of sick men in this camp. I will take my own case as an instance. I was taken ill on January 23, 1915, and I was reported sick. At that time typhus fever was raging in the camp. I was admitted to the hospital the same day. I was put in a hut with about fifty other prisoners as some kind of a preliminary treatment. I was given neither medicine nor food but I lay down on a mattress of straw which was soaked with water, and under these mattresses were pools of water. That night I became unconscious, which was a blessing for me no doubt.

"The next thing I remember was about eight days after. When I came to myself my hands and feet were tied and I found I was in one of those places called 'dug outs' lying on a heap of straw, with the stench enough to stifle one. Here I remained. If I was strong enough I could get up and get my soup. If I was too weak, I could lie there and die. No one would know until the orderly found me dead, probably a day or two afterwards.

"This I saw occur in several instances. But when I regained my senses, thank God, I was strong enough to sit up and get a drop of soup at least once a day, such soup as it was. I never had one dose of medicine for the whole month I was there nor did anyone ask how I felt—was I better or was I worse? At last I was strong enough to be discharged from the hospital. I was smothered with vermin and had big sores where the lice had bitten me.

"On being discharged we were taken out to a bath house and made to strip naked outside in the bitter cold. Then we were taken in and given a shower bath, then given clothes that were thoroughly wet and sent to the barracks room almost dead. No wonder that the comrade who was discharged with me was taken ill and died suddenly a few days afterwards, from what nobody knew.

"I may say that there was snow on the ground and no fire in the barracks room. We had three stoves in each barrack room for 125 men, but we got only thirty pounds of coal issued every three days to make the fires for these three stoves. Can anyone wonder at the death rate being enormous in a camp like this? I do not know how many deaths have occurred in this camp in twelve months, but I estimate no less than 9,000 men in a camp of 30,000. This surely could have been avoided in any civilised country."

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver

Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed

If every sufferer from indigestion would study his case as did the writer of this letter the great majority would find sluggish action of the liver and bowels to be the cause of trouble.

It is then an easy way to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and forming their natural functions the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, Hill Spring, Alta. writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's medicines, especially Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered terribly from indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so improved that I began to study the malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion, the nervous spells vanished and the 'blues' flew away. I am never sick now, but should the old trouble return, I know how to cure it quickly."

There is a whole host of derangements which disappear when the liver is set right. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, irritability, constipation are a few of the more common results of torpid liver action. By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can control all such disorders. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S TWO PIECE CORSET COVER.

By Anabel Worthington.

New things in lingerie appeal to the average woman even more than the novelties in the world of dress, and a beautiful chemise or corset cover cut low enough to be convenient for evening wear, and of a design that lends grace with absolute comfort, is sure to attract many women who will delight in spending part of the morning, afternoon or evening hours in developing the pattern of such garment. The illustration No. 7,724 is on the order of the undergarment mentioned above. The design is pretty enough for the selection of material that will give it the right to be called camisole when made for wear under a sheer waist. A noticeable detail is the pointed lap of the material which extends over the shoulders at front; bands of insertion finish them and edging is used at the neck where ribbon, run through beading, regulates the fullness; the neck trimming is repeated on the short sleeves. This model is made to slip on over the head.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To make up in size 36 will require 1¾ yards 40 inch material, 1¾ yards ribbon, 1¾ yards insertion and 3 yards of edging.

You may obtain the pattern by sending cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

GERMAN PINOCHLE GAME IS DISTURBED BY FRENCH "75"

IN THE ARGONNE, May 27.—On that farther slope half a dozen Germans sat in a hole in the ground. No doubt they were grouped about sausage or pinochle or a Berlin paper or something of the sort. We took the half Germans on trust, for we could not see them. The hole in the ground—the mouth of the hole in the ground—was dimly visible through our glasses.

"I shall show you how our little soixante-quinze works," said the artillery officer with us.

Every one knows what the soixante-quinze is. In order to perfect this knowledge I will add that it is the most effective and durable little cannon ever invented. Before this story is concluded some figures will be given which will astonish sharps on artillery. The French "seventy-five" is admittedly as superior to the German "seventy-seven" as a club is to a cornstalk. Even the Germans concede this.

We walked through a dripping wood, on paths which were mere wallows in woodland mire; but which had a subaqueous flooring of corduroy. That path wound behind clumps of trees and bushes and small inequalities though Chingachgook, the Huron himself had designed. Here and there it came out slightly in the open. In order to deceive the prying German eyes at such points screens of greenery had been erected. Not stolid, frank, commonplace wattles of leafy brush. The Frenchman delights in artistry, even in fooling the enemy. Clumps of small trees and spreading brush had been so disposed through the open spaces as to appear a natural woodscape, and at the same time block the enemy's glasses.

Behind one clump of bushes we stopped. At a little distance there was nothing about that clump of bushes that would not have fitted neatly in any clump in any peaceful wood. Then an armful of brush was pulled away from the hole that gave entrance to a sodhouse. Inside we saw one of the brisk and active 75's. Its slender, green painted snout projected through a hole concealed by shrubbery. In dugouts at either side of the gun carriage cases were piled. Their brass butts had been polished by some lover of life and colour. They gave the light relief this darkened interior needed. It was like a painting by an old Dutch master.

Bear in mind that over there, on a distant slope, half a dozen unsuspecting Germans sat playing pinochle.

Gun Shoots 30,000 Times.

The commander of this battery was an enthusiast. Young, blond, blue eyed, almost girlish in appearance, he had the force and speed of a steel spring. Artillery play was not merely one of the arts of war to him. It was an absorbing passion. His face lighted and his eyes sparkled as he told his delight in his seventy-fives. He had just sent back a worn-out gun.

"That gun had been fired more than 30,000 times," said he. "Just before it was sent back we fired 3,200 rounds from our battery of four guns in forty-five minutes."

That rate of fire works out at 800 rounds to the gun, or approximately 18 to the minute. Before the war it had been assumed that 5,000 rounds is the life of a three-inch gun. According to this officer's statement, one gun, at least, had lasted six times as long. Later on I had an opportunity of verifying this from another source. I learned that these little seventy-fives had an average of almost 30,000 rounds. Before the war this would not have been thought possible.

Sit Playing Pinochle.

Remember that over there on the slope of a hill a dozen Germans sat in a hole playing pinochle.

We listened to the officers' rhapsodies on the subject of his seventy-fives. His men stood around listening. One could see they were mentally applauding every statement he made. Now and then one of his guests became interested in a particular point of the explanation. The officer carried on the thread of his discourse, while the men surrounded the interested guest and elucidated. The discipline at that battery was perfect. Just the same, the officer and men were friends.

"Watch," said the officer.

The afternoon was a peaceful one. The rain had passed and the sun was shining again. Now and then a reluctant drop splashed from the trees and sparkled on the jewelled grass. Not a shot, not a sound could be heard on all the front. We looked across a wide, tree-filled valley. The farther slopes were bare and brown, with blackened patches here and there. The trees had been haggled off by shell fire. Across that slope thin, tan coloured lines zigzagged. At intervals were kinks and hooks, at which the bomb-proofs were located. In one of those bombproofs half a dozen Germans were playing pinochle. We could not see them, but it was easy enough to fancy them. Fatigue caps on the back of their heads, spectacles shining, perhaps shouting over the game.

And Then—

"Fire," said the officer.

One an stood at the right of the breech of the 75. As the report of the gun snapped—it was sharp and neat and clean-cut, like the gun itself—the piece threw itself back against the recoil. It slipped smoothly forward again into position. The man at the right of the gun threw open the breech block and the emptied brass shell case hurtled to the floor, followed by a puff of smoke. The man at the left of the breech slipped a new shell case in and the man at the right closed the block. All was done deftly, handsomely, with perfect economy of motion. A third man at the left had taken another of those polished shell cases from the rack and had passed it to the loader. A fourth man at the right fired the gun.

Faster Than Revolver.

Separate aim was not required for each shot. The gun had been trained on its target and remained in position in spite of the jump of the automatic recoil. The gun crew fired that little cannon faster than the average handy man can fire a single action revolver. In fact, the speed of the firing, the equal intervals between the shots, the slight puff of smoke that followed each report, made one think of very fast revolver practice. The ten shots that were fired may have struck in a circle 50 feet in diameter. At one side an observer sheltered himself behind some green bushes, a glass at his eye.

"Each shot was on the angle of the trench," said he. "Absolutely perfect aim."

It was at that angle of the trench we had been invited to look through our glasses a few minutes previously. We had amused ourselves by suggesting that in that angle half a dozen Germans may have been sitting, wearing their fatigue caps, gossiping over the news from Berlin, playing pinochle.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

German Attacks Repulsed With Great Loss

The British Make Headway in German East Africa

TWO GREAT GERMAN ATTACKS ARE CRUSHED IN A FIVE HOUR BATTLE

Violent Assaults West of Cumieres Are Completely Repulsed ---Second Attack Was at Midnight and After Desperate Fighting in the Glare of Illuminating Bombs the Germans Were Again Hurled Back Into the Woods.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official Communique), May 29.—In a five-hour battle waged last night on the west bank of the Meuse two most violent German attacks from Corbeaux Woods, west of Cumieres, were completely repulsed, the War Office announced to-day. The Germans launched the first attack at seven o'clock attempting to recapture the trenches taken by the French in Thursday's fighting. The struggle continued for more than an hour, the Germans finally withdrawing into the ravine east of Dead Man's Hill.

The second attack began just before midnight. Desperate fighting went on under the ghastly glare of illuminating bombs, until the Germans were again hurled back into the woods.

East of the Meuse violent artillery struggles continued throughout the night in the region of Vaux, but there were no important infantry actions.

In Lorraine a German recannaissance near Parroy was repulsed.

French aviators took part in fifteen aerial fights Sunday, bringing down three German fliers near Monthois, Berry-au-Bac and west of Rheims. Two other German planes were brought down by French cannon mounted on motor cars, one north a Avocourt and another in the region of Forges.

ENEMY HAS LOST 350,000 MEN IN FIGHTING AT VERDUN

PARIS, May 29.—The aggregate German losses before Verdun are set at about 350,000 by The Petit Parisien yesterday.

The Echo de Paris states that the minimum German losses east of the Meuse alone during the past week were about 11,000.

After strictest verification of the figures the French lost one-third of this number in the fighting of Fort Douaumont and the Haudremont quarries.

TWO DIVISIONS FROM FLANDERS.

Reliable information reached Paris yesterday that between May 20 and 25 the Germans employed seven divisions on both banks of the Meuse. Two of these were transferred from Flanders and two others from the Somme region.

On the western bank of the river four German divisions were engaged in attacks on May 21, 22 and 23. Prior to their capture of Cumieres the Germans delivered sixteen attacks between Avocourt Wood and the Meuse. More than 50,000 men stormed Hill 304 and Le Mort Homme, suffering 15,000 killed alone, without piercing the French line.

OFFICER'S GREAT HEROISM.

West of Le Mort Homme, where the Pomeranian Brigade attacked one French regiment, the most heroic incident of the weeks of Homeric fighting occured. The Commander of the Third Battalion, reputed to be one of the bravest officers in the French army disappeared during the battle. Later he returned covered with blood from head to foot and his left shoulder smashed, while his uniform was in tatters.

Cut off with a handful of men the Major fought desperately until a blow with the butt end of a rifle stretched him on the ground unconscious. When he recovered he crawled for a mile around and over heaps of bodies until he regained his own line.

The battle was still going on and without delay the Major led his men in a victorious charge in which he received a second wound in the chest.

While his wounds were being dressed in the field ambulance he was singing the Marseillaise, which was interrupted by the arrival of his General, who removed hte Cross of the Legion of Honour from his own breast and pinned it onto that of the Major.

Closing In On Foe In German East Africa

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 29.—Two British forces are now closing in rapidly upon the Germans in German East Africa, the last of the Kaiser's colonies unconquered. Advancing from the southwest, Northey, commander of Northern Rhodesia, has marched twenty miles into German territory, according to despatches received here to-day. Northey is pressing forward on the whole front between lakes Nyassa and Tanganyika. The main British force under General Smuts, moving from the northeast, has captured the railway station at Ipiana, evacuated by the enemy.

Disorders Occur In Many Parts of Greece

Examiner Special:

PARIS, May 29.—Grave disorders have broken out in many parts of Greece following the news that Bulgarians are seizing Greek forts on the border. Several meetings have been held demanding that Greece enter the war immediately.

German Permanent Losses Are 1,200,000

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 29.—Since the beginning of the war to May 1st, the German armies have sustained a permanent loss of one million, two hundred thousand men, according to the German official casualty lists. This includes 644,000 killed or died of wounds and disease, 385,000 prisoners and missing, and 385,000 so severely wounded that they cannot return to duty. The total casualties, including slightly wounded, have been 2,822,000.

KEEP YOUR RAGS

Until the Playgrounds Committee call for them, some time this week They will not be collected to-morrow morning, as advertised, because that would conflict with the departure of the 93rd Battalion. But they will be collected this week, so please save them for the ladies. Certain rag dealers have told some house-keepers that the collection has been done and that their neighbourhood has been overlooked, but that is not true The Playgrounds' Committee will collect your rags, papers and old rubbers, as soon as possible, and they have gone to great trouble to plan an effient method, so do your share in an unselfish cause, and give your rags house room a little longer. The plan now is to divide the city into districts and canvas one or two districts every evening, from 6 to six to nine. Please watch the paper to-morrow, to see when your district will be collected. be collected.

BODY BADLY CUT UP IS FOUND ON RAILWAY TRACK

Edward Welsh, of Cavan, Met Horrible Death—Remains Found Early Sunday Morning

INQUEST BEING HELD

The badly mutilated body of a man was found on the high bridge on the Lindsay-Port Hope road, near Cavanville, by a train crew, at six o'clock on Sunday morning. Upon investigation it was found to be that of Edward Welsh, whose people reside two miles south of Lindsay. The unfortunate fellow, however, had made his home for some time past with James Paul, about three miles west of Cavan station.

Just how the accident happened is a mystery. On finding the body Section Foreman Albert Elliott was notified. He removed the same to the side of the track out of the way of passing trains. There was a large bruise on the right temple. The jaw and throat were badly lacerated, the jugular vein being lacerated. Both legs were severed below the knee and terribly mangled.

Coroner Dr. McKinley of Port Hope, was informed by County Constable Raper, who took charge of the situation. An inquest was opened in Millbrook at eleven o'clock this morning.

The deceased was thirty-six years of age and was unmarried. He was well known in the community and highly respected. He is survived by his mother, two brothers, Wm. and Patrick Welsh of Lindsay, and one sister, residing in Toronto.

Another Mill On Tax Rate Appears To Be Inevitable

Another little mill, or thereabouts to the tax rate appears to be inevitable. The Legislature at its last session, freed the liquor dealers and manufacturers from the business tax they have formerly paid, and the government's purchase of the Peterborough Light and Power Company removes this appreciable item from the taxable property. Combined these subtract about $8,500 from the city's revenue, representing at least four-fifths of a mill. This will mean a twenty-nine mill rate in spite of the Council's efforts to keep the rate down.

93rd BATTALION IS OFF TO BARRIEFIELD CAMP IN MORNING

First Train Carrying A and B Companies Will Leave at 9:30 With the Balance of the Battalion Leaving Half An Hour Later---Col. Clegg Returning From England For Instructional Work---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The 93rd Battalion will leave Peterborough to-morrow morning for Barriefield camp, and a monster crowd of citizens will undoubtedly turn out to see the departure of the largest body of active service troops that ever left this city. To-morrow Peterboro will be deserted as far as khaki uniforms are concerned, with the exception of the recruiting staff, who will remain until further orders, and the rearguard of some ten men, who will remain in command of Lieut. P. G. Might, to put the Armouries in shape after the departure of the battalion.

Final arrangements for leaving the city have been completed, and today the last details were being attended to, leaving everything in good shape for to-morrow. It will take two G.T.R. trains to carry the battalion, the first leaving at 9.30 o'clock, carrying the bands and A and B Companies, with Major R. P. Watt in charge, and the second a half hour later, with C and D Companies, the machine gun section, signallers, and pioneers, in command of Lieut.-Col. Johnston. The battalion will fall in at 8.30 o'clock at the Armouries, and will march in a body to the station in time to let the first section entrain by 9.30 o'clock.

This afternoon the regimental fund is being presented to the battalion, and afterwards each man will be presented with a pair of socks by the 57th Chapter Daughters of the Empire.

Sergt. Cook Wride and Ptes. Chorley, Green, J. Cridland, and Robinson, of the cooks staff of the 93rd Battalion, and Canteen Sergt. J. Markin and his staff, left at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon for Kingston to prepare for the arrival of the battalion to-morrow.

To-night the 57th Band are holding a banquet at the Empress Hotel as a farewell to the ex-members of the 57th Band who are leaving with the 93rd Battalion. The 57th exbandsmen include Bandmaster Hughes, Sergt.-Major Miller, Sergt. Naples, Sergt. Barnes, Armourer-Sergt. Geo. Grange, Sergt. J. Miller, Lance-Corp. H. Wood, Lance-Corp. W. T. Dyer, Bandsmen W. Dyer, R. Dyer, R. Wood, R. A. Browne, H. Gilbert, H. Loader, W. Loader, V. Dallin, P. Grange, and P. Doughty.

Major Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, was presented with a very handsome travelling bag by the members of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's Church the other night. The presentation was made by Mrs. Conway, the president, and was accompanied by an appreciative address.

Notice—

Officers will have their baggage at the Armouries to-morrow morning not later than 7:30 o'clock.

OTTAWA, May 29.—Announcement of the bringing over from England and the front of a large number of Canadian officers to assist in the training of the Canadian units now being organized was made by the Minister of Militia. The services of the best available wounded officers have already been secured by General Hughes, who is a firm believer in this plan.

Among those mentioned are Cols. Clegg of Peterborough, Preston of Port Hope, D. D. Cameron of Picton, Ont.; McPherson and Snyder of Portage la Prairie, A. McDonald of British Columbia, A. L. Young of Brandon, C. G. Bennett of Kingston, J. C. Hodson of Lloydminster, Sask.; B. B. Morrill of Sherbrooke, Majors A. N. Ashton of Brantford, Porter of Toronto, Deeds of the Maritime Provinces, Law of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Gough of Barrie, C. G. Arthur of Calgary, Cunningham of Toronto, Andrews of Winnipeg, R. S. Stockwell of Montreal, Mernagen of Winnipeg, and Cressy of Sudbury; Captain G. N. Weeks of London, Major Stapleton, Lieut. Chipman of Montreal, Lieut. Stewart, of the 214th Battalion.

While these officers have not had much experience at the front, yet with the assistance of men of such experience of actual warfare as Major Ackerman of Peterborough, Ponton of Belleville, Captain McCuaig of Montreal, Captain R. T. M. Scott of Ottawa, and scores of others who may be classed as experts, it is believed they will be able to bring the new forces into first-class condition. With these men and the capable officers already in Canada, General Hughes believes the different camps will be well looked after. While a great deal of attention will be paid to trench warfare, yet it is not anticipated that training this summer will be solely of this nature, but will comprise instruction in attack and defence as well.

The 93rd Battalion marched to Victoria Park yesterday morning for a drum head service at which the sermon was preached by Rev. R. G. Power of the George Street Methodist church and president of the Peterborough Ministerial Association who delivered an eloquent and helpful address that was appreciated by his hearers. Rev. Mr. Power based his remarks on the 14th verse of the 4th chapter of Nehemiah. "Be not ye afraid of them; Remember the Lord which is great and terrible and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives and your houses". The service was a hearty one

New Record For Oldfield

Drove Car at Rate of 102.6 Miles Per Hour

Special to The Examiner.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 29. — Barney Oldfield to-day has a new record to his credit. Taking his life in his hands on a slippery track, Oldfield drove his Christie racing car over a two and one-half mile course of Indianapolis motor speedway at a speed of 102.6 miles an hour. At least twenty-one cars will face the starter in the sixth annual international sweepstakes race to-morrow.

POSITIONS FOR RETURNED MEN

Returned men are in demand. At least places are open to them. Positions for two men in an accounting office at once. Also a man wanted for light general work on a property a mile or so from the Post Office. Good place. Who will have it? Should have some idea of gardening and able to be handy about the place.

Information as to above at the Patriotic Fund Office.

THE FUNERAL IN STIRLING

Lieutenant Richard Norman Payne, platoon commander of No. thirteen platoon, D company of the 93rd Battalion, was drowned in the Otonabee river shortly after 8 o'clock last night, when a canoe containing himself and Lieut. Angus Richardson, also of the 93rd Battalion, was upset by the swift current. Lieut. Richardson, whose home is at the Lift Lock, had a narrow escape from meeting the same fate as his brother officer, to save whom he made a heroic effort.

It appears that the two officers had been included in a boating party which had spent Saturday afternoon down the river. Lieut. Richardson had left the canoe at Rye's boat house on their return on Saturday, and last evening he and Lieut. Payne decided to bring it back up the river to the boat house where it was stored just south of Riverside Park. Lieut. Richardson was in the stern of the canoe and his companion in the bow. They paddled up the river towards the locks, keeping in the lee of the long breakwater extending south from the dam. East of this the current is very swift, the water foaming and boiling in a manner that has always made this point a dangerous one, especially early in the season. They had debated several minutes as to whether they should carry the canoe around the locks or else make use of the canoe slide. Finally deciding upon the latter course, they turned their canoe out into the current a short distance away from the breakwater, and almost at once the light craft was caught in the 'boils' and turned completely over.

Clung to the Canoe.

Speaking of the accident to the Examiner this morning, Lieut. Richardson said that when he came to the surface he was some distance away from canoe, which was being rapidly carried down the river by the current. There was no hope of reaching the boat so Lieut. Richardson started to swim to the west bank of the river, a difficult swim in view of the fact that he wore a complete uniform, including his heavy belt. Lieut. Payne, instead of sticking to the canoe, from which he would undoubtedly been rescued in a short time, as there were a number of boats a little further down, started to follow his companion after the latter had gone some distance. He was swimming rapidly and Lieut. Richardson called back to him to take his time. Finally Lieut. Richardson reached shore, when he heard his companion call for help. Seizing a piece of plank he plunged into the river again and swam out towards Payne, making as rapid progress as he could in his exhausted condition. He had almost reached him when Lieut. Payne made a lunge for the plank, raised, and disappeared under the water.

By the time Lieut. Richardson had reached shore the second time, Mr. Harold Rye and several members of the Belmont Club and many others came soon after. The search for the body was commenced quickly, and after some twenty minutes it was brought to the surface. Dr Greer and Majors Cameron and Eastwood did all they could to resuscitate the unfortunate young man. Chief Howard used the pulmotor to no avail.

Lieut. Payne was a bright, efficient young officer, popular alike with his brother officers and with all ranks of the battalion. The sad fatality has cast a gloom over the whole battalion and has saddened the departure of the 93rd for Barriefield to-morrow morning.

The young officer's home was in

A SUGGESTION.

A citizen of aquatic tastes and experience, apropos of the sad drowning accident of last night, makes a good suggestion. He points out, as we all know, that the waters at the foot of the Locks are a very dangerous place for the unexperienced, and even the experienced, canoeman; and that they have been the scene of many drowning accidents; and it is probable that some lives have been lost from lack of promptly available means of resuscitation. He suggests that a pulmotor be procured and kept at, say, Rye's boathouse, the most convenient and easily accessible point, all things considered. The pulmotor at the Fire Hall, is good; but it is too far away to be of the highest life-saving value, when the difference of a few minutes in application may mean all the difference between life and death. If the presence of a pulmotor, virtually, on the spot, would save one life in a season, it would be worth more than its cost were that ten times greater than the price of a good pulmotor. "Safety first" is a good motto to apply to the situation at the Locks in summer.

COBBLESTONES, CEMENT, OR CIVILIZATION.

At first thought and perhaps in the abstract, there is little relation between cobble stones, cement, civilization and literature, but the relation becomes pertinent through the pulpit persistence in vandalism. A broad walk leads from the sidewalk to the public library. But instead of taking one short step more to get squarely on the walk, many of the visitors to the library building take a "short cut" by tramping on the turf of the beautiful lawn and, of course, tramping the life out of the grass. To prevent this vandalism, the library authorities have placed cobble stones in the angle, formed by the two walks. These may prevent tramping out the life of the grass; but it is a question whether they are not a greater disfigurement than desecrated, bald ground. Some suggest the laying down of a triangle of concrete in the angle. That would look better; but it would not prevent walking on the grass. The "short cut" would only be made longer —outside the concrete. The only effective alternative would be to try the effects of a little civilization on the public, who persist in taking "short cuts" and destroying lawns and boulevards as is done every day and every hour in every street of the city. We have in session here a conference in relation to the "second coming of Christ." It would seem that there should rather be conference and action to bring about the first coming of Christ, to the hearts and souls of the citizens, whose hearts are not touched with the cardinal spirit of Christian altruism, that lies at the root of the "golden rule." Nothing but the spirit of Christianity, as implied in respect for the rights and feelings of other can make the public "keep off the grass" in a literal as well as figurative sense—in all the relations of life; whose essence of perfection consists in loving our neighbour as ourselves — the peg upon which hang all the law and the prophets. Why in heaven's name is civilization and, ergo, Christianity, only, skin deep? It gives perfunctory heed to a few of the conventions of society, but neglects the weightier matters of the law — the companion member of the twin conditions of eternal life—"thou shall love thy neighbour as thyself." Can we do this and do things that hurt his feelings, destroy what has made for the public pleasure, and compel the use of cobble stones or cement as shambling substitutes for downright, honest, Christian civilization? Cowper poetically protests against including in his list of friends, "the man who needlessly sets foot upon a worm." If William Cowper had lived to-day to see the destruction of our green places, he would have taken to "Task" the "short cut" Christians of to-day, by approving this version of his famous words:

I would not enter on my list of friends,
(Though graced with polished manners and fine sense,
Yet wanting Christianity), the man,
Who needlessly sets foot upon a lawn.

BENEFITS OF STREET OIL.

The [illegible] of the Canadian Municipal Journal of Montreal, comprises 100 pages of most interesting matter, consisting of a finely illustrated report of the third annual Good Roads Congress. It is beautifully illustrated, and its illuminated slogan on the outer page, "Good roads are essential to good citizenship," is the key note of the song of satisfactory transportation facilities.

The subject becomes of particular importance and appeal at this season of the year. Lusty June is at our doors; and the beauty of the city streets and the country roads ribboning their way through the green growing fields and tree studded lanscape, the pure, invigorating air laden with the sweet perfume of growing leaf and plant, present an irresistible temptation to motoring and driving. The good Lord has provided all the conditions of enjoyment in tree and plant and flower, pure life-giving air and genial sunshine. We can enjoy these to the full, if man only does his share in providing comfortable highways, and smooth, dustless streets for our use.

What we have tried and found good, is oil on the streets as a preventive of the dust nuisance. The practice of street oiling has come to stay. It is popular because it is effective. It keeps down the dust and preserves the road surface —a double service worth many times its cost.

After all dustless air under traffic in our streets is not the only benefit of oil. To be effective it needs streets to be put into good, smooth condition— this is itself a great and much needed benefit. When streets are thus prepared; properly drowned and smoothed and good side drainage provided so that the water from rains may run off the oiled road surface readily, we have the conditions that keep down dust and preserve the road surface.

And with proper care the benefits of the oil are not only fairly permanent, but cumulative. Every application of oil improves the surface and adds to the lasting quality of the good, smooth surface. The rains and snows of winter do not remove the oiled surface. Streets oiled last year show the good effects this spring.

This is a time when we must practice economy of expenditure. It is a question whether, in view of comfortable, dustless residence along our streets, the area of oiled streets should not be greatly extended.

We have come through a long, dreary term of winter imprisonment in our heated homes. We want to live our short summer practically out of doors; sit on verandahs every possible hour. At night we must have our screened windows open.

We can't do these things with comfort unless we have dustless streets; and we can't have dustless streets without the use of oil; and we can't have oil unless we have street surfaces made smooth, as a necessary preliminary to the best results. Most of our city is beautiful in summer, but most of our streets are not provided with good road surfaces. By extending the area of properly prepared and oiled streets, we also extend the area of our drives, and we can give zest and life and animation and dustlessness to streets that are now deadly quiet, because the streets repel the auto and the pleasure carriage, and force residents to stay indoors.

We owe it to our rate-paying auto owners, who have had an extra license tax imposed this year in addition to our heightened civic tax bills, to give them as good streets as possible; we owe it to other citizens that autos and vehicles should not, by raising dust on unoiled streets, be a detriment to the pleasure of the rest of our tax-paying citizens.

To make the machinery of civic life run more smoothly—to make civic life more comfortable, and citizenship better, give us more oil and the accompanying improvement of street surfaces. To paraphrase without irreverence, the mission to which the prophet Isaiah was annointed —give our citizens "beauty for dust, the oil of joy for mourning."

If we haven't enough money to extend the area of oiled streets, provide it by postponing or diverting from some other less necessary detail of street work; for, from a similar expenditure on no other thing than oil can as great a degree of comfortable life be given to all our citizens, and in no way can so much comfort be given as in making our open air free from street dust.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

In the case of the British Empire events have gone just far enough to show that the German mind does not altogether evoke facts from its inner consciousness, but that, given a mole-hill, German logic and metaphysics can turn it into a mountain. There has been unrest in Ireland; there have been troubles in India; the Senussi tribesmen have repeatedly raided the Egyptian frontier—and she war has gone as it has. If a balance be struck between discomfort in Ireland and India, and the magnificent showing of the self-governing colonies—Anzac, Canada, South Africa—the German forecast of a dissolving British Empire is only another of those astonishing dreams to which a supposedly practical people is addicted. — New York Post.

CANADA CAN.

The successful launching of the first ship from the plant designed to build warships under the Laurier Naval Act has put the Borden Government on the defense. Sir Robert Borden found it necessary, apropos of this launching which apparently has opened his eyes, to announce in the House of Commons that "he was not aware that Canada's ability to build steel merchant ships had ever been questioned." Notice the interpolation of the word "merchant". He added, as a sort of saving clause, that nevertheless he doubted the advantage of starting the building of steel vessels here, in view of the cost.—Montreal Herald.

THEOLOGICAL LAVA.

During the war the activities of German missionaries in India have been absolutely put a stop to. It is to be hoped that the British Government will never allow them to be resumed. The idea of restricting German missionaries in India after the war is strongly urged in the London Outlook by Mr. S. M. Mitra, a Hindu writer, who has been studying the war sermons of Teutonic "divines," as reported in German papers.

He gives samples of these German sermons. Pastor Zoebel, speaking in the Great Lutheran Church in Leipzig, praised the submarines which sank passenger ships because they sent to the bottom of the sea "thousands of the non-elect." He preached no pity for English, French, or Russians, because they had "sold themselves to the devil," and were all "condemned to death by a divine decree." Professor Reinhold Seeberg of the University of Berlin, is quoted as picturing the slaughter of Germany's opponents as a God-like work, Germans believing that "in killing them, in putting them to suffering, in burning their houses, in invading their territories, we simply perform a work of charity!" Pastor Philippi, of Bell, caps this by declaring that Germany is carrying out a divine command in crucifying humanity, so that "the kingdom of righteousness will be established on earth and the German Empire, which will have created it, will remain its protector!"

Well may Mr. Mitra be apprehensive of the preaching of such fanatical blasphemy in the name of the Messiah to India's millions. He asks "Are not Hindu parents entitled to protection from the British Government, for their children, against such mischevious teaching masquerading as Christianity?" We say, most emphatically, they are.—Montreal Herald.

HASTY LEGISLATION.

At a time when the arrangements for the close of the Ottawa Session were beginning to take shape, the Government asked Parliament to deal with some of the most important measures of the Session—the loan of $15,000,000 to the Canadian Northern Railway Company, and $6,000,000 to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, and the acquisition of several railway lines in the Province of Quebec. The Commons had very little time to consider the measures, the Senate practically no time at all. If the Senate were doing the work for which it was created it would have refused to consider these measures within the few hours allowed. Such action on the part of the Upper House would have a most wholesome effect, teaching all Governments that Parliament must be allowed reasonable opportunity to fully inquire into the measures which it is asked to pass. Such action, too, would leave less ground for those who are so ready to claim that the existence of the Senate serves no good purpose. The Senate does not exhibit a surplus of energy. After the session has advanced a few weeks the Upper House seems to become more languid than the busier Commons, and measures dumped on its table while the members are clearing out their desks for departure are readily passed. The Senate does not do itself justice. It contains many able and experienced men. But if it encourages the hasty legislation which it was created to prevent, it must not be surprised to find its usefulness questioned more and more.—Journal of Commerce.

FRENCH REHABITILITATION.

As indicating the confidence of the French people it is interesting to note that plans are now being formulated for the holding of a Reconstruction Exposition in Paris during May, June and July of this year. In a statement to manufacturers it is pointed out that the war has laid bare the habitations of 35,000,000 people and destroyed county roads, city streets, public service systems, factories and farms. This, indeed, is a most interesting announcement and indicates the spirit of the people. It spells hopefulness at least. The prospectus adds that the end of the war will mark the beginning of the work of reconstruction and for this a vast amount of machinery and supplies will be necessary.—Canadian Engineer.

If the lawn has not already been fertilized some form of commercial fertiliser should be used. Manure applied at this time will not be effective. Ground bone is probably the best fertiliser to use.

Tests made by the Department of Agriculture indicate that butter made from pasteurised sweet cream with no other preservative than salt and hermetically sealed, will keep practically indefinitely in cold storage.

The co-operative dairies of Denmark of which the number rose to 1157 in 1909 are of so great importance that they deal with 77 per cent. of the milk produced in the country.

Brandy applied immediately on a piece of cottonwool to a bruise will prevent discoloration and allay the inflamation.

FORE TURRET GUNS, QUEEN ELIZABETH
These are the mighty guns that hurled 1,500-pound shells across the Gallipoli Peninsula into the Turkish forts upon the Dardanelles. They are big enough for a man to crawl through.

BREECH OF A BIG GUN
The film "Britain Prepared," shows the loading of the huge naval guns, the breech of which resembles the proportions of the fuel door of a big boiler to our way of comparing things.

FIFTEEN-HUNDRED POUND SHELL.
The shells fired by the big guns of the Dreadnoughts weigh nearly one ton each. They are filled with powerful explosive and after travelling ten or fifteen miles could destroy a fort.

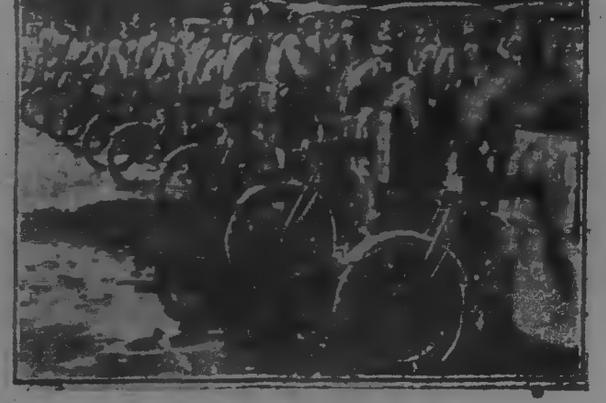
LONG RIFLED GUN BARRELS.
The barrels of the big guns are rifled and kept clean and smooth inside just as are those of small arms. They are swung about at all angles by machinery under perfect control.

H. M. S. QUEEN ELIZABETH, SU PER-DREADNOUGHT IN ACTION
The greatest battleship in the world is shown in action in the film Britain Prepared; her huge guns throwing 1,500-pound shells. The pictures plainly s how the white flashes of flame through the smoke.

THE PATROL OF TH E DREADNOUGHTS
British battleships tramp their beats on the Ger man Ocean regularly, day in and day out, while German ships remain in harbour. Unceasing vigi lance is the watchword of the fleet and the safe-guard of the Empire.

DIVINE SERVICE ON H.M.S. QUEEN ELIZABETH
The crew are paraded on the deck beneath the huge guns, and the service is held just as at home in England. Note the proportions of the guns as compared to the men who handle them.

ADJUSTING BARBED WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS
Barbed wire was first used for military purposes on any extensive scale in the South African War. Now even the American and Canadian wire mills are busy making it for the armies of the Allies in Europe.



MOTOR CYCLE MACHINE GUNS
Speed, lightness, and mobility are combined in the motor cycle machine guns, with fighting strength equal to a score of men on foot armed only with ordinary magazine rifles. But machines need roads.

Offensive By The Russians Not Likely This Year

Lines on Galician Front Have Been Strengthened Enormously—Daily Battles Continue

STRUSOFF, Galicia, May 30.—There appears to the civilian observer here no immediate prospect of a Russian offensive on the Galician front. Meanwhile the Russians have made good use of the several months which have passed since they occupied their present advanced positions. Trench work has been accomplished and wire entanglements constructed. An aeroplane flight which The Associated Press correspondent made over a section of the Russian front disclosed an amazing network of trenches and wire.

Several Russian generals declared that never before since the beginning of the war has their army been so well equipped with munitions, and that the army is ready to a man to advance when the orders come.

Across the flats, the Austrian trenches can be seen with the aid of field glasses. Now and then an Austrian soldier climbs out of a trench and strolls back to a strip of woods in which white smoke patches suggest camp fires. In the immediate foreground Russian soldiers expose themselves with seeming disregard for the proximity of their enemies, who are well within rifle range. An officer explained that because it was the lunch hour, the troops relaxed their precaution to some extent. A sort of truce, it appears has become a feature of operations, and it was, he said, quite certain that until after two o'clock no shot would be fired by either side.

Only the artillery failed to observe the truce, but that activity was limited to the firing of an occasional shell. On all sides, however, were caverns blown in the soft earth deep enough to hide a mounted horseman—showing what might be expected after lunch.

OFFICE BOY MISSING WITH $10,000 IN MONEY

Disappears With Funds Representing Morgan Payrolls.

NEW YORK, May 29.—J. P. Morgan & Co. to-day requested the police to search for William McManus, an 18-year-old office boy on a complaint that he disappeared shortly before noon to-day, taking with him the sum of $10,000, representing the firm's weekly pay roll.

Little Brantford Boy Receives Fatal Burns Playing "Firecracker"

Clothes Catch Fire From Gas Stove—Mother Smothers Blaze.

BRANTFORD, May 29.—In mimicking the idea of playing with firecrackers as he had witnessed older boys on Victoria Day, little Paul, the youngest son of Arthur O'Connor, 84 Port street, agent for the Metropolitan Insurance company, was burned to death.

In some way he got into touch with the gas stove while his mother was out of the house. Hearing his screams, his mother rushed in and found him a mass of flames. She quickly smothered the flames with her own clothes, but despite all that two doctors could do, the little fellow died last evening, the shock being too much for his nervous system.

HOW LIQUOR LAWS BENEFIT BRITAIN

LONDON, May 27.—"Fifty per cent., less public drunkenness and disorder than before the war," was Lord d'Abernon's answer to the question of the result obtained by the drink restrictions which the Central Liquor control board, of which he is the head, had put in force.

Lord d'Abernon was emphatic in his ulterior aim. He made this denial in answer to certain suggestions which have been afloat that the various restrictions are simply stepping stones to prohibition. The official board of which Lord d'Abernon is the leading figure took over control of Great Britain's liquor problem on May 15, 1915.

Designed to affect areas such as munition centres and waports, it has gradually extended its scope of operations until 29,000,000 people are directly affected by its decisions. The board possesses drastic powers even to the point of absolutely closing saloons when it considers their existence prejudicial to the interests of national productiveness.

At present saloons may sell intoxicating liquors only between the hours of noon and 2.30 p.m. and 6.30 and 9.30 p.m. on week days, and on Sundays between 1 and 3 p.m. Limited hours are prescribed also for the sale of bottled liquors for consumption off the premises; the prohibition of selling liquor on credit and the absolute stoppage of treating in saloons, clubs or any other places.

INCREASED EFFICIENCY.

In addition to the diminution of drunkenness and disorder, Lord d'Abernon said one of the most satisfactory results is the increased efficiency in munition areas.

Peterboro' Woman Tells of the Vast Work of Women Who Have Filled Places of England's Men

Can Form No Conception of the Situation Unless You Have Seen It—Are Giving Every Satisfaction Even at Very Difficult Work—Fewer Rejections of Shells.

PAPER VERY SCARCE

The most notable of many changes the war has wrought in England is the vast army of women workers who are efficiently filling the places of enlisted men, according to Mrs. Bert Mason, 148 Park Street, who recently returned from Birmingham. In the munition factories only the starred men remain, those whom the Government refuses to remove because of their particular technical skill. With this exception the factories are manned by women, so to speak, and it is generally understood that, as an evidence of their zeal and ability to supply the men at the front, there have been fewer rejections, fewer scrapped shells than when the work was largely performed by men earlier in the war. Naturally Mrs. Mason speaks with a keen sense of pride of the accomplishments of her English sisters, but she remarked that anything that might be said of their present stupendous efforts is no more than their due.

The English women have, to a certain extent, been mobilized for the country's service. In the cities and towns, lists have been prepared of those who volunteer and are physically capable of doing some form of work. If they have had previous factory experience, they are allotted to duties similar to those to which they have been accustomed. Those who enter upon munition manufacture receive 15 shillings a week, while they are learning to operate lathes and other machines. And as their proficiency increases their wages are advanced. A great number of women are now earning at this work 3? shillings, 6 pence. They are recognized by the unions, and receive the wages paid to the men whose positions they have filled. They work in eight-hour shifts and take their meals in restaurants that have been provided in the factories. Every woman bears a number which is stamped on her plate, cup, saucers and other utensils. Everything is systemized to the last point that the energies of the workers may be conserved, and the product of the factories maintained at the limit. The machines are operated day and night, including Sundays, and it has been found that the women are bearing up well under the strain, thanks to the eight hour shifts.

WOMEN WORKERS EVERYWHERE.

But the manufacture of munitions is not the sole activity of England's women. They are breaking coke for the gas factories at 33s. 6d. and their board, cabins having been built or the premises for their convenience and accommodation.

Of course it is generally known that they have completely replaced the men as tram conductors, but they are also driving the big heavy motor drays, they are cleaners and wipers at the railway terminals, porters at the big stores and other establishments, where men formerly did this work;; they operate elevators, are brewery workers, have replaced the postmen, are doing some work at the mines; have numerous duties at the railway stations, young girls are delivering telegraph messages, and in the munition factories women are even operating the big heavy steam punches or stampers. And the men are at the front or in training.

Mrs. Mason said she could not give an adequate idea of what the women are really doing. The situation is almost incredible to those who have not observed it. Women are working the farms and, by the way, at this work are wearing trousers and puttees, and an outstanding feature is the fact that they are giving every satisfaction and are earning men's wages, even at increased figures. Women of all classes and conditions are doing their bit, and the titled names in the lists simply accentuate the widespread enlistment of the "weaker" sex. The school children are busy in a multitude of ways. After school hours boys are making crutches and splints for the wounded, and the older boys are making munitions. And so it goes throughout the Midlands with which section Mrs. Mason is best acquainted, but in the South and at Liverpool she experienced the same industry of the women who are helping push the war to a successful conclusion.

SCARCITY OF PAPER.

The grocer allows you only two pounds of granulated sugar. You may purchase extra quantities of brown Demarara if you wish. And when your purchases at any shop are parcelled for you, the shopkeeper requests and expects you to return the paper. In many instances you have to bring the paper to wrap the goods you buy. Fish that used to be so plentiful you could get it for the proverbial song, providing it was a touching one, are extremely scarce. The trawlers are now netting mines. Altogether Old England is undergoing a wonderful change.

Physically fit men are few and those who shirk are ever reminded of their slacking. They are asked if the supply of khaki has run out and other questions with a pertinent barb that is intended to sting. Mrs. Mason remarked that only by seeing can one believe and appreciate England stripped for war, as she is today.

93rd OFFICER IS DROWNED

Stirling, but he had been a resident of Peterborough for about two and one half years, having been accountant in the local branch of the Union Bank before enlisting, and boarding at the home of Mrs. E. G. Wesley, 360 Stewart street. Last winter he was appointed a provisional lieutenant in the 57th Regiment, and in February he took the qualifying course at the School of Infantry, Kingston, being attached to the 93rd Battalion as soon as he had completed his course. Later he was appointed to the battalion.

The officers of the 93rd Battalion had arranged to have a military funeral this afternoon to the G.T.R. station, but this conflicted with the plans of the relatives, and had to be cancelled. Instead there will be a service to-night at the home of Mrs. Wesley, 360 Stewart street at 7.30 o'clock, conducted by Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd, Rev. R. G. Peever, and Rev. Mr. Tirrell of Stirling. The body will be taken to Stirling to-morrow via the 8.20 train for interment. Major Davidson will accompany the body and represent the battalion at the funeral.

Lieut. Payne is survived by a widowed mother in Stirling, three sisters and a brother, who is now in England with the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, having sailed with a draft only a few weeks ago.

Britain Prepared at the Grand Opera House To-day

Afternoon and Evening To-day, To-morrow and Wednesday --The Picture is a Marvel of Realism

Russia is a big country and many of her people have never learned to read. It is difficult for an unlettered man to realize even the greatest events that are happening outside his own country, or his own district and when German secret propagandists began to spread the report in Russia that Great Britain was sacrificing her allies without doing anything herself of material aid for the cause, certain classes were without any information with which to contradict the calumny.

The British Government took immediate steps to furnish such material and an influential body of Russian journalists and writers were invited to Britain and see what gigantic preparations were going on. Among other things they did under the auspices of the British Government was to pay a visit to the Grand Fleet in the North Sea, where it is maintaining an effective blockade of the German Empire. Among the Russian writers was Mr. K. Shoukovsky, one of the ablest critical writers of that great country. He vividly describes the impression the wonderful array of British battleships made upon him, and his party. His article as published in the London Chronicle, is of special interest in view of the presentation of "Britain Prepared," the moving pictures of the Fleet and of Kitchener's Army, which are now at the Grand.

Mr. Shoukovsky's article follows.

"This is the manner in which I first saw the British fleet. Soon after we left port we sighted a squadron of very great ships. I said to an officer: 'These must be super-Dreadnoughts.' But he laughed, and said, 'No; they are the destroyers.' Some miles further on we came across a second squadron, of even greater ships. I said the same again. But my friend said these were cruisers. Finally we came to the great battleships, drawn up in two apparently endless lines.

"It is idle to say my friends and I were impressed by this sight of British sea power. The Grand Fleet is the greatest spectacle I ever saw in my life. It looked more than any thing else like a great city of gracious yet tremendous shapes and towers; a strange city of streets and roads and lanes, and great hotels that moved miraculously, as if with wings. The whole sea seemed to be alive with them, with these mobile steel monsters of war.

SALUTE FROM THE FLAGSHIP

"When we sighted the flagship the Iron Duke, our salute to the admiral was wirelessed, and in less than two minutes back came the admiral's wirelessed welcome.

"Sir John Jellicoe himself was on the bridge to greet us. Bands played the Russian National Hymn, and the crews cheered, and we cheered in response.

"In Russia Sir John Jellicoe is a national hero, almost a national idol. Our children cherish his photograph and know his features by heart. Yet when we were at last confronted by the man who directs the immense destiny of the British forces on the seas, I could hardly believe my eyes. He seemed much too simple and modest and genial a personality to be at the helm of such a terrible and tremendous machine as the British Navy.

"And yet, when I asked him if it was true that he had written a personal letter to a little English girl who had sent a gift to the Fleet, he told me that every day he had similar letters to write to his children friends at home. Nevertheless the evidence of his power and strength of character was everywhere—in the discipline, efficiency and quickness one saw in the conduct of his officers and men.

"We were able to learn much of the striking power of the great Fleet. We saw vessels—huge and unwieldy as they seemed, go through the most intricate movements with the most marvellous rapidity. We saw real battle practice. Two cruisers fired at moving targets at long range, and hit the mark every time. It was splendid—to us it was almost miraculous, the deadly precision with which they loaded the great guns, found the exact range, fired, and loaded again. One could not help thinking, at the sight of the ingenious loading mechanism, that the great machine we saw was infinitely more clever and accurate than we men who were looking on.

"Then we saw torpedoes fired from destroyers, marking the water in long lines, and the industrious trawlers sweeping for mines. On another vessel said by Germany to have been seriously damaged, the Admiral showed us one solitary shell hole in her funnels.

A TALK WITH THE SAILORS.

"But, best of all, I liked the British sailors. I talked to many of them and they talked to me, and showed me their quarters, and their cheerful mottoes and notices on the walls, and the ingenious toys they had made out of battle-splinters. My body still aches from the heartiness of their many friendly slaps on the shoulder. They are splendid, handsome fellows, full of optimism, courage, and high spirits, doing their work as quickly, cheerfully, and enthusiastically as if they were playing a game—as indeed they are!

"I met one sailor who had jumped overboard in the coldest weather and risked his life to save a drowning dog. And there was a little midshipman I talked to whose relatives lived only four hours' journey away, but who had not been able to see them for eight months, so arduous were his duties. But he was quite cheerful, taking everything in good part, and recognizing that it all was part of the game he and his friends had set themselves to play.

"When we return to Russia we shall have many great and wonderful things to relate to our own people, but nothing can surpass the magnitude, the vigilance, the power, and the immensity of the British battle fleet as we have seen it with our own eyes. And our admiration is mixed with gratitude for this 'sure shield' of Britain is no less the unceasing shield and safeguard of Russia."

A. O. H. Present Wrist Watch to Soldier

Private Martin Gaghen, of the 93rd Battalion was the recipient of a splendid wrist watch on Saturday night, the gift of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, of which society he was a member. The presentation was made by Mr. Joseph Kelly during a little farewell that was arranged for Private Gaghen. An address was read by the president, Mr. John Devlin, extending to Private Gaghen the best wishes of the Hibernians in his military endeavours.

NAIL-CLAD STATUTES WAKEN GERMAN IRE

Prof. Pazaurek Urges That Wooden Hindenburg Be Stripped of Armour

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, May 29—After passing many sleepless nights trying to solve the question "How to denail Iron Men," Prof. Pazaurek, of Stuttgart, regarded in Germany as authority on aesthetics, unburdens his heart in the Vossische Zeitung, in which he has a satirical article on what he calls the "nailing nuisance." He condemns the practice of "driving nails into the images of living men," and then develops an ingenious plan of how to do away with the monstrous statues. "when the people have grown sick of the tasteless thing disfiguring their market places or public gardens."

He suggests that a collection might be made of all the nails so used so that a triumphal road could be paved from Antwerp to Bagdad. Halfway between these two cities, for instance at the Dardanelles the colossal Hindenburg idol "might do duty as a lighthouse." He adds sarcastically that the light "would warn us not to come too near it." When the nails have all been driven in, the professor suggests that they be extracted, a mark to be paid for each nail, which is then to be the property of the person who has extracted it.

"He should wear it around his neck on his watch chain, or he might take it with him into his coffin," he says, adding that cheaper rates might be arranged for nails difficult to reach and for those whose extraction is complicated, "or where the services of a dentist are required a few pfennigs would be enough."

The writer asserts that there are twenty-six tons of alder wood in the great "Iron Hindenburg," and that "when its intolerably ugly surface has been covered with metal there will be thirty tons of nails stuck in it."

Lure of Movies Fails to Move Heroine of Loos

PARIS, May 25.—Refusing offers from the movies and theatres for thousands of dollars, Emilienne Moreau, "the heroine of Loos," yesterday accepted a commission as a teacher in the French public schools.

While the Germans held Loos she continued her studies to become a teacher, and has also studied since coming to Paris. The President of the Commission of Public Instruction congratulated her for her hospital work, when the British took Loos, which won her the War Cross, and her steadfast determination to aid France as a school teacher.

Mlle. Moreau not only helped many British wounded in the storming of Loos, by establishing a first-aid station in her house, but shot down two German soldiers, who were firing on the station, with a British officer's revolver, and killed three more, who were also firing at the British wounded with hand grenades.

FAREWELL CONCERT OF 93RD BAND

Big Crowd Heard Enjoyable Programme in Victoria Park Yesterday Afternoon

Victoria Park was crowded yesterday afternoon when the band of the 93rd Battalion under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes played a farewell concert. That was a brilliant climax to a number of most enjoyable treats that the band has provided during the time that the battalion has been in Peterborough. Bandmaster Hughes had selected a splendid programme and his capable band gave a finished and artistic performance that caused mingled feeling of delight and regret—delight in the fine playing of the band and regret that the citizens of Peterborough will not have another opportunity here of listening to a concert from the musicians in khaki.

The two big numbers were the overture to "William Tell" and the grand selection from the works of Verdi, both of which were smoothly and confidently played. The "William Tell" number with its magnificent storm scene, frequent opportunities for exquisite solo work and its inspiring finale was splendidly handled while the Verdi selection which included excerpts from "Il Trovatore" "Il Traviata" and other of Vedriworks including such gems as the miserare and the Anvil Chorus was marked by a fine rendition. Other splendid numbers "Les Cloches de St. Malo" and the Hallelujah Chorus from "The Messiah" while the two marches "Dragon Guards and the "Stars and Stripes" were snappily played, the rendition of Sousa's march being particularly effective.

The two soloists Bandsman Gilbert with his trombone solo "The Death of Nelson" and Bandsman Waino with his cornet solo, "A Perfect Day" registered individual triumphs in their effective numbers playing with fine tone and technique. The band provided an admirable accompaniment to the two solos.

GASOLINE PRICES ARE LIKELY TO BE LOWER

Automobile owners and motor boat users will be interested in the following dispatch from New York:

New York, May 29.—Developments indicate that the crest of the wave in gasoline prices has been reached, for the time being at least. A large number of outlying stations in the vicinity of New York have cut the price from 27 cents a gallon to 25 cents a gallon, and a reduction in the price within the city limits is now looked for. This is the first time gasoline prices have been reduced since the upward movement began.

In this connection the local dealers state there has been no decrease in the price of gasoline in this city. One dealer intimated, however, that a drop in price in New York would eventually mean a drop here.

HOLLANDER ARRESTED IN NEW YORK ON STRANGE CHARGE

NEW YORK, May 27. — A man giving the name of Adolph De Leeuw, thirty-four years old, a native of Holland, was arrested Thursday night by Captain Tunney, head of the "Bomb Squad," of the New York police, charged with revealing the contents of Government documents and offering them for sale in violation of the penal law.

De Leeuw is accused of offering to reveal to Captain Guy Gaunt, naval attache of the British embassy, the contents of seven letters, four of which bore the seal of the Imperial German embassy at Washington.

Captain Tunney alleges that De Leeuw, whose arrest was acused by Captain Gaunt, confessed he offered the letters for sale because of financial embarrassment.

De Leeuw, Captain Gauntt charges, called on him last week and offered permission to photograph the letters upon payment of $900. Captain Tunney said De Leeuw's arrest followed his submission of a similar proposal to two detectives introduced to De Leeuw as British secret service agents.

De Leeuw told the police he was in partnership with Felix Malitz, in the cotton exporting business. He is said to have declared the letters were entrusted to him by Malitz for delivery to a man who was to sail for Holland. From Holland, De Leeuw claimed, according to the police, the papers were to have been smuggled into Germany.

LETTERS IN CODE.

The letters were in code, the police say, and bore the official seal of the Germany Embassy. Two were addressed, it is asserted, to Herr K Gallenback, Wilhelmtrasse, 71, Berlin, W.; two to Mrs. Heinie Heylman, Gottenberg, Sweden, and the others to Herr Direktor Lubbert, Bulowstrasse, 21, Berlin; Frau Ida Albet Maximilian Korso, Frohman, Berlin, and Julius Pintsch, A.C., 71 73 Andreastrasse, Berlin.

Malitz was located late last night by detectives who he accompanied to police headquarters, where he was questioned by Captain Tunney. He explained that he received the letters from a Mr. Hoffman, secretary to Dr. Hinrich F. Albert, commercial attache of the German Embassy. He said he had no knowledge of what the letters contained or whether they related to the business of the German Government.

Malitz was not detained by the police.

PROPHETIC AND BIBLE CONFERENCE IS OPENED WITH THREE SESSIONS

Large Audiences in St. Paul's Church Yesterday For Opening of Bible Study---Sessions Are Being Continued To-day---A Summary of Yesterday's Addresses.

The many nations and millions of people who are being affected by the world war in Europe with uncertainty as to how long the war will last, and relating to the conditions that will exist after the war, have been leading Christians the world over to study their Bibles and meet in conferences to find if the Scriptures throw any light on existing conditions. Such a conference opened yesterday in St. Paul's Presbyterian church. The addresses were full of interest. The speakers were Rev. John McNicoll, B.D., Principal of the Toronto Bible College, Rev. R. V. Bingham, Editor of the Evangelical Christian and Secretary of the Soudan Interior Mission of Toronto, and W. F. Coote of Hamilton. Mr. Coote is the Chairman of the Layman's Evangelistic committee of the Hamilton Methodist conference.

The conference is interdenominational in character. The subjects are arranged in an order that will help those who attend the conference to follow them to the best advantage. The meetings will last four days, with afternoon and evening sessions at 3 and 8 p.m. each day.

Yesterday morning Rev. Mr. McNicoll spoke on "The Plan of the Ages." In the evening Rev. Mr Bingham spoke on "The Cumulative Evidence of Christ's Return." A special service was held at half past eight at which Rev. Mr. MacNicol spoke on "The Mission and Hope of the Church." An outline of these addresses is here given.

More Coming

THE DIVINE PLAN OF THE AGES

A large audience heard Rev. Mr. McNicholl's address in the morning on "The Plan of the Ages". Many Christians, Mr. McNicholl said, seem to be unaware that the scriptures show that God has a divine plan which He has been carrying out in the ages that have passed and which is still in course of fulfillment. Basing his text on Ephesians 3:11, which read: "according to the Eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" or in the marginal reading of the revised version. "According to the purpose of the ages which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord", Mr. McNicholl gave an outline of the sever different ages described in the scriptures.

Mr. McNicholl showed that the Bible describes seven different dispensations or arches. We are believed to be living in the sixth of these dispensations and possibly nearing the seventh. In each of these dispensations God has revealed His plans with ever-increasing fullness to mankind. The first was the dispensation of Innocence when man and woman without knowledge of sin, were placed in a perfect environment and permitted to talk face to face with God but sinned and were driven from the garden. Thus, even with a perfect environment Man proved a failure. The next ages as described in Genesis is that of Individual Liberty or of Conscience. Men in this age knew that if they sinned they would be punished as they had a knowledge of good and evil. In this age the first cities were built, manufacturing was commenced and music developed Man sinned once more and to such an extent that the age ended with the flood, Noah and his family alone being saved.

The third dispensation was that of National Government. Certain authority was given to men they did not have before. With this period commenced the formation of the nations. In spite of the two previous failures mankind sinned once more by forming a confederacy to build a tower that was to reach to Heaven. The dispensation ended by God sending a confusion of tongues and scattering the nations who were sent forth and allowed to take their own way.

The fourth dispensation was that of Promise. God here picked out a chosen race, the people of Israel, which He purposed using as a divine means of ultimately blessing all the nations. If they served Him aright He would bless them and use them as a means of blessing the nations. Great promises to this effect were given Abraham. Abraham's descendants forgot these promises and wandered from the promised land and the age ended with the people of Israel as captives in Egypt for 430 years.

There then commenced the fifth dispensation, that of Law. In order that the people of Israel might have a clear knowledge of good and evil God gave them the ten commandments, the different ordinances for ceremonial worship and the tabernacle His glory dwelt in the tabernacle. In spite of the warnings of the prophets and of the history of the past dispensations the people of Israel neglected God and crucified the Messiah when He came. Because of that act God has put them aside during the present dispensation.

The age in which we live is the sixth dispensation or that of Grace. We do not have to offer sacrifices as did the people of Israel as an atonement for our sins as faith in Christ's atonement is all that is required. During this age God is calling out a people for His name. There is nothing in the Scriptures to indicate that this age will grow better or be better than previous dispensations. As revealed in Acts 15:13-17 after God has taken out a people for His name from the Gentiles the Jews will once more be restored to national favor. During this age the Holy Spirit is the guide of the Christians on earth and our method of communion with God. The prophecies indicate that even the church as a whole will not prove true to God's teachings any more than did the people of Israel and that the majority of mankind will not want to be indwelt by the Holy Spirit. This age is to have a definite close just as previous dispensations.

The seventh age will be that of the millenium, clearly foreshadowed in the Old Testament and confirmed in the New Testament. Christ will once more rule on earth when God will tabernacle with His people. Satan's power will be abolished. Blessings lost by the fall will be restored. The nations instead of fighting one another and being dispersed as they were in the early dispensation will all unite in worshipping the one true God. The different dispensations were only touched on briefly but were outlined clearly. During the conference special addresses are to be given on the present dispensation as well as on the millenium at the Wednesday afternoon session.

IS THE SECOND ADVENT NEAR AT HAND?

Rev. Mr. Bingham's great appeal was to the Scriptures, when he took up the cumulative evidence of the approach of the Second Advent.

"The political programme is well nigh complete," he said as he dealt with the succession of world powers which Daniel's vision indicated would occupy the stage, but he finally broke by the advent of heaven's King.

The prophecies concerning the Jew were shown to have reached a stage of fulfillment that warranted the highest expectation of the imminent realization of the great Messianic hope. The forecasts of Christ and the Apostles concerning the condition of the world and the state of the Church in the last days were being fulfilled to the letter.

The enlarging and urgent missionary propaganda of the Church was the final point that the speaker made as indicative of closing conditions as he quoted Christs words "This Gospel of the Kingdom must be preached in all the world as witness and then shall the end come."

In dealing with his subject on the cumulative evidence of the Second Coming of Christ, Rev. Mr. Bingham showed that just as the first advent was preceded by an ever increasing stream of prophecy so the second advent, the first prophecy of which was given by Enoch before the flood, had been heralded by even more definite promise and prophecy culminating in a whole book given by Christ from heaven.

THE SECOND COMING NOT PAST.

Mr. Bingham incidentally showed the fallacy of the idea that the promise of the second coming of Christ was already realized at death, or by the destruction of Jerusalem, by proposing to read those substitutes into the sacred text, where it says "the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout."

The idea that the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost fulfilled the prophecy was exploded by the fact that many of the predictions concerning Christ's return were given after the Pentecostal outpouring of the Spirit, both by the Apostles and by Christ, Himself, in His final revelation. In response to Christ's closing declaration "Behold I come quickly," it is written "The Spirit and the Bride say 'Come,' which would be ridiculous if the descent of the Spirit was synonymous with the second advent of Christ.

Mr. Bingham dealt with the cumulative testimony of the Church to the second advent, quoting leading theologians, divines, missionary leaders and evangelists in all branches of the Church who have held and declared this truth.

THE MISSION AND HOPE OF THE CHURCH.

The final address at last evening's conference was given by Mr. McNicoll on "The Mission and Hope of the Church."

Mr. McNicholl emphasized the fact that the only place where information can be obtained on this subject is from the Scriptures. The mission of the Church is not to prepare Christians for death or for heaven, as the Scriptures that Christians have already passed from death unto life as soon as they accept Christ as an atonement for their sins. Through the medium of the Holy Spirit they are enabled to sit with Christ in heavenly places. It is true that they may have to meet death and that they shall enter heaven. This, however, is not their hope or their purpose in life. Their hope is the second coming of Christ and that He may come before death. Their mission is to endeavour to lead people to Christ while yet there is time. There is nothing in the Scriptures to indicate that the world will all be converted before Christ comes. The Gospel is to be proclaimed and many will hear and be converted. Many, however, will not accept the message. Christ is now the Mediator of His people, but in due time He is coming as their Judge.

The address was a most impressive one.

To-night Rev. F. S. Weston of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Toronto speaks on "The Present Condition of the Jews, as related to Prophecy," and Mr. H. E. Irwin, K.C., of Toronto, on "For we are Saved by Hope." To-morrow afternoon and evening the speakers will be Rev. A. B. Winchester of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and Rev. Canon Howitt of Hamilton. Rev Canon Howitt's address, in the evening, is entitled "The Signs of the Times."

The more powerful an obstacle the more glory we have in overcoming it.—Moliere.

REMARRIES THREE DAYS AFTER OBTAINING DIVORCE

Philadelphia, Pa., May 27.—Mrs. Antonio Yanaga Stewart, formerly Miss Susan Brimmer Sturgis, obtained a divorce on Monday and this afternoon was married to Dr. Robert Grier Le Conte, president of the American Surgical Association, at her home here.

The divorce and the wedding came as a surprise to a majority of their friends. The divorce followed hearings before a master. The ground was incompatibility of temperament.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, and a cousin of Dr. Le Conte.

On February 1 Mrs. Le Conte and her first husband separated. Then the wife sued for divorce. The master recommended it and the Court on Monday confirmed it. Mrs. Le Conte, who is 45 years old, retains possession of her five children, three daughters and two sons. Mr. Le Conte is 51 years old.

Mrs. Le Conte, as one of the "four beautiful Sturgis sisters," has long enjoyed a reputation for beauty.

Dr. Le Conte has achieved fame as a surgeon. He was born July 17, 1865, at Long Branch, N.J., the son of John Lawrence Le Conte and Helen Grier Le Conte. He was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1885. He has served in the United States navy and the National Guard.

Dr. Le Conte is a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, a fellow in the American Surgical Association and a member of several medical and scientific societies and clubs.

Babcock Test For Milk and Cream In Force Next Year

The Dairy Standards Act passed at the 1916 session of the Ontario Legislature, and which comes into force March 31st, 1917, provides that:

"All milk and cream received at a factory shall be paid for:

(a) On the basis of its fat content as determined by the Babcock test

Or (b) on the basis of its fat content as determined by the Babcock test, plus the factor 2."

A conference was held in the office of the Minister of Agriculture on the 11th inst., for the purpose of discussing the best way of meeting the situation which will arise when this Act comes into force. Mr. Frank Herns of London and Mr. G. G. Publow of Kingston, Chief Dairy Instructors for Eastern and Western Ontario, as well as other officials of the Department, were in attendance. It was the general opinion that the testing of the milk would be the greatest problem.

At the present time about one-seventh of the factories in Western Ontario and one-twelfth of those in Eastern Ontario are buying milk upon quality basis as determined by the Babcock test. In Western Ontario the maker is, in nearly all instances, held directly responsible for the testing of the milk, and, in most cases, receives additional pay for this task. In Eastern Ontario a number of the makers are doing the testing, while in some districts a special man is employed for the work at so much per visit, the amount paid depending upon the number of patrons in the factory.

No doubt a number of makers are not at present qualified to do the testing, while others who are qualified, would prefer not to accept the responsibility. An independent person will, no doubt, have to be employed to do the testing in a number of factories, and the Department will be prepared to assume the responsibility of seeing that such persons are qualified for the work in hand. The factories concerned will, of course, pay for the services of this man on the basis of the actual cost, as is done at the present time where payment is being made on the butter-fat basis. Experience has shown that from $1.00 to $1.25 per patron for the season will cover the outlay.

Information will be collected throughout the summer as to the number of makers who will be qualified and willing to undertake the work of testing next year, and as to the various other phases of the work so that final conclusions, based on reasonably complete information may be reached in the Fall.

As soon as plans are further developed more definite announcements will be made.

Guelph Arbitration Case Heard By Judge Hoycke During Week

His Honour Judge Hoycke returned on Saturday from Guelph where he was conducting an arbitration between the municipality and some farmers concerning the purchase price of land which Guelph requires for its waterworks system. The owners of this farm land which provides a number of springs could not reach an agreement with the city and recourse was made to an arbitration.

Lineman Killed By Fall Of Pole

Charles McArthur of Campbellford Victim of Fatal Accident at Amherstburg

Windsor, May 27.—Crushed beneath a falling electric light pole in Amherstburg, Charles McArthur, aged 27 years of 7 Parent Avenue, Windsor, was almost instantly killed.

McArthur was a lineman in the employ of a hydro-electric construction company working down the river. He was standing under the pole and by mistake cut away the guy wires supporting it causing it to topple over on him.

He was dead before medical aid could be summoned. The body was sent to the home of the man's sister in Campbellford, Ont., for burial.

DEFENDANTS FREED IN MATTERS CASE

Woman and Two Men Acquitted of Conspiring to Get Control of Estate

CHICAGO, Ill., May 27.—Mrs. Dolly Ledgerwood Matters and two co-defendants, Charles T. Mellon and Harry Edwards, accused of conspiracy to foist a spurious heir on the Probate Court of Cook county, in order that Mrs. Matters might obtain control of the estate of her late husband, Frederick Matters, a banker, were found not guilty to-day.

There were two hearings of the case in the Probate Court. At the first Dr. Emile Beroard and Miss Dea Rosiers, a nurse of the Misericordia Hospital, Ottawa, Canada, when the alleged posthumous heir was born, testified that Mrs. Matters had given birth to a child. James Matters, a brother of Frederick Matters, contested the claim, and last December the physician and the nurse confessed that they had perjured themselves.

The asserted the child in question was born to Jessie Bryan, whose real name is Margaret Ryan. The Ryan girl testified that she was told that her baby was dead.

WORLD EVENTS IN THE LIGHT OF THE SCRIPTURES

Many Christians feel that the world events that are taking place, with such rapidity and on a scale unheard of before in the world's history, must have some special meaning for humanity. What is this meaning? Do the Scriptures throw light on it?

At the Prophetic Conference which opened yesterday in St. Paul's Church, the first contribution to these great questions being aroused in the public mind was made by Rev. John McNichol, B.D., and Rev. R. V. Bingham. (See report elsewhere in this issue.) To-night Rev. F. S. Weston is to speak on "The Present Condition of the Jews as related to Prophecy."

The Jew is the key to the Prophetic situation and no nation is figuring more prominently in this present war than the Jew. The restoration of the Jew to Palestine and Palestine to the Jew is linked by Scripture with the close of the age. Is that consummation near? Mr. Weston, who is a Baptist, speaks as an authority on thir matter. His book has run through edition after edition.

The other speaker of this evening, Mr. H. F. Irwin, K. C., is a Presbyterian lawyer, and has an interesting message on "We are Saved by Hope", which will show the practical bearing of prophetic truth for business and professional men.

The speakers at this Conference represent all the leading Protestant Denominations. Meetings will be held at 3 and 8 p. m. to-morrow and Wednesday. The speakers to-morrow will be Rev. A. B. Winchester, of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and Rev. Canon Howitt, of Hamilton. In the evening Canon Howitt will speak on "The Signs of the Times". Come and bring your friends and your Bibles.

THE PUBLIC IS CORDIALLY INVITED TO ATTEND ALL SESSIONS.

Famous Railway Magnate Dead

James J. Hill Passed Away This Morning at St. Paul

Examiner Special:

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 29.—James J. Hill, Canadian born railroad magnate, died at his home at 9.45 this morning, following an operation for infection of his thigh. He was born at Rockwood, near Guelph, in September, 1838, and lived there till he was eighteen.

The late Mr. Hill was conscious to the end. All his children, except one daughter, were present when he died. He leaves a fortune estimated at many millions. Mrs. Beard, one of his daughters, arrived in a special train, half an hour after the "empire builder" died. At his bed side were all of the other children, an the widow, Mrs. Hill, collapsed and is in an extremely nervous condition. The entire city of St. Paul immediately began preparations to honour the memory of Hill. The Northwest, considering him its greatest man, was ready to pay tribute in memorial ceremonies at every divisional point.

About sixty years ago to-day 'Jim' Hill was a penniless youth in Guelph, Ont. At his death he owned a majority of the stock of the following big corporations:

Great Northern Railway, North Pacific Railway; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway; Great Northern Pacific Steamship Co.; Northern Steamship Co., of the Great Lakes.

"The end came quickly," said an official statement. "Mr. Hill became unconscious a few hours before. There was no death agony.

"MICHIGAN SPECIAL" TO CHICAGO

New Train on the C. P. R. Starts on June 4th—A General Change of Time to Be Announced

A general change of time goes into effect on the C.P.R. on June 4th. Special attention is drawn to a new train called the "Michigan Special," which will leave Toronto at 11.50 p.m. each day and Detroit at 8.50 a.m., arriving in Chicago at 3.30 p.m. This train will have electric lighted standard sleeping cars from Toronto through to Chicago.

Out of Darkness at the Empire

A Stirring Play in Which the Beautiful Actress Charlotte Walker is the Star

Everyone loyal to the Empire should see what Britain has been doing and is doing in this great war.

The following is the synopsis:

Helen Scott, a beautiful young woman of society, is the owner of the Scott Cannery a business which nets her great profit but in the management of which she does not take any interest, placing her affairs in the hands of an uncle. Frequently the terrible conditions under which the women employed in the Cannery are compelled to work are brought to Helen's attention but she frivolously casts them aside.

While sailing one night in a small boat off the Florida coast, the craft is run down by a steamer and Helen, on her rescue is found to be seriously injured by a blow on her head. She recovers her physical strength, but her memory is gone and she cannot tell her name. Kind friends care for her and obtain a position for her in the Scott Cannery.

There she experiences the terrible working conditions which she formerly in the old life had refused to better. Harvey Brooks, a young superintendent, who is interested in bettering conditions, takes an interest in Helen. They fall in love. Slowly, Helen's memory returns and she at last declares herself the owner of the factory, and by promise of immediately eradicating the evils she thwarts a great strike which would have ruined her. Brooks, the superintendent, and Helen work out their scheme of betterment together.

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, May 29.—Great Northern Pref. sold up 1-4 at 11 at the opening of the stock exchange to-day in the face of reports of the condition of J. J. Hill. Northern Pac. was off nearly a point.

Price changes generally were slight, Chandler motor being an exception with an advance of 7.1-2.

HAILS WAR AS AID TO ALL WOMANKIND

ROME, May 25.—"It will not be necessary for women to smash windays and go to jail to get their rights when this war is over," said Miss Cristabel Pankhurst during her visit here for the purpose of forming a closer organization of the women of Italy with those of France and England.

"This war is helping the cause of women wonderfully," she continued. "We are helping the men with all our might, with all our strength, and I am sure they will appreciate this fact when the war is over. Besides, Europe then will be mentally and spiritually fifty years ahead of where it was before the war started. There has been an exaggeration, for instance, of the amount of physical destruction caused by it, but one cannot exaggerate the mental awakening it has brought, and this means a broader outlook on the position of woman.

"This mental male revolution was sorely needed, both in England and in Germany. I feel that in helping down Germany, as the women of England, France, Italy, and Russia are doing, by their physical work we are putting down the great enemy of womankind. The Kaiser, you know, has always frustrated the efforts of German women to rise from their subordinate position, and he typifies the attitude of the German men. At that, however, the German women will have to fight out their own salvation after the war, along with the men. They won't get any help from us. There has been too much internationalism heretofore. Now, it will be a matter for each nation to solve many of its own problems, and in particular the German nation.

"England has been driven out of conservatism at last. We women have shown Englishmen that we are worth something; that we are not inferior creatures. I am sure that if women had had a say in the conduct of the war England would have been ready quicker. One of our misfortunes has been that the young men, the open-minded men, have gone to the front to fight, leaving the old, slow-minded men in charge. Take the case of the effort to get steel helmets for the men, so that they might be protected from bullets, and especially from bits of exploding shells. After these helmets had proved useful in France, the old men in England were still discussing the advisability of using them.

"If women had been in charge of the supplying of their soldiers with protecting helmets, do you suppose they would have hesitated to manufacture them in a hurry? Women are too efficient for that. Besides, their very love would have urged them on.

"Possibly the largest lesson for men in this war, as regards us, is that women know how to do man's work, and often better than men themselves. English women are driving motor cars, are working in the factories, on the farms, everywhere. In England we have once more learned the lesson of the dignity of labour with the hands, and with woman's hands at that. To-day no woman in England, no matter what her rank, is afraid to work, and this is a lesson we in England will not forget after the war. That's one reason why I have always admired the people in the United States—they appreciate the honour of labour, of hard work, and are not ashamed of it. God pity them if their wealth makes them ever forget this truth.

"This dignity of labour, of woman's labour, is going to have a large influence on the marriage question, on the question of population. It has been asked: 'What will become of the young men of Europe of marriageable age after the war is over, when there are not enough husbands to go around or when the men feel themselves too poor to get married and assume the responsibilities of family life?'

"Well, the women who must go unmarried will bear their hard lot as they have always borne it; they will work and keep on contributing their services to the nation, in a greater degree than in the past. But we must admit that a happy marriage is the only sensible thing for any woman, and I think that the marrying man's fear of poverty will be gotten around in this way: Women are ready to work now outside their homes, there is no longer any stigma attached to it, and they will keep on doing so, joining their wages with that of their husbands to maintain the home."

"I Don't Want An Appeal Made For Me" Says Waite

NEW YORK, May 29.—Dr. Arthur Warren Waite has turned religious since he walked back to the tombs over the "Bridge of Sighs" after hearing the verdict that condemns him to the electric chair for murdering his wife's father, John E. Peek.

Waite asked to go to the tomb chapel Sunday. Permission was granted and he went twice, reading the Bible and following the service attentively both times. He read the Bible in his cell.

"I don't want an appeal made for me," said Waite. "I am guilty and the sooner I suffer my punishment the better."

WON'T NEED ANY HUN TRADE BAN

PARIS, April 28. — (Correspondence)— The proposed boycott, after the war, of German products in France and other countries of the entente might, until recently, have been looked upon as the manifestation of spirit that a reasonable peace treaty could overcome. The idea is now apparently so deeply rooted in the minds of individuals as to constitute a menace that may resist an sort of a peace treaty. The only official action regarding trade between citizens of France and the central empires applies only to the period of hostilities. Private initiative, however, has gone far in the direction of a permanent ostracism of merchandise from countries now at war with France. If it continues to develping along the same lines, it may make official action superfluous.

Articles of Paris.

Nearly every French trade corporation that has felt German competition in the past is not only spreading the doctrine of preference for articles made at home or by the French allies, but is organizing for the eventual boycott with an ardour of initiative that was rare in French business circles prior to 1914. It involves the systematic education of consumers as to what German articles and products they bought before the war without knowing it, and what French, British, Russian and Italian articles may replace them.

SHOOTS MARRIED WOMAN THEN ENDS HIS OWN LIFE

Tragedy on Park Place, Detroit, May Be Double Fatality.

DETROIT, Mich., May 29. —Half crazed by jealousy because his love was unrequitted and the woman of his heart preferred another man, George Kisler, 38 years old, fired two shots at Mrs. Mary Meddaughs, aged 25, as she was walking on Park Place to-night, fatally wounding her. He then turned the weapon upon himself and sent a bullet crashing through his brain. He was dead when the patrol arrived.

Mrs. Meddaughs, at the city hospital, made a statement to the prosecuting attorney at midnight in which she said she and Kisler had been friends from childhood. Kisler many times had urged her to marry him, but she wed another man instead. This occurred in Dayton, Ohio.

Two months ago the woman came to Detroit and Kisler followed and renewed his entreaties which fell on deaf ears as before.

Physicians say the wound is over the heart and doubt if Mrs. Meddaughs can live till morning.

ARRANGING EXTRADITION OF IGNATIUS T. LINCOLN

German Spy Will Face Several Serious Charges in England.

NEW YORK, May 27—Chief Inspector Ward and Inspector Brewer of Scotland Yard, London, accompanied by counsel to the British consulate-general here, visited United States Marshal James Power in Brooklyn to-day and arranged for the extradition of I. T. L. Lincoln, the self-styled German spy.

Marshal Power received the warrant for Lincoln's extradition signed by Secretary of State Lansing. It reads that he is wanted for trial in England for "forgery, utterances of forgery and obtaining valuable securities on false pretences."

It was not announced just when Lincoln will be taken from Raymond stret jail. Marshal Power said he will sail Saturday, but did not know on what ship.

Kitchen Work is Like Play

IF YOU USE

A GAS RANGE and WATER HEATER

The kitchen is clean and comfortable, the cook neat and happy.

Unexpected company brings no terrors, for a Gas Range makes it as easy to cook for a dozen as for a single person.

No trouble to keep help if a Gas Range is in the kitchen.

GAS COSTS LESS THAN COAL

Enough gas to cook a whole meal for an ordinary family costs but a penny or two, and when you use a Gas Range, it means a hot, steady, reliable, always-right fire

Grandmother's Gas Stove—if she had one, was like this.

This Range is ready for her Grand Daughter.

GALT'S FAREWELL TO THE 111th.

Galt, May 27. — Citizens of Galt, and other residents of South Waterloo who came into the city by street car, tendered a rousing send off this morning to Lt.-Colonel J. D. Clarke, O.C., and the 111th Battalion. The battalion boarded two trains at 8 and 8.30 a.m., respectively, for London, and thousands gathered at the C.P.R. station to see them off. At 7 o'clock on the Market Square a civic farewell was given when suitable addresses were delivered by Mayor A. M. Edwards, F. S. Scott, M.P., Z. A. Hall, M.P.P., Mayor L. E. Weaver of Hespeler, Mayor C. E. Hurlbutt of Preston, and Reeve Folsetter, of Ayr. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. H. Snelgrove, rector of Trinity Church. The presentation of a pair of binoculars was made to Lt.-Colonel Clarke, by R. B. Fewings, on behalf of a number of citizens.

Messrs. Schneider Bros., have just received word of the safe arrival in England of their nephew Max Rishor, who is now in training at Shornchiffe on a trip to Folkestone he was agreeably surprised to meet no less than twenty Peterborough boys.

On Saturday night last the managers of departments and the employees of Richard Hall and Son, dry goods store, assembled to bid goodbye and, at the same time, make a presentation to Lieut. Jack McNabb of the 93rd Battalion.

On behalf of the employees Miss Dawson read the following address, presenting Lieut. McNabb with a purse of gold:

Lieut. J. A. McNabb,
93rd Battalion.

In saying farewell to you before your departure from Peterborough on the first stage of your journey to the Enopean battlefields, we who have been associated with you in the peaceful channels of progress, felt that we could not allow you to go without expressing to you in some tangible form, our appreciation of your many good qualities. We have every confidence that you will live up to the best traditions of the Canadian soldier. We ask you to accept this purse, at the same time wishing you every success as an officer in the Canadian forces.

(Signed) S. D. Hall,
A. Dawson
M. Moore,
M. McMillne,
J. McIntyre.
J. J. Redmond,
R. Ross.

Lieut. McNabb made a suitable reply, expressing his appreciation of the splendid remembrance, and assuring them of the happy memories he would carry with him of his pleasant associations with the firm and employees of Richard Hall and Son.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 29. — It is stated that Col. A. T. Ogilvie, of the 15th Brigade Canadian Field Artillery, Victoria, B.C., will command Petawawa artillery camp this summer. He is one of the best known artillery officers in commission.

Gay Old Girl On Giddy Spree

NEW YORK, May 29.— Just because a giddy old girl wanted to take one fling at the Broadway white lights before she was retired to Michigan, perhaps for life, the New York Fire and Police Departments were called out to-day and only succeeded in pulling her away from the fascination of the "gold coast" with chains and block and tackle.

The old girl is Lucy, 36 years old and "spry as she was before the war." Lucy is an elephant. She hove in on a steamer yesterday, and early to-day was being herded toward a freight car when the lust for the cabarets overcame her.

Men tried cajolery, bribery with sweets, and brute force, but Lucy proved as obstinate as the other Broadway chickens and wouldn't be dismissed. A brick wall was her undoing. She drove squarely against, and before she could get away was in chains.

She was walked to the freight car to the tune, "I Want to Go Back to Michigan, Down on the Farm."

In general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes.—Ruskin.

Sinn Feiners Sniped At Banker As He Tried To Leave The Irish Capital

On Easter Saturday, two days before the first news of the Sinn Fein rebellion in Ireland, reached Montreal, there were unmistakable signs in and around the city of Dublin that there was "something" in the air, according to information contained in a letter received by a Montreal man from his father, Mr. P. J. C. Feeney, the manager of the Hibernian Bank in Kilkenny, Ireland.

Having occasion to visit the head office of the bank in Dublin on official business and intending to take advantage of the Easter Monday holiday, Mr. Feeney left Kilkenny on the Saturday morning previous and after having transacted his business by noon, went to Kingstown, a pretty little town, about seven miles from the capital and the Irish terminal of the small boats which ply between the island and Holyhead. It was at Kingstown that a number of troops landed from England to help in quelling the revolt and it was at Ballsbridge, a suburb of Dublin between Kingstown and the city proper that a battalion of the Sherwood Foresters, fresh from England, was ambushed and several soldiers and men killed and wounded before a well aimed machine gun routed the rebels.

It was while at Kingston that Mr. Feeney who had fallen in with a colleague and former friend, now manager of the Hibernian Bank branch in Naas, first noticed evidence of coming events. Hundreds of the Sinn Feiners in their rough and ready uniforms, were parading the streets, probably in preparation to the summons that they were to hold Easter manoeuvres. However, the volunteers continued to be in evidence in Dublin and the outskirts on Sunday, their appearance exciting no unusual comment, as they had frequently been out before and it was understood at least by the general public that there was to be a big field day on Easter Monday, which is regarded on the other side of the Atlantic as the first open air holiday of the year.

Mr. Feeney and his friend were stopping at the Metropole on Sackville street, which, according to press despatches was practically demolished by shell fire in the week of the uprising. The hostelry, one of the most famous in Dublin, stands next to the post office, a narrow street dividing the two buildings.

At noon on Monday, according to Mr. Feeney's letter, the rising was well under way. Street firing was in evidence on all sides and it was shortly after noon that the soon to be captured flag of the Irish republic was hoisted on top of the post office which was taken over by a large detachment of the Sinn Feiners.

Feeling that there were safer places than Dublin and ignorant when the truth of the rebellion was known, of what might be taking place in Kilkenny, in which afterwards several arrests were made, Mr. Feeney and his friend made their way towards the Kingsbridge station, the terminal of the Great Southern and Western Railway which runs through Kildare and Newbridge, the railway line stations of the Curragh Camp to Kilkenny Maryborough, an important junction point, and Cork, thereby linking up the east and the west of Ireland.

SOLDIERS THERE, TOO.

At the Kingsbridge station, Mr. Feeney and his friend found the military already in possession. This was about three o'clock on Easter Monday afternoon. They were not allowed into the station and when they asked how they could reach Kilkenny the officers in charge were at a loss to inform them, but gave them to understand that the railway system had been taken over for the conveyance of the troops from the Curragh Camp to Dublin.

Finding their departure through the Kingsbridge blocked Mr. Feeney and his friend crossed the bridge to the other side of the Liffey and endeavored to secure accommodation for the night in Ryan's Hotel. It was out of the question for them to go back to the Metropole.

All Monday afternoon and growing later into the evening, the firing grew in intensity. The hotel was filled to capacity and several people, including himself and his friend were glad to get even a chair upon which to sit out the night. Owing to the heavy firing in the districts held by the rebels and the artillery fire which started before daylight, sleep was impossible and all night sounds of the street battling could be distinctly heard.

The next morning, Tuesday, Mr. Feeney and his friend, by devious routes, succeded in reaching College Green, where is situated the head office of the Hibernian Bank. The office, as well as others in the neighborhood, was closed and there were but few people on the streets. The military was everywhere and there was occasional firing.

REPEATEDLY FIRED ON.

Passing through Grafton Street, up to Stephens Green, where they were repeatedly fired on, and only succeeded in reaching safety by dodging into doorways and being held up every minute or two by the soldiers who were already tightening their cordon, Mr. Feeney succeeded in reaching a telephone by which he obtained communication with the bank's officials, who advised him as railway communication was held up, to try and reach Kilkenny, 81 miles away, by automobile.

After great difficulty Mr. Feeney and his friend secured a car. The driver had but one gallon of petrol on hand but even it could not carry them very far the two bank managers made their get-away, the sound of firing being audible for miles outside Dublin.

At a small town on the road another gallon of oil was secured. This was all that could be sold to them. The second gallon carried the car to Naas, where Mr. Feeney's friend stepped off. Here some more gasoline was secured and with this the run was completed to Kilkenny. Parties of Sinn Feiners were met on the road but they caused no trouble and allowed the car to proceed without let or hindrance.

STOREKEEPER ARRESTED

In Kilkenny the Sinn Feiners were rounded up before they were able to do much damage. In the store of a well known citizen was found concealed a large consignment of rifles and ammunition. The citizen with his son was arrested. Other arrests, generally the sons of old established families who had been drawn into the rank and file of the Sinn Fein party, were taken in charge by the military, who also mounted guard over the general post office.

Two days after the outbreak in Dublin a column of a thousand regular troops arrived at Kilkenny. They were mostly from England and included infantry, cavalry and artillery.

Copies of the Irish papers published after the outbreak and sent to Montreal by Mr. Feeney, contain columns of interesting first hand stories of the rebellion. As an example of the grim relentless manner in which the military authorities set about quelling the revolt there is the story of one of the rebel leaders (since executed) who was one of those who came out of the Dublin post office with his followers and surrendered unconditionally.

On being made a prisoner by the military, the rebel exclaimed to the officer in charge:

"I want the best counsel there is in Dublin for my defence."

"You shall have the best counsel there is in the world," replied the officer as he sent an orderly for a priest.

Another story, this concerning a Mrs. McCann and her companion, a Miss Dwane, of Kilkenny; Miss McCann was lying ill in a Dublin hotel, when the rebellion broke out. Terrified she sent her friend to try and find a way for them to leave Dublin. The plight of the sick lady reached Connolly, one of the rebel leaders, who was wounded in the fighting and afterwards tried and shot. He at once sent Mrs. McCann a "safe conduct" through the rebel lines. They went to Kingstown and from there took a small boat which carried them to Skerries, a tiny fishing village, and safety.

Prince of Wales Is Captain "P.W."

When the Prince of Wales got short leave to go to Buckingham Palace to say "good-bye" to his parents and brothers and sister before going to the front, Prince John asked him: "What are you going to do when you get there, David?" (David being the name by which he is called at home).

"David" rubbed his chin and smiled, "I think I'll grow a beard for one thing," he answered.

Figuratively speaking, the Prince of Wales has 'grown a beard' since the war began—that is to say, he has ceased to be a boy and has become a man. The change is very apparent to all who come in contact with him. Always inclined to seriousness, he has taken his share in the war very seriously indeed. His staff work has included carrying despatches, acting as interpreter, superintending the making of trenches, and duty as assistant transport officer and he has been in imminent danger of death scores of times.

As captain, the Prince of Wales or "P. W." as they called him on the western front, goes to Egypt, and Egypt with the summer coming on is not exactly the spot people hankering after "cushy jobs" (as the army expresses it) pine for. But, then, as a certain Tommy writing home put it, "The Prince of Wales is not very big, but he has got a bigger head than a lot I know at home."

There is nothing aggressive about the personality of "P. W." but he has a quiet way of standing no nonsense.

One day at the front he was on duty watching transport waggons being filled. Packages were being thrown up to the man in the waggon whose duty it was to count them out loudly, pausing as each fresh 25 packages were reached. The man in the wagon "tried it on," with the Prince;; to save himself trouble he should have been saying "20." But it did not work.

"Twenty-five already" said the Prince blandly. 'I make it 20. One of us is wrong. Just unload the whole waggon and begin from the beginning again."

LACROSSE

The team had an excellent workout on Thursday. There were about a dozen juniors and six of the seniors out. The practice nights will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday. All the boys intending to turn out should be on hand. While the Juniors are practicing earnestly the seniors have been lagging somewhat. Practice at the Oval to-night. The convenor of this interesting district called a meeting for last Friday and mailed his notification to a past officer who was unable to forward same to the official in charge. The team management is endeavouring to make arrangements for another meeting to consider the matter.

A communication from Jas. E. Dundas, Secretary of the O. A. L. A., through Pte. E. Dillon, who has entrusted Harry Halpin with the duties of the local representative during his absence, states that the Association has grouped Peterborough, providing there are four teams, in a juvenile group by themselves. There will be medals given to the district winners, which will be an incentive to the Peterborough boys to compete for.

Any organization desirous of entering should consule Harry Halpin. Wake up boys, and get into the good old game.

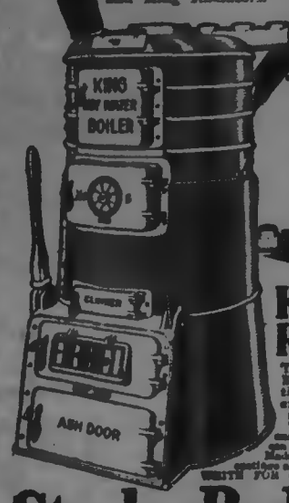
The Right Way to Heat a House

The Right Way to Heat a House is by HOT WATER. This is PROVED by years of EXPERIENCE, and except for steam in large buildings, hot water is cheapest, best, and practically the ONLY ABSOLUTELY SATISFACTORY method of house heating. Why? Because, water can be regulated to any temperature to suit any kind of weather, and water holds heat longest. The constant, unfluctuating radiation of heat from a King Hot Water Radiator prevents drafts and "cold zones." Blizzards don't affect Hot Water Heating. There is no cold, drafty, "North East" room in a house heated by a KING HOT WATER BOILER. Hot water reaches every room, and every room is heated alike. This is very important for sanitary reasons and assures freedom from colds and from most sicknesses that colds prepare the way for. A Hot Water System is certainly the Right Way to Heat a House, and the "right system" means the King Boiler and King Radiators.



The Greatest Known Heat Maker & Coal Saver

If one Heating System Can Save Fuel, compared with all others, it is the cheapest system. If, as is the case with the King Hot Water Boilers and Radiators, the system also gives the most and the steadiest heat, it is not only the cheapest, but the best. King Boilers and Radiators are both economical and efficient. One of the principles that makes for efficiency is illustrated this way: Take two vessels—one holding an inch of water, the other two inches of water, and set them over a fire. It is quite plain that the less quantity will heat faster. That principle is followed in the King Boiler. The wall of water surrounding the fire pot and continuing all through the water sections is only about half the quantity that the waterways of other makes require, and, therefore, water in the King Boiler is twice as quick to heat and twice as quick to circulate. The quicker the house is heated, the sooner the Boiler drafts may be turned off and fuel saved. These very important advantages are special features of the King Boiler and Radiators, and make the King Hot Water Boiler pay for itself in a short time by the money it saves in reducing coal bills.

King Hot Water Boiler

Insist upon your local dealer giving you prices

EASE OF OPERATION

The extraordinary ease with which the King Boiler can be operated is another very commanding feature. You can stand upright (note the position of removable shaker) when shaking the furnace, and the ash pit allows a full-size ash pan. You should investigate the "King" when looking for the "right" Boiler.

King Radiators

The moulding methods employed in making King Radiators make an imperfect section practically impossible. Instead of wooden patterns which expand and contract under variations of humidity and temperature, we use IRON PATTERNS.

We subject every section and radiator to a water pressure of 100 lbs., and as the usual water pressure is only 60 lbs., you can readily see how we can back every King Radiator with our UNQUALIFIED GUARANTEE. Made in every conceivable size and shape for any position. Clean, compact, quiet and efficient. Architects and heating engineers will be glad to call, confer and advise with you. Let us help you with your plans.

Mayor Requests Citizens To Give Soldiers Grand Farewell

Mayor Duffus asked The Examiner this afternoon to remind the citizens that Peterborough's Battalion, the 93rd, departs for Kingston at 9:30 to-morrow morning, and expressed the hope that as many as possible turn out to give them as hearty a farewell as possible. This will be the last opportunity of seeing them together as a unit for how long no one can even surmise. They are Peterborough's own men, and they have already shown themselves worthy of the best we can do for them.

CZAR NICHOLAS THE REAL HEAD OF HIS ARMY

H. Hamilton Fyfe writes to the London Daily Mail from Petrograd:

A well-knit, slight figure, in a long brown military overcoat and the usual Russian soldiers' cap, came briskly out and ran down the steps almost before the sentries had time to bring their rifles to the salute. He acknowledged it by a cheery wave of the hand. Then he joined a little boy who was playing with a large dog, tempting it to sniff at snowballs and then squashing them over its too inquisitive nose. The little boy was in exactly the same plain, workman like uniform, high boots and all. Off they went together down the street of the little town "somewhere in Russia"—The Emperor and his son.

In the small house from which he came, the Emperor has passed most of his time since he became Generalissimo of the Forces of the Empire in September last. He lives in two rooms, works in one, sleeps in the other, and he is quite content, for one of the keynotes in his nature is simplicity. He has no love for the trappings and the suits of his Imperial state. This plain soldier's uniform is his usual wear. He dislikes having to appear in full dress uniforms, laden with gold embroidery, and to cover his chest with decorations.

Life at the "Stavka," so the Russians call field headquarters, suits him, therefore, well. He is busy. He escapes from tedious pomps and ceremonies. The pressure of internal problems is relieved. Every morning about 9 o'clock he walks to General Alexeieff's office and there, with maps and sheaves of telegrams reporting the latest movements and probabilities, works till between 12 and 1. It would be foolish to pretend that he directs the operations himself. But he follows them with minutest care. He knows exactly where every division is, every battalion, every regiment even. He has a good head for geography, and a good memory. He can keep in his mind an accurate plan of the positions of the opposing forces upon the while immensely long Russian front. Thus his comments are often suggestive and his good memory helpful in saving time.

About 1 o'clock the Emperor returns to his quarters to lunch. He always has a few guests. Our British attache, at the Stavka, General Hanbury-Williams, is a favourite here as everywhere, and is very often invited. The Czar likes talking to Englishmen. "They do not make me feel all the time that I am Czar." He often surprises his guests by the wide extent of his general knowledge. Not only is he industrious in "getting-up" all subjects with which he feels that he ought to be acquainted. There are a great many in which he takes genuine interest. He is quite modest in his use of what he knows. He does not lay down the law or enjoy putting others right. He would, in truth, rather listen and learn than talk himself. When he does take part in discussion he offers his views almost with deference. His quiet, courteous habit of speech never changes. This contributes largely to the charm of manner which wins for him not only the liking but even the affection of those who are brought into close relations with him.

"He looks one so straight in the eyes," one of them told me. "He is so obviously sincere and kindly. No one ever had better intentions or tried harder to do his duty in any sphere, however exalted or however humble."

Count Witte knew his Emperor's character and once said shrewdly: "If I took office again I should steer a Liberal course. Not because I am a Liberal. Far from it, I am a believer in Autocracy. But for Autocracy one needs an Autocrat."

Tries to Do Things.

Peter the Great was the kind of Monarch Count Witte wanted. He had vast energy and no scruples. His head was full of plans, and he made his people accept them by brute force. He was troubled neither by doubts nor fears. There is little of Peter about Nicholas II.

Not that he is lacking in decision when occasion demands it. Often when he is told of something which needs doing he immediately makes it his own business to see that the things is done—if possible. Sometimes it is not possible. Then he straightforwardly admits that he is powerless, and with humor sketches the obstacles in the way. His temper is equable, but he gave a very vigorous and decisive answer when in the troublous times of 1905 he was urged to send some of his property out of the country so that whatever happened in Russia, it might be safe. "For what do you take me?" he asked angrily. "I shall stay here, and, if necessary, die here. Not a kopeck shall go." He can show healthy resentment too when he feels that he has cause to take offence.

This, however, is not a side of the Emperor's character which his guests at the Stavka see. They find him an interested listener, a master of detail in the matters which come especially under his notice; a pleasant, unaffected companion without a trace of pomposity, an always kindly host. After lunch and after dinner, both simple meals, at which the Emperor drinks no wine, he makes a point of speaking to each one of his guests separately before he goes off in the afternoon for a drive and a walk in the country; in the evening, to work again.

"Will Never Leave Off."

In spite of his years and his two decades of reigning, there is still in the Czar's manner a touch of shyness. He shows no sign of fear or suspicion. I recollect that the first time I saw him at close quarters—it

Marriage Licenses Issued

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The many friends of Mr. Wm. Snowden will regret to learn that he is seriously ill.

Miss M. Browne of Chicago is the guest of her sister, Mrs. D. Allison, Water Street.

Dr. W. A. McFall was in the city Saturday, having attended the funeral of the late Dr. W. Patterson at Norwood.

Mr. R. A. Winter, son of the late Chief Justice Sir James Winter and Lady Winter, of St. John's, Newfoundland, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Routley for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frame, of Allandale, Simcoe county, are in the city for a day or two on an auto tour, to end at Port Hope, Mrs. Frame's home town.

Mrs. George Dunoon of Beloit, Wis., is in the city on a visit with Mrs. Chas. Weslake, Brock street. Mrs. Dunoon has been in Cobourg attending the funeral of her sister, Mrs. E. A. Haisley of Winnipeg.

The marriage took place in Denver, Colorado, on Thursday, May 25th, of Eva Marian, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David J. Rogers, Jameson avenue, Toronto, and Mr. William Claude Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Campbell, Keene, Ont.

Mr. Wm. Lukey of Chicago, has been in the city for the past few days visiting with his cousin, Mrs. H. Hutchinson, Sheridan street. Mr. Lukey is an old Peterborough boy, but has not been in the city for over 20 years. He was greatly impressed with the growth and appearance since that time. Mr. Lukey returned home on Saturday.

The engagement is announced of Ayres Katharine, eldest daughter of Rev. W. and Mrs. Peacock, Perth, Ont., to John McIntyre Douglas, Lieutenant in the 130th Regiment, Perth, son of the late Major J. W. and Mrs. Douglas, the marriage to take place quietly early in June. —Toronto Globe.

COMPLIMENTS FOR 93rd BATTALION

"The 93rd Battalion leaves to-morrow and I have nothing but bouquets to hand them for their splendid conduct while they have been organizing and training in Peterborough," said License Inspector Jos. Stewart to-day. "They were gathered in from all parts of the county, and they are a credit to the name Peterborough.

"I don't think," the Inspector continued, "you could get together another thousand men at any time who would conduct themselves better than the 93rd. There hasn't been a complaint come to my ears on any point. The women of the city have not been molested, there has been no drunkenness, and in short the 93rd boys have splendidly behaved themselves."

The departure of the Battalion seems to be moving citizens generally, as of course it should. One professional man told The Examiner this morning that he had a recent conversation with a Toronto man who had seen most of the Queen City battalions, and who said of the 93rd after observing them on parade several times, that they were not surpassed in Toronto, few battalions in that city could really compare with them, and most of them were not in the same class at all. There you have two compliments, one to the conduct of the men off duty by the License Inspector, the other from a Toronto visitor as to their appearance as a unit on the march.

MILITARY NEWS

The Sergeants of the 93rd Battalion had their last meal in the Sergeants' mess at the Armouries, at noon to-day. This afternoon the equipment is being packed to be sent to Barriefield.

The 109th Battalion of Lindsay passed through Peterborough to-day via C.P.R. to Barriefield Camp. It took two trains to transport the Victoria and Haliburton County unit.

SERGT. COPPICK HOME.

Sergt. John Coppick, a Peterborough member of the 39th Battalion C.E.F., returned on Saturday, invalided home from England on account of physical disability after training service at Sandling Camp. Sergt. Coppick enlisted here early in 1915, with the 57th detachment to the 39th Battalion. Sergt. Coppick has been finally discharged after being in hospital for some time in England.

Anglo-Russian Alliance Will Not End With War Says Foreign Minister

New Era of Unexampled Development for Poles is Predicted ---Pact For All Time Seen by Sazonoff.

LONDON, May 29.—"The absolute accord between Great Britain and Russia means that the Alliance formed in time of war against a common enemy has become an alliance for all time."

Thus spoke Sergius Sazonoff, the Russian Foreign Minister, in an interview with The Times' Petrograd correspondent.

"The alliance made by the Governments has now become an alliance of the hearts of the people," continued M. Sazonoff. "In this friendship I see the realization of the fondest dream of my career, for in the true friendship of England and Russia the peace of the world is assured for many generations. We have thus potentially won the war, although the struggle itself may continue for years. Crystalization of the idea that England, France and Russia cannot be alienated establishes the certainty that the Central Powers have lost, no matter how they may by fortitude and internal sacrifice postpone the inevitable day of the admission of their failure.

SWEDEN LEARNS TRUTH.

"With the realization of the Entente's amity and unity must come also the permanent dissipation of the mischievous idea that Russians are a people of ambitions and aggressive design, planning to advance their own aims at the expense of Europe. Nothing is farther from the Russian character. With our southern outlet made irrevocably secure in perpetuity, with the legitimate growth of and development of our economic and industrial life secured, with our boundaries suitably adjusted and our fellow Slavs assured of their due, the destinies and aims of Russia in the west are fulfilled. We can then turn to the true aspirations of the Russian Government and people, namely, the development of our vast Empire and the furthering of the interests of the nation's peoples embraced within our empire.

"The realization of this solemn truth must demolish the fallacies and fictions heretofore spread by enemies regarding the alleged Slav peril to Europe, and must bring convincing evidence that the Russian does not stand as a menace to Norway, Sweden or other neighbours. I hope the Swedes aspirations whatever that in the slightest way infringe on their national life, aspirations whatver that in the slightest way infringe on their national life, and I hope the recent rumours regarding the Aland Islands, which now happily are dissipated, will prove the last error of suspicion of the Swedes regarding Russia."

POLISH AUTONOMY.

M. Sazonoff, referring to the promises of Polish autonomy, said: "No one deprecates more than the Russian Government the sufferings which have come to Poland and the Polish refugees from the German scourge. His Majesty, the Emperor, has been so moved at the distress of his Polish subjects that the greater demands for human sympathy have swept aside military aspects and he has freely given permission for widespread relief work to be conducted among them by the Rockefeller Commission, for it seemed better to him that there should occur a leakage in the relief provisions than that a single Polish subject should suffer unnecessarily. The Poles cannot expect that in this life and death struggle we will be able to outline in full our programme for Poland's future, but that Poland will receive a just and equitable autonomy in the greatest degree, adjusted to their future life and their economic and industrial development, is certain. The Poles and the friends of the Poles may therefore look forward to the Russians for a dawn of a new era, and a period of unexampled development which will follow the inevitable successful conclusion of the war."

An Actress May Become Duchess

It is close to 10 years since there was a Duchess in Great Britain who came from the stage, and the possibility of May Etheridge, formerly of the Shaftesbury Theatre, finally wearing the strawberry leaves as Duchess of Leinster is, therefore, of far more than ordinary interest. Three years ago she was the "neat little, sweet little, pajama girl" at the Shaftesbury, twenty-one years old, and on the stage since she was thirteen. Lord Edward Fitzgerald, the second younger brother of the Duke of Leinster, also twenty-one, fell in love with her, and in the manner of the honourable men of his house, he asked her to become his wife. To break up the match he was "kidnapped" by his relatives and taken out of the country. Allowed to return by promising to break the engagement, he published a denial of Miss Etheridge's announcement— and then, a few days later, quietly married her when, figuratively speaking, the family back was turned.

His second elder brother, Major Lord Desmond Fitzgerald, of the Irish uards, who gave up his life on the French battlefield a few days ago, was a bachelor, and, as the Duke of Leinster is likewise a bachelr. Lord Edward Fitzgrald is the heir presumptive to his brother and to the premiar dukedom in Ireland. He has a baby son, so that in the event of his own death before his brothers—supposing of course, that the Duke himself des not marry and leave a son—the former May Etheridge will be the mother of a Duke of Leinster, if she herself does not become Duchess.

There have been so many lovely ladies in England who have stepped off the stage to wear the robes of a Peeress that a history has been written on the subject.

Highly Praised In Reports For Their Efficiency

Canadians Acquit Themselves Creditably Under Fire—All Enemy Attacks Severely Repulsed

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 30.—Canadian artillery is highly praised in official reports for efficiency under fire.

PARIS, May 30.— All enemy's attacks to gain positions are severely repulsed around the Verdun district.

PARIS, May 30.—France gratefully declined Britain's offer of troops to aid in the defence of Verdun.

TRURO, N.S., May 30.—Lieut.-Col. Allen of this city has been cashiered for self inflicting wounds at the front, but demands a new trial.

LONDON, May 30.— Lloyd George has ordered that all munition workers' holidays be cut off for the present.

SERIOUS FLOODS IN WEST.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 29.—Reports of serious floods in the vicinity of Lake of the Woods, near the International Falls, and its tributaries were received by State Auditor Preuse to-day.

So threatening has rising waters become that dynamiting of several dams operated by Backus interests is under consideration.

At Fort Francis, on the Canadian side of the lake, rising waters have encroached on streets and invaded some buildings.

At International Falls and Spooner similar situations prevail. James A Tawney, Member International Waterways' Commission, is now in the flooded country, and in a telephone message said the situation was serious. Still raining and waters continue to rise.

Baldness is caused by a microbe which destroys the hair root and closes the pores. The Rexall "93" Hair Tonic arrests this process. Sold at all Rexall Drug Stores, 50c and $1.00 bottle. McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne.

KANSAS WOMEN GRAB OFFICES; MEN UP IN AIR

TOPEKA, Kas., May — Many Kansas men who have had their eyes on political jobs for some years are worrying right now. Too many women are getting into Kansas politics.

What is more they are getting the jobs and have been holding them so successfully that there isn't much chance for a man to break in.

A good many Kansas men voted for suffrage for the women with the idea that the women would vote and maybe stir up trouble in some city elections. They had no idea that the women would be seeking the jobs the men had believed their own particular prerogatives.

More women than men in Kansas have asked for seats in the Republican and Democratic national conventions this year. Gov. Arthur Capper, Fred Stanley, national committeemen, and members of the delegations have had more than a thousand requests from women for seats in the convention.

129 Women Seek Offices.

There isn't any chance to give so many women seats, but the state politicians are afraid that to refuse a woman a seat may make an active political enemy who will cause trouble in the primary in August and the elections in November.

There are 129 women already actively engaged for county offices. One woman is in the race for congress and two are campaigning for state senator. It is probable that there will be a dozen women candidates for the legislature.

Kansas has tried women officials for several years. Even before the women could vote there were numerous women county superintendents of schools, one or two county treasurers, clerks of the District court and county clerks. Two women were appointed probate judges to succeed their husbands and these women were later elected.

Few Women Defeated.

Electing women to office has often enabled one political party or fraction to beat some man and then it was discovered that the women couldn't be pried away from the jobs. In only two instances have women candidates been defeated for county offices when they were up for second and even third and fourth year terms.

There is ample reason for he faith of the ordinary voter in women holding office in Kansas. The ordinary voter doesn't stand around and talk politics most of the time. He is busy with his farm or business, and occasionally visits some county office to transact some local business. When he goes into the office of a man it is usual to find one to a dozen political parasites sitting around talking politics.

If the official recognizes the caller as an influential citizen or thinks he might be, the official hastens to attend to the callers' needs. If the caller is a common citizens, he may have to wait until the official finishes the conversation of the crowd.

Women Attend to Duties.

If the common citizen is being waited upon and an influential citizen appears, the official generally quits the ordinary man and attends to the business of the man the official thinks can produce votes.

But the citizen is treated entirely differently in the office run by a woman. There are no political parasites and everybody is working. The caller has his business taken care of in turn and with dispatch, and he can go home feeling that he has had a square deal and that the money he paid in taxes is well spent.

There never has been a woman official in Kansas who defaulted or embezzled any funds or who was short in the public accounts. There are a dozen or so men officials now in the Kansas penitentiary for defalcations.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use feed the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefit.

Salt meat is not so nourishing as fresh meat and should not form a large part of the diet.

If your thread insists in knotting, unthread your needle and thread it from the other side.

A teaspoonful of baking powder to every four eggs will make an omelet of wondrous lightness.

When making cornmeal mush do not thicken it too much or it will be harsh and hard to eat.

Save all materials left over from meals; they will make side dishes to help out with the lunch.

LIQUOR ESCAPING FROM THE POLICE

Bottles Seen Cooling Under Tap in City Hall.

WINDSOR, May 29.—Another mystery has been added to the records of the Windsor police department through the inability of the police commission to locate a quantity of beer and wihsky which disappeared from police headquarters in the city hall after it had been confiscated by License Inspector Pacaud from Stephens Inn.

The police commission, which consists of Judge J. O. Dromgole, Mayor Jackson and Crown Attorney J. H. Rodd, held a third session in the case this afternoon, and at the conclusion the mysterious "evarporation" was as far from solution as ever.

Among the witnesses this afternoon was Sergeant William Giles, who described how Night Sergeant Cade had told him several times that "another bottle is missing."

Louis Chilver, a temperance worker, who is also city engineer, testified to having seen bottles which resembled the usual beer receptacles cooling off beneath the tap in the boiler room at the city hall. He could not be certain that it was beer, however.

Another session of the commission will be held next Wednesday.

SWEDEN IS DEFIANT.

STOCKHOLM, May 30.—Officials of the Swedish Government are struggling with the task ofinterpreting a new law known as the "war trade act," which, according to the foreign view of the situation, is likely to have an opposite effect to that which was intended. The representatives of American firms say the new law is seriously handicapping them and may shut off a large part of the trade of America with Sweden.

The law specifically prohibits any one in Sweden from making agreements with foreign Governments covering the disposition of imported goods after reaching Sweden, especially with reference to products manufactured from imported raw materials. It provides that all such agreements must be made through the Government Trade Commission. As a condition in its blockade England lets nothing into Sweden unless it is covered by a guarantee that the goods are for use in Sweden only and that no part of the materials or any goods manufactured from them shall be sold to any country at war with England or to anyone likely to resell to such countries. Even the guarantee only holds good when firms arranging shipments are known and approved by the British authorities.

A famous English physician is quoted as saying: "I can cure the worst case of insomnia in this manner: — When the patient has retired give her a heaping bowl of bread and milk with just a dash of salt to season it. This will draw the blood from the head to the stomach, it will quiet the nerves, and put the entire body in a healthy glow, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the patient falls into a healthy, restful sleep."

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"Well, what can you suggest?" How else did he get it?" Elsa was frankly sceptical and clung to her own theory.

"He might have come aboard for something else, mightn't he, and picked up the mirror just incidentally?"

"He might have, yes, but what else would bring him there?"

Code sat rigid for a few minutes. He had such a thought that he scarcely dared consider it himself.

"It's all clear to me now," he said in a low, hoarse voice. "Nat came aboard to damage the schooner so that he would be sure to win the second race."

"Code!" The cry was one of involuntary horror as Elsa remembered the tragedy of the May. Hate Nat though she might, this was an awful charge to lay at his door.

"Then he killed his own father, if what you say is true!" she added breathlessly. "Oh, the poor wretch. The poor wretch!"

"Yes, that solves it," went on Code who had hardly heard her. "That solves the entries that Michael Burns made in his ship's log before he went to St. John on his last business trip. Nat swore that he could not lose, and the old man who was honest enough himself must have wondered what his son was up to.

"This mirror proves that Nat must have been aboard the schooner secretly; what he told his father and his eagerness to bet with me on a proposition that seemed foolhardy on the face of it clinch the thing in my mind. The misguided fool! Tinat, Elsa, is an example of how low a man will go who has been spoiled and brought up without the slightest idea of self-control."

"Why, you are preaching to me, Code," laughed the girl, and he joined her. But she sobered in a minute.

"This is all very fine theory," she said, "and I half believe it myself, but it's worthless; you haven't a grain of proof. Tell me, have you ever thought over the details of the sinking of the May?"

"Only once," groaned Schofield. "and I—I hate to do it, Elsa. I'd rather not. Every time that I think of that awful day I sweat with sheer horror. Every incident of it is engraved on my brain."

"But listen, Code, you must think about it for once, and think about it with all your mind. Tell me everything that happened. It is vital to our case; it may save the whole thing from being worthless. Even if we get nothing we must make the effort."

Code knew that what Elsa said was true. With an effort he focused his mind back on that awful day and began.

"There was a good sea that day," he said, "and more than half a gale out of the northwest. If it had been any other day I shouldn't have taken the old May out at all, because she was loaded very deep. But the whole trip was a hurry call and they wanted me to get back to Mignon with the salt as soon as I could.

"Old Burns saw me on the wharf and asked if he could go along as passenger. I said he could, and we started early in the morning. Now that day wasn't anything unusual, Elsa. I've been in a lot worse gales in the May, but not with her so deep; but I didn't think that anything would happen.

"Everything went all right for three hours, with the wind getting fresher all the time, and the vessel under four lowers, which was a pretty big strain on any schooner. As I say she should have stood it, but all of a sudden, on a big lurch, the fore topmast that hadn't a rag on her broke off short and banged down, hanging by the guys. With one swipe it smashed the foregaff to splinters and half the canvas hung down flapping like a great wing.

"I couldn't understand it. I knew the topmast was in a weakened condition, but not as rotten as punk, and I supposed my foregaff was as solid a piece of timber as ever went into a vessel.

"But listen!" as Elsa started to speak. "That isn't all. The flapping canvas, with part of the gaff, pounded around like the devil let loose for the ten seconds before we couldn't loosen the halyards and lower away the wreckage, but in that time it had parted the mainstay in two like a woman snipping a thread."

"Mind that, Elsa, a steel mainstay an inch thick. I never heard of one parting in my life before. Things were happening so fast that I couldn't keep track of them, and now, just at the crucial moment the old May jibed, fell off from the wind, and went into the trough of the sea. A great wave came then, ripped her rudder off (I found this as soon as I tried to use the wheel) and swept the decks, taking one man.

"Meanwhile the mainmast, with one stay gone, was whipping from side to side like a great loose stick. I put the wheel in the becket and in one jump released the main'l throat halyards, while another fellow released the peak. The sail came down on the run in the lazy jacks and the men jumped on it and began to crowd it into some kind of a furl.

"I jumped back to the wheel and tried to bring her up into the wind, but I might as well have tried to steer an ocean liner with a sculling sweep. Not only was her rudder gone, but the tiller ropes were parted on each side. It was damaged beyond repair!

"Once I read in school the funny poem of an American named Holmes. It was called the 'One Horse Shay,' and it told about an old chaise that, after a hundred years of service, suddenly went to pieces all at the same time and the same place. Even in that time of danger, the memory of the 'One Hoss Shay' came to me, and I thought that the May Schofield was doing exactly the same thing, although only half as old."

"And then what happened?" asked Elsa, who had sat breathless through Code's narrative.

"There's not much more to tell," he said, with an involuntary shudder. "It was too much for the old girl, with that load in her. She began to wallow and drive towards the Wolves that I had caught a glimpse of through the scud. She hadn't got half way there when the mainmast came down (bringing nearly everything with it) and hung over the starboard quarter, dragging the vessel down like a stout hanging to a duck's leg.

"After that it was easy to see she was doomed. We chopped away at the tangle of wreckage whenever we got a chance but that wasn't often, because in her present position, the waves raked her every second and we had to hang on for dear life.

"And then she began to go to pieces—which was the beginning of the end. All hands knew that it was to be every man for himself. We had no life preservers, and our big dory had been smashed when the wreckage came down."

Code's face was working with suppressed emotion and Elsa reached out her hand and touched his.

"Don't tell me any more," she said; "I know the rest. Let's talk about the present."

"Thanks, Elsa," he said gratefully. "How long have you thought that the schooner was a second 'one hoss shay?'"

"Until this talk with you. I would never have thought anything else. Is it the logical thing to think, isn't it? All my neighbours at Freekirk Head, except those who believe the evil they hear, have told me half a dozen times that that is what must have happened to the May. She had lived her life, and that last great strain, combined with the race the week before, was too much for her. I simply could not explain those things happening."

"Yes; but you can now, can't you?" she asked coolly.

Reluctantly he faced the issue, but he faced it squarely.

"Yes, I can. Nat expected me to sail the May in a race, so he weakened my topmast and mainstay. Of course when there is sport in it you set every kite you have got in your lockers, and you know, Elsa, I never took my mains'l in yet while there was one standing in the fleet, even ordinary fishing days."

"I know it; you've scared me half to death a dozen times with your sail-carrying."

"And mind, Elsa, I'd been warned by all the wiseacres in Freekirk Head that my stunts would carry away sometime in a gale of wind. Nat banked on that, too, and it shows how clever he was, for ever since the May sank I've had men tell me I shouldn't have carried four lowers that day.

"He planned to weaken me where I needed sail most and he succeeded. Why, Elsa that topmast must have been sawed a quarter of the way through, and that mainstay as much again. I don't really believe that he did anything to the gaff; it appeared to be the natural result of the topmast's falling, but the damage he did resulted in the wreck of the schooner——"

"And the death of his own father. Yes, Code, we've got him where he is probably the wretchedest man in the world. Fury and hurt pride made him injure the May so he would be sure to win the second time, and instead of that fate intervened, sent you on the cargo voyage, and killed his father. Now, it is perfectly plain to me why he is charging you with all these crimes."

"Why?"

"Nat is a weak nature, because uncontrolled, and when weak natures do wrong they suffer agonies of fear that they will be found out. Nat committed this double crime in a momentary passion. Then as the weeks passed by and the village talked of nothing else, he finally began to fear that he would be found out.

"There was no one who could have found him out, but there was that haunting terror of the weak nature.

"Somebody spoke a word, perhaps in jest, that you must have wanted a new schooner since the May's policy was to run out so soon, and he seized the thought in a frenzy of joy and began to spread rumours. This grip on you gave him courage. He remembered that his revenge against you was still unsatisfied and it became clear to him that perhaps after all, he could get one much more complete.

"Code, the picture of that man's mind is a terrible one to me. He may have hated you before, but just think how he must have hated you after knowing how he had wronged and was going to ruin you. It is only the one of two people who does the injury whose hatred grows. An injured person who is sensible in regard to such matters, as you have been with Nat all your life, throws them off and thinks nothing more about them.

"So Nat's hatred of you and the fear of discovery, preying on his mind finally urged him into the course he has taken."

ROOSEVELT AFTER THE "HYPHENS"

OYSTER BAY, N.Y., May 29.—"We regard the hyphen as the bar sinister across our national coat of arms, and we do not intend to permit it to remain there," Col. Roosevelt told 2,000 Sagamore Hill pilgrims this afternoon, when they asked him to make a fight for presidential leadership on the issue of Americanism, which he has raised.

After making the journey here from New York they walked three miles to Sagamore Hill, led by the Seventh Regiment Band.

Richard M. Hurd, president of the Lawyers' Mortgage Club, was spokesman for the pilgrims and struck the keynote of 'Americanism' when he said the nation could not endure half hyphen and half American.

When the cheese yield from a definite quantity of milk is low it may be due to fat lost in making the cheese or to the milk being dirty. Unclean milk often contains some germs which have the power of dissolving the casein—the milk constituent required for cheese—and thus causing it to pass off in the whey.

Can Get Health — Vitality—Vim — Strength, from Ferrozone.

Once you use the celebrated nerve vitalizer and tonic, Ferrozone—once you feel its magic powers, working through your weakened system—then you'll know for sure that health at last awaits you.

So much quicker and surer is Ferrozone to rebuild and restore that thousands use no other medicine.

"Because I am now well," writes Miss I. P. Sinclaire, from Sault Ste Marie "I feel it my duty to tell every young woman what benefit I got from Ferrozone. I grew very thin, and at twenty-five years old my face was hollow and wrinkled—my color was bad and I looked ten years beyond my age. I was nervous and hysterical, couldn't sleep, had no appetite, burst into tears at the least provocation. Then I worried, feared I would go into decline, and was so depressed every morning that life was no longer happy.

"I was astonished at the quick and thorough action of Ferrozone. It gave me permanent strength and vitality, nervous fears disappeared, indigestion and stomach weakened were cured. Sound sleep returned. I looked better and younger, had clear color. I gained in weight, felt happy, vigorous, strong. It is a year since I first took Ferrozone. It has restored me to health I never knew before and I will continue to recommend it as the grandest tonic and strengthener on earth."

Very few girls and women are so abundant in health as to not require medicine. Nothing excels Ferrozone in supplying strength, blood and nerve power. Not a stimulant, but a nourishing tonic is Ferrozone. 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers. Try Ferrozone. Do it to-day

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Good Enough For a Servian

By ETHEL HOLMES

When the British troops were making their way from Saloniki, Greece, to assist the Servians in repelling the Bulgarians the commander of the English advance was desirous of communicating with the Servians nearest to him in order to arrange for a junction between the two forces. Entering a peasant's hut, he found a Greek family, the eldest daughter being a pretty girl of sixteen.

"Would you like to earn these?" the general asked of the girl, showing her a handful of gold pieces.

Her eyes sparkled, and she admitted that she would.

"Well, then, take a basket of eggs and go northward, ostensibly to sell them to such soldiers as you meet. One of the eggs will contain a message. Give it to the first Servian officer you meet."

"Suppose," asked the girl's mother, "this egg containing the message falls into the hands of a Bulgarian?"

"In that case," replied the general, "it would go very hard with your daughter. But," he added, "if she manages well I think she will get it through without any difficulty."

The woman looked at the gold, then at her daughter. The latter looked at the gold and told the general that she would undertake the mission. The general called for a basket of eggs and, taking one, chipped a small hole in the shell, let out the contents, rolled a bit of thinne paper on which the message had been written into a wisp the size of a match, put it through the hole in the shell, filled the remaining space with sand, then sealed the hole with a bit of white plaster.

The girl was expected to go some distance; therefore a horse and cart on the place were requisitioned to take her. As she drove away the general bid her godspeed, and if she got the message through and returned safely she should have a hundred gold pieces. Possibly she might be intrusted with a return message, but it had been arranged by the one in the egg that it should be oral.

Maria, the girl, drove along a road leading northwestward till she came to a picket guard of Bulgarians stationed to prevent any communication between the French and English and the Serbians. Maria showed them her eggs, and when they seemed disposed to turn her back she gave each of the men a couple of them. They were very hungry; therefore the bribe was sufficient.

She next came to quite a large force of Bulgarians, and the officer in charge refused to let her pass. She made up a sad story about her mother being ill and she had gone out to get some eggs for her to eat. The officer referred the matter to his commander, who, moved by Maria's story, ordered that a woman be employed to search her and if nothing was found on her to let her go on. The search was thorough, the cart being also carefully looked over. Of course nothing was found. Then Maria gave away all the eggs she did not need for her mother and went on, having been given a pass which would enable her to go as far as she liked.

She soon met with a party of Bulgarians engaged in placing obstructions on the road. They stopped her, but when she showed her pass they were willing to let her go on. But, being short of rations, they confiscated her eggs. This frightened her.

"Some of them are not fresh," she said. "I don't think you will care to eat such."

With that the officer in command took up the eggs one after the other and held them to the sunlight to look through them. When he came to the egg with the message, before raising it to the light he held it in his hand a moment to judge its weight.

"This one is bad, I know," he said. "It doesn't weigh the same as the others."

Maria's heart stood still.

The officer held the egg up to the sun, and, since no light passed through it, he put it in the basket, saying:

"My dear, if you meet with a Servian you are quite welcome to give him that egg. It is not good enough for a Bulgarian, but it is too good for a Servian."

A way was made through the obstructions for Maria's cart, and she drove away amid the laughter of the men at their officer's joke.

That was the last stop Maria made. The next men she met were some Servian cavalry. She gave the egg to their commander, telling him that it contained a message. He escorted her to his general, who took the paper from the eggshell and read it with intense interest. It named the location and the date at which the British and the Servians would form a junction, and, since this suited the Servians, Maria had only to carry back an oral message stating the fact.

Strange to say, she had more difficulty in getting back than in going out. She was once detained overnight and twice was searched. When she finally reached the British outposts she was taken to the general, who gave her a kiss and the hundred gold pieces promised her.

The exploit was very much to the credit of the messenger, but it availed nothing in the end, for not long afterward the allies retreated to Saloniki.

Nevertheless though what the girl did was of no avail in the end she was very proud of it.

THE GARDEN OF EDEN.

It Is Said to Have the Most Trying Climate in the World.

The chief peculiarity about Kurna is that the natives believe the place where they live is the exact site of the garden of Eden.

The climate of Kurna is acknowledged to be the most trying in all the world. The heat is terrific in the summer time. It is claimed that the British government has a record of 150 degrees in the shade upon the bridge of a boat anchored in the river at Busreh, a little to the south.

The missionaries at Busreh tell of nights when the thermometer registers not less than 125 degrees. British sailors bound for the Persian gulf in the summer time usually desert if they can. Perhaps in Arizona the thermometer rises nearly as high, but there in the dry air, while in the Persian gulf it is exceedingly moist.

The Europeans at Busreh must pass the days in underground chambers, or serdaubs, while a native boy pulls a huge fan, or punkah, suspended from the ceiling to keep the air in circulation. The nights are spent on the roof, for it is impossible to sleep below.

In the winter time the air seems exceedingly cold, for the marshes are filled with salt, and as the wind sweeps over the plain the moist air is peculiarly penetrating. Frequently the Arab, benumbed by the cold, falls from his horse.

Where Plato Taught.

The famous academy of Plato was in a suburb of Athens, about a mile north of the Dypilum gate. It is said to have belonged to the hero Academus; hence the name. It was surrounded with a wall and adorned with walks, groves and fountains. Plato possessed a small estate in the neighborhood and for some fifty years taught his "divine philosophy" to young and old assembled in the academy to listen to his wise words. After Plato's death in 348 B. C. the academy lost much of its fame, but the beauty remained for centuries after the great teacher was no more.

The Margin of Leisure.

A broad margin of leisure is as beautiful in a man's life as in a book. Haste makes waste no less in life than in housekeeping. Keep the time, observe the hours of the universe, not of the cars. What are threescore years and ten hurriedly and coarsely lived to moments of divine leisure in which your life is coincident with the life of the universe? We live too fast and coarsely, just as we eat too fast and do not know the true savor of our food. We consult our will and understanding and the expectation of men, not our genius.—Thoreau.

PUGILIST KNOCKS POLICEMEN OUT

NEW YORK, May 27.—In his effort to avoid arrest on a young girl's serious charge, Matthew McGuire, a sturdy young pugilist known about the boxing clubs as 'Johnny Harvey' sent two detectives to Harlem Hospital, following different encounters, yesterday, and in a battle last night aided by his band of street rowdies, he was made prisoner only after a squad of detetives had fought their way through the band with their clubs and a riot call had summoned the police reserves.

Detective John Kilgallon, of the Second Branch Bureau, went to McGuire's home, at No. 239 West 137th street, about noon to arrest him on a warrant obtained by a young girl. McGuire was in bed and Kilgallon forced him to get up and dress. When the detective had his back to the door, he said, he was attacked by the pugilist's mother, Mrs. Mary McGuire, who had a flatiron.

"She gave the flatiron to McGuire while she held my right arm," said the detective, "and then her son hit me on the head. I broke loose from the mother and got my gun out and fired one shot, but McGuire just then brought the iron down on my head again and I didn't know anything more."

Kilgallon was unconscious a half hour, and when he regained his senses he was lying on McGuire's bed, and there was a long cut on top of his head. McGuire and his mother had fled. Kilgallon's pistol was also missing. The detective staggered to the street and there a policeman sent him to Harlem Hospital, where it was found that he had been severely hurt. The cut on his head required many stitches and there were indications of a concussion of the brain.

Many detectives then were sent out to find McGuire and his mother. Mrs McGuire was found about three o'clock in the afternoon, and in the Washington Heights Court she was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of interfering with an officer, and it was said by the police this charge would be changed to felonious assault when she is arraigned again to-day.

It was known that McGuire made his headquarters about Eighth Avenue and 145th street, and detectives kept that neighbourhood under scrutiny until eight o'clock last night, when they saw McGuire and a dozen other young fellows leave a saloon Detective Michael Oates of the West 135th Street Station, ran into the crowd and seized the pugilist. That started the fight. McGuire, who has a ringside weight of 155 pounds, is powerful, and he and Oates struggled up the stone steps of a flat house. There McGuire doubled the detective over an iron railing and both dropped to the sidewalk.

McGuire's friends went to his aid and were beating Oates when Detectives Casey, McLaughlin and Corcoran arrived. With their clubs swinging vigorously they went into the crowd and stretched out half a dozen of them along the sidewalk before they reached Oates and McGuire.

The pugilist held on with the tenacity of a bulldog and was dragged off only when he had been beaten so severely that he could not resist no longer.

By that time the neighborhood was in a state of great excitement, with women screaming from windows, elevated trains blowing whistles, and with a large crowd gathering. The reserves from the West 135th Street Police Station were hurried to the scene. Half an hour elapsed before order was restored.

After Detective Oates had been sent to Harlem Hospital to have a hand with several broken bones attended and his many bruises and cuts dressed, McGuire was locked up several charges. They included the original charge made by the girl two charges of felonious assault in the cases of the two detectives, stealing Detective Kilgallon's pistol, resisting arrest and interfering with a policeman. He had been so roughly handled by the detectives that an ambulance surgeon was called to his cell to attend him.

Police of Chatham Take Man in Hand Who Is Inquisitive

CHATHAM, May 27.—Suspected of being a German sympathizer, Cherese Klaus is being detained by the Chatham police pending an investigation into his credentials.

His persistent inquiries among the soldiers of the Kent battalion as to their work and their quarters in general resulted in his being taken into custody by the police for the military authorities.

Shortly after his arrest Klaus stated that he was a German and that his father was an officer in the German forces. Later in the afternoon when he appeared before military officers, he stated he was a Russian, although it appears he cannot speak a word of that language.

Klaus came to Kent from Milwaukee some time ago and for the past few months has been employed as a farm labourer by ex-Reeve Wickens, near Dresden.

The local immigration authorities are in communication with the Windsor officials, who are expected to come to Chatham to prosecute the investigation, and if proved that he is a German, it is likely he will be interned.

CAN'T BEAT "TIZ" WHEN FEET HURT

"Tiz" for sore, tired, puffed-up, aching, callouse feet or corns.

You can be happy-footed in a moment. Use "Tiz" and never suffer with tender, raw, burning, blistered, swollen, tired, aching feet. "Tiz" and only "Tiz" takes the pain and soreness out of corns, callouses and bunions.

As soon as you put your feet in a "Tiz" bath, you just feel the happiness soaking in. How good your poor, old feet feel. They want to dance for joy. "Tiz" is grand. "Tiz" instantly draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause sore, inflamed, aching, sweaty feet.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug store or department store. Get instant foot relief. Laugh at foot sufferers who complain. Because your feet are never, never going to bother or make you limp any more.

PRAISES BRITISH TAXATION.

Vienna Socialist Organ Points to Plan of Paying Cost of War.

Great Britain's system of taxation is held up as a model by the Vienna Arbeiter-Zeitung in an article scoring the Austrian and German newspapers that profess to be amused at British efforts to meet the cost of the war, in a great part, through increased taxation. In this article, which is quoted extensively by the English press, the Socialist paper speaks of the "pharisaical superiority" of those who scoff at the "poor citizens of this unfortunate empire and their monstrous burden." The only excuse which the Arbeiter-Zeitung can find for such persons is that they are supremely ignorant, and do not know what they are talking about.

There is not a taxation system on the Continent, says the article, not even that of Germany, which surpasses all others, that can produce what the British system is producing. In other belligerent countries the cost of the war is being left to the future, and future generations will be made to pay what this generation has destroyed. But England, with commendable wisdom and political insight, sticks to the principle that as far as possible every generation must pay for what is consumes. After a clear statement of the taxation contribution to war expenditure which England is raising, the Vienna paper concludes:

"The war, of course, with its enormous expenditure, will seriously affect the British financial position, but there is evidence notwithstanding that the British system is so elastic, so capable of being adapted to any and every situation that we on the Continent, instead of sneering, have every reason to learn a lesson from it."

GERMAN SCHOLARS RECANT.

Some Now Regret Form of Their First Appeal to Neutral Sympathy.

Excerpts from a letter said to have been sent by Professor Max Planck, Secretary of the Berlin Academy of Sciences, to Professor Lorentz of Haarlem, in the Netherlands, are being widely reprinted in the English press as showing a decided change of sentiment among the scientific and literary men of Germany. In his letter Professor Planck mentions the letter addressed to the civilized world in August, 1914, by ninety-three German scholars and artists, in which these representatives of German Kultur not only defended the conduct of their own Government, but denounced the action of the Allies. Dr. Planck himself was one of the signatories.

Dr. Planck now says that the form in which this letter was written led to regrettable misunderstandings of the real sentiments of the signatories. In his opinion, and it is an opinion shared, he says, by his colleagues Harnack, Nernst, Waldeyer, Wilamowitz-Mollendorff, that letter of appeal was written and signed in a patriotic exuberance of the first weeks of the war.

It must not be taken for granted, says Professor Planck, that at the present time anything like a scientific judgment can be formed with regard to the great questions of the historical present. The question as to who bears the main responsibility for the rupture of the pre-war negotiations, and for all the consequent human misery flowing from this rupture, is a question which will be decided later by an all-sided, objective investigation.

"But what I wish to impress upon you," he writes to Dr. Lorentz, "is that, notwithstanding the awful events around us, I have come to the firm conviction that here are moral and intellectual regions which lie beyond this war of nations, and that honourable co-operation, the cultivation of international values, and personal respect for the citizens of an enemy State are perfectly compatible with glowing love and intense work for one's own country."

Self-Measuring Merchandise.

In reviewing Moroccan trade practices in The British (Government) Board of Trade Journal of recent date the acting British Consul in Casablanca states that German exporters of piece goods to that market often place in the folds of a bolt of material a long band of paper marked off in yards and inches in such a manner that in unfolding and cutting up the fabric the salesman always knows the length of what it left. A similar idea was carried out here some time ago by a well-known embroidery house, which lightly attached a long, narrow paper "tape measure" to the plain edge of the fabric. It was designed to do away with waste due to careless measuring by clerks, as well as to expedite selling and inventory taking.

HOT SOUP STARTED TROUBLE

NEW YORK, May 27.—Miss Anna Fitziu, Metropolitan Opera House prima donna, who has just started a suit for divorce against her husband John J. Harty, treasurer of the Canadian Locomotive Company and son of the Hon. William Harty, former M.P., of Kingston, Ont., confided to friends here to-day that her difference with her husband's family started from so simple a thing as a plate of hot soup which she had unwittingly served to her father-in-law shortly after her marriage. The soup burnt the tongue of Mr. Harty, Sr., the singer said and he was so angered that he refused to speak to her for three months.

Miss Fitziu asked for $200,000 alimony in her petition.

"Did your husband encourage you to singing?" someone asked the prima donna.

"He did not," was the positive reply. "He thought such a heavensent talent as mine was fit only to be trampled under foot. His father thought the same way. They both despised my singing."

As a case in point, Miss Fitziu told of being called upon to sing at the wedding of her husband's younger brother, William Harty, jr., to Miss Evelyn Kerr, daughter of Senator Kerr of Toronto, some months ago.

"The members of the Harty family who liked my art, applauded me," she said. "The others maintained a frosty, haughty silence."

FASCINATED HIM.

In discussing the "hot-plate-of-soup incident," which she placed at the bottom of her martial troubles, the singer explained that she had met Mr. Harty while she was singing in the chorus of 'Baroness Fiddlesticks' a musical comedy. He was fascinated by her, it seems, and followed her abroad, when she went to study grand opera under Jean de Reske.

"I wanted to remain in Europe until I was through," she complained "but he prevailed on me to return to America. I was assured that I would be welcomed in a style befitting a foreign princess rather than a simple American girl.

"My mother-in-law was dead. I was told to take the head of the table in her place. My father-in-law had a habit of having his soup cooled before it was served to him, but I was only a girl of eighteen at that time and once I forgot. I gave him a hot plate of soup. He burnt his tongue. He wouldn't speak to me for three months after that."

The Hartys, according to the petition, were married on April 24, 1908. Miss Fitziu is a grand-niece of General Robert E. Lee.

TO PUMP OUT ZUIDER ZEE

The problem of removing the water from the flooded district of North Holland has revived the project of drying the Zuider Zee, writes Commercial Attache Erwin W. Thompson from The Hague, and a bill is now before the Netherlands Parliament for appropriating money for this work. The cost is estimated at $90,000,000. The principal dam would be about fifteen miles long, averaging twenty feet in height.

One of the most important results accruing from the drying of the Zuider Zee would be that the new dams would take the place of the several hundred miles of dikes that now protect the lowlands from the Zuider Zee. Under present conditions a strong northwest wind tends to blow the waters of the North Sea into the Zuider Zee and to raise the level of the latter until it sometimes breaks over the protecting dikes and inundates the low polders or meadows.

The flooded district in North Holland, which has brought up the Zuider Zee project, comprises 40,000 acres. This territory is all below sea level, and is protected from the North Sea by a line of natural sand dunes for most of the distance, and along other stretches by heavy dikes built largely of granite. On the east side, however, the province is protected from the Zuider Zee by a line of earth embankments. The January storm broke through these embankments in several places and inundated the country.

The provincial authorities are now engaged in repairing these breaks in the embankments or dikes and as soon as these are completed they will begin pumping out the flood water. The arrangement of locks and sluices is such that at low tide in the North Sea, and sometimes in the Zuider Zee, the water can be drained out to a certain level, but below that it must be pumped. The average height to which the water must be lifted is only three to four feet, but the total amount to be pumped approximates 7,000,000,000 cubic feet.

There are many steam pumping stations throughout the district, which were destined primarily for taking care of the regular rainfall in the low districts and for pumping water into the high level canals. These pumps will be used to their full capacity, but will necessarily have to be supplemented by many new ones.

If the bill for drying the Zuider Zee is passed by the Netherlands Parliament, it is possible that American contractors may be called upon to build the dams and do the pumping.

A waste of thirty to forty per cent. of the crops on the farm and the waste of marketing under the present system has placed farmers in a bad way.

HAD A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN COULD NOT SLEEP OR WORK

Is Now Cured and Attributes His Recovery to the Use of Dr. Chase's Medicines

Some splendid results have been reported to us from the combined use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. It complicated cases they work together with great success.

While the Kidney-Liver Pills arouse the action of liver, kidneys, and bowels, and so overcome, derangements of these organs, the Nerve Food enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the system in a general way.

Mr. R. B. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes: "About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter, I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not sleep soundly and would start up so suddenly as to almost jump out of bed. My kidneys were bad, too, and I had awful pains in the back all day. I doctored with our family doctor, but he did not seem to know what I needed. I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and could sleep well three nights after, starting the use of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I take great pleasure in recommending these medicines as I have proved that they do all that is claimed for them."

When used together the Nerve Food should be used after each meal and at bed-time, and the Kidney-Liver Pills only as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in healthy condition. Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

As the season progresses it is easy to interest a woman in shirt waist designs, promptly forwarded to you.

because in order to look cool and clean on all occasions she will have as many as she can afford—always three or four plain ones, since they are easy to make and easy to launder.

In the illustration, No. 7,718, we have just such a waist; we may say of it that its lines show a modesty meriting praise.

The collar is of contrasting goods and is one with the revers, giving a low neck to the blouse, which is gathered at the shoulder edges in the front. Narrow braid is used to trim the collar and to give a novel touch to the front of the blouse either side of the button closing. The three row trimming idea is carried out also in the pocket in the left front; likewise on the cuffs of contrasting material that finish the short sleeves. If preferred, long sleeves may be substituted.

This pattern may be had in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure. To reproduce the design in size 36 will require 2¼ yards of material 36 inches wide, ½ yard contrasting goods and 5 yards of braid.

If you will send ... to the office of this publication the pattern will be promptly forwarded to you.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Physicial Exhaustion Cause of German Defeat

The unexpected rapidity of the Russian advance and the physical exhaustion of the German troops after a month of marching and fighting night and day are the two chief causes for the German defeat in the battle of the Marne, according to the first authoritative treatise on the battle issued from Teutonic sources.

A small volume—"Die Schlachten an der Marne, September 6 to 12, 1914" — but made into English as "The Battle of the Marne" has just been published by Siegfried Mittler & Son, of Berlin. The writer obviously has had access to documents not generally available. His purpose is to show that the Marne engagement was not really a German defeat, but that the armies retreated in good order that they might take up stronger positions to the north and northeast.

Concerning the broad field of a general campaign against France the writer says:

"It was decided by the Supreme German Command that the greater number of the available troops should be thrown on the western front and that the defence of the eastern border of the empire should be intrusted to a few army corps. It was hoped that these troops, in combination with the Austro-Hungarian armies, would be in a position to stem the advancing tide of the Muscovite colossus for a few weeks until new German formations, and above all the active troops returned from France and reserve corps, could assume the offensive in the east as well. But it was not proposed that an attack should be made over the whole of the western front at once.

"The German General Staff had decided rather to assume the defensive on the line between the Swiss border and the Donon, but between this important peak of the Vosges and Verdun, to pass from the defensive to the offensive only according to circumstances, since the troops placed there had as their chief task the holding in check of the enemy forces opposed to them. On the other hand, it was believed that the main body of troops in the west might be sent from their bases between Diedenhofen and Aix-la-Chapelle and hurled into France through Luxemburg and Belgium, so that it would be possible to extend the right wing further and further in the direction of the sea."

The object of this movement, the writer says, was to effect a "broad sweep" by Brussels, Valenciennes, Compeigne and to the west of Paris, so the French forces might be driven back over the Meuse, the Aisne and the Marne, and even the Seine: "that the French might be outflanked south of Fontainebleau and their whole line of battle crumpled up."

TOO MUCH FOR HUNS.

Other German troops, "especially reserves and landwehr corps, were then to be hurried to the coast between Dunkirk and Calais, with the object of preventing further British troops from landing."

So far as it was humanly possible to calulate, this ambitious plan, it seems, was to have been carried to a successful end by the last of September. The author, however, emphasizes its great difficulties and reminds his readers that every military success is the result of a chain of circumstances, and that if one link shows a weakness the whole chain may be broken. He says:

"No doubt the German General Staff reckoned with the possibility in advance that their plan might not succeed and that it would have to be changed in the course of its execution. For if the task of the German left wing (the fifth and sixth armies) of holding in check the strong French forces opposed to them at Nancy, Toul, Verdun, and the other fortified places on the Meuse was a difficult one, that of the centre (the third and fourth armies, and of the right wing, the first and second armies) was almost superhuman. The armies of the centre and right not only had to break down the fortresses and the field opposition of the Belgians, but also had to complete their march under a terrible August sun before they could come into contact with the French, who were located in their own chosen positions, and had not to trouble themselves about reinforcements.

Paying a warm tribute to the energy of the German command on the right, and at the same time to the skill in retreat of the French and British, the writer says:

HOPED FOR BATTLE.

"Indeed, one hardly knows which to admire more — General Von Kluck's haste in endeavouring to bring Field Marshal French to a standstill, so as to give battle to him, or the rapidity with which the British army was hurried southward and withdrawn from the outstretched claws of the German general."

The German staff hoped for a decisive action with the British before linking up in the big battle with the French, but they were disappointed in this.

"The further the Germans advanced," says the author, "and the more skilful the French and British showed themselves in effecting a retreat without allowing a decisive battle to be fought, the further did the Germans separate themselves from their base, and the more did they exhaust themselves by the hard marching. They used up their munitions and food at a terrific rate, and the slightest check in the supply of reinforcements and food might well have been fatal to such masses of men as the German hurled into France and Belgium in August, 1914."

General Joffre, on the other hand, was fighting within his own lines, and was gradually drawing nearer and nearer to his depots. It became possible finally for fresh troops to be sent to the French line every day, so that General Joffre and his staff were in the fortunate position of being able to put fewer exhausted troops in the line of fire than their opponents. For the Germans had been marching almost day and night for a month."

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Russ Prisoners Reached French

Forced to Work on Western Front, They Escaped and Joined Allies

A Russian soldier, taken prisoner by the Germans, tells the Paris Matin how he was sent to the French front, but finally, with two companions after three days of hairbreath escapes reached the French lines. This soldier, Sergius Selivanow, of the 202nd infantry regiment of Little Archangel, tells his story as follows:

"We were surrounded by the Germans at Shavli, and the enemy's forces were much superior to ours. It was necessary to surrender or be exterminated. We surrendered. We were sent to the Prussian receiving station at Neumunster. What we endured there you cannot imagine.

"One day an officer told us to get ready to go away. We learned that they were going to send us to the western front to help in construction work against the French. Our indignation knew no bounds when we learned we were to help combat our allies, but it was impossible to resist, even at the risk of death. Finally a favourable day arrived and we decided on flight.

"For a long time we prayed to God to help us and soon acquired confidence of success. This was our scheme:—Frequently we were sent to get bread for the section where we were, that is to say, for five hundred persons. With this object, fifteen prisoners, including us three, had to go to a house rather far from our camp. In going we could, without danger pass the barbed wire fence with which the camp was surrounded.

"With one German we reached the house where the bread was kept. The German entered the house first and our comrades followed him.

"We three, however, started off obliquely to the right, and walking fast concealed ourselves in a thicket. A quarter of an hour passed. Then we saw four Germans searching for us with little pocket electric lamps. Without making any noise we crawled away.

"Before us was a little hill quickly crossed. Then we were in open country. A road led us to a village that we could not avoid. The streets were barely lighted everybody seemed asleep.

"We came to a little stream. To pass it we had to cross a wooden bridge guarded by a single sentinel. We reached the bridge and he cried out 'Halt! Wer da?' Without saying a word the three of us threw ourselves on the soldier, knocked him down, and ran across as fast as we could. We heard a shot. It was the sentinel firing in our direction, but the night, which was very dark, was favorable to us, concealing us from the sentinel. Finally, we found an abandoned trench, which we masked with boughs.

PASS GERMAN TRENCHES

"Night had almost fallen again when we left our shelter. The firing was very lively. The Germans hid themselves in their trenches and we passed along in the open like ghosts, at the mercy of the bullets. Wide trenches full of soldiers barred our route. The soldiers seeing us thought we were comrades who had lost our way and made ready to give us room, calling out, 'Komm! Komm!'

"Finally we found a trench where there was only one soldier. We rushed over him in a hurry, leaving him dumb with amazement, and came to the barbed wire entanglements. There we were like trapped fish trying to get out between the meshes of a net. Our peril was very great. Every minute they were firing in our direction. Finally, my flesh torn and bleeding from the barbed wire after a thousand efforts I succeeded in getting free and jumped into a trench. Soon my comrades joined me and we lay down in a narrow hole, crowded like herrings in a barrel.

"Before us there was another network of barbed wire. We tried to pass but at every moment the wire made a noise and attracted a lively fire. Suddenly I fell against the body of a French soldier caught in the net and riddled with bullets. Every time that a rocket dissipated the darkness the Germans took it for a target.

"Early in the morning we decided to put an end to our critical situation. We raised a white handkerchief and shouted 'Comrades! Rouski! Rouski!' For ten minutes there was no reply. Finally we saw—a helmet. What a misfortune! A helmet. These then were Germans. All was lost. But, looking more closely we seemed to recognize the sky-blue color of the French uniforms. Five minutes afterward we were in their trenches and were received with open arms."

Hints to Husbands.

The unselfish mother, the sympathetic wife, in whose presence the world is forgotten, where everything is made bright and trouble disappears.

But these women with sweet natures and good intentions are nevertheless human. Such a woman cannot always rise above petty cares in the round of home life. Her husband must act well his part. Let him be always the lover. Business cares, if possible, are better left at the office. Let him be ready to go out with his wife evenings, even if he does prefer his paper and a good cigar at home. His life has not the monotony of hers; he sees many faces and hears many opinions, while she is within four walls. Let him be always the man. If, unhappily, he comes home at night and finds his wife tired and fretful, let him be kind and try kissing away the worry lines, as he did before marriage. A loving word is better than a grumpy one. A wife knows instinctively when she is neglected.

Kind, tender, loving in sickness, in health, in prosperity and adversity, in one, in death; the husband should remember that he has taken the maiden to an employed country, to a life of which she knows nothing, and instead of being the arbitrary head of a family, a moodish man—and, saddest of all, an unfaithful husband—he should be patient, indulgent even, always loving—ever ready to soothe, to pet, to help over the hard places, and new responsibilities that meet the bride on every hand. With this mutual help, they feel the measure of each other's being, and home is "sweet" indeed, "the dearest place on earth."

An extra feeding of whole corn at evening when the night promises to be cold is good policy. Buckwheat is a good addition to the cold weather ration.

The breeder of the day must keep abreast of the scientist—the biologist. He must study the latest facts in regard to heredity. Let him ask and read about Mendelism.

Peterboro Says Good-Bye to Her Battalion

93RD OFF TO BARRIEFIELD THIS MORNING

FRENCH DRIVEN BACK AT ONE POINT BUT ALL OTHER GERMAN ATTACKS FAIL

New Division Hurled by the Crown Prince Against French Positions and Drove French Back Over the Bethincourt Cumeries Highway---All Attacks on Eastern Slope of Deadman's Hill Broke Down Before the French Fire.

GERMAN'S CONTINUE TO LOSE HEAVILY

PARIS (French Official Communique), May 30.—The French troops were driven south of the Bethincourt-Cumieres highway in a most powerful assault delivered by the Germans last night on the front between Dead Man's Hill and Cumieres, the War Office admitted to-day. The German gains, however, represent an advance of not more than 120 yards. On all other sectors of the northwestern front of Verdun violent German attacks were completely repulsed.

Following an entire day of heavy bombardment of the French lines west of Cumieres the Crown Prince hurled into action a new division just arrived at the Verdun front.

All German assaults on the eastern slopes of Dead Man's Hill broke down under terrific French fire. In the region of Caurettes Woods, the Germans lost heavily, but by repeated attacks last night, drove the French behind the Cumieres-Bethincourt road. Farther east the Germans emerging from Curieres village made repeated but unsuccessful attempts to drive the French southward along the Chattancourt road.

On the east bank of the Meuse most violent cannonading continued throughout last night, especially west of Fort Douaumont.

Crown Prince Has Resumed His Drive

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 30.—Crown Prince has resumed the drive against the northwestern defenses of Verdun with simultaneous attacks against the French centre and right wing. The heaviest blows are being struck against Hill 304, and in the Cumieres Woods. From the trenches on the northern slopes of Hill 304 the Germans are seeking to drive the French from the whole crescent shaped height by terrific artillery fire from the northern ridges of Dead Man's Hill, and frontal infantry attacks.

In Cumieres Woods, where the Germans captured 300 yards of trenches by a strong attack yesterday afternoon, the Crown Prince is striking southwards against the Cumieres-Esnes highway. His object is to squeeze the French out of the whole region between Dead Man's Hill and the Meuse, forcing them to fall back upon Charnay Ridge. Pressed back upon the Charnay positions, the French would be forced to give battle in a great struggle that would decide the fate of Verdun.

Czar is Cheered By The Russian Dumba

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, May 30.—Vigorous cheers for the Czar marked the reassembling of the Russian Duma to pass a number of measures designed to carry the Russian arms on to victory. This afternoon the Duma held special ceremonies, commemorating the tenth aniversary of its existence. Czar Nicholas was not present. He has been at army headquarters for several weeks. In opening the session President Rodzianko said that the Czar's self sacrifice and brilliant spirit in trials of war had linked him closer to the hearts of his subjects. The Duma members rose and cheered loudly when President Rodzianko referred to the Emperor as the "giver of representative government." The opening session was picturesque. The house was packed with Duma members costumed as Cossacks, Poles, priests and peasants.

Berlin Claims Capture of 1348 Prisoners

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, May 30.—The War Office claimed to-day that west of the river, on the northwestern front of Verdun, the Germans last night captured French positions in Cumieres and Corbeaux woods, taking 1,349 prisoners. East of the river, the Germans advanced in Thiaumont Forest. Near Ostend, German aviators successfully bombarded and destroyed an enemy squadron last night.

ROME, May 30.—Fearing wholesale massacres by the Turks, Syrian leaders are reported to have sent appeals to President Wilson and Pope Benedict.

Not Responsible is Sir Sam's Claim

OTTAWA, May 30.—Before the Shell Contracts Commission this afternoon Sir Sam Hughes appeared as a witness. He commenced to read a statement after being sworn, dealing with his instructions and contracts with the shell committee. Messrs. Carvell and Johnston objected to the admission of this statement as evidence, and said Sir Sam should be compelled to rely on his memory like other witnesses. The commissioners, however, decided to admit it as evidence. The chief new point in the statement was that as Sir Sam was acting for the Imperial Government in this matter, he was not responsible as Minister of Militia to the Parliament of Canada.

A whole sheaf of telegrams and letters sent by Colonel Allison to various parties, was produced by Mr. Carvell, M.P., before the Meredith-Duff Commission this morning. Mr. Carvell announced that he had obtained the documents from John R. Rathom, editor of the Providence Journal, Rhode Island. Carvell in addition announced that he had a whole bag full of documents he had secured from the same source. The production of documents came as a distinct sensation. None of the telegrams bore directly on the subject under inquiry.

PARIS MAN FINED FOR SEDITIOUS LANGUAGE

BRANTFORD, Ont., May 30.—For saying "I don't give a damn for the Empire," when Lieut. Moyle of the 215th Battalion here asked him to enlist to defend the Empire, Earl Koenig of Paris, Ont., in police court this morning, paid a fine of $12. He was charged with using seditious language.

PARIS, May 30.—The Metin to-day has a rather sensational story from Rome declaring that the recent advance of the Bulgars into Greek territory was the result of a secret treaty between Bulgaria and Greece, to assist in ousting the Allies from Saloniki.

ROME, May 30.—It is officially announced that a large Austrian transport was sunk by an Italian warship in the Adriatic last night.

WONDERFUL FILM PROOF OF BRITAIN'S SHARE IN WAR

"Britain Prepared" Official Moving Picture a Striking Revelation of The Part The Empire is Playing in The Battle for Liberty

ARE NOW AT THE GRAND

If there is any one in Peterborough who has any doubt as to the extent of Great Britain's participation in the world war a visit to the Grand Opera House to-night or to-morrow to see the wonderful moving pictures "Britain Prepared" will remove all doubt. These official pictures taken for the British War Office, British Admiralty and British Minister of Munitions cover every phase of Britain's preparations and are a revelation even to the closer follower of current events. The army pictures start with a recruiting meeting, show all departments of the training and wind-up with a review of the division by King George on the eve of its departure for the front. It was unfortunate that the fact that last night was their last in town and and they preferred to spend the evening in the family circle kept the majority of the 93rd Battalion away. They certainly would have enjoyed the pictures dealing with training especially those portions showing the physical exercise in which the British Tommies were seen playing the same games that the 93rd men who recently returned from the class at Montreal introduced into the battalion. Artillery, cavalry, motor cycle corps, the work of the engineers and bomb-throwers, the operation of machine guns, signallers at work with field telephones, all branches of military artivities were shown in most realistic fashion.

Two films show some parts of the Vickers munition plant and give some idea of the extent to which women are taking on the work of men.

Then comes the wonderful pictures of the navy undoubtedly the finest part of the programme. You are actually taken on a visit to the grand fleet and not only board Sir John Jellicoe's flag ship the Iron Duke but you attend divine service on the famous Queen Elisabeth and see her big fifteen inch guns in action. You see mine sweepers at work, watch the speedy little destroyers dashing through the storm swept North Sea, see submarines in open action, in fact see every department of the grand navy that is winning the war for Britain and her allies. The photograph in the naval pictures is remarkable—one can almost hear the sweep of the waves and get a breath of sea air from the pictures. No one should miss "Britain Prepared".

WILL COLLECT OLD RAGS AND RUBBERS

Commencing To-morrow Evening From 5.30 to 8.30

Will all those house-keepers living on and west of Benson, and on and north of Edinburgh Streets please put their rags, papers and old rubbers out ready for collection to-morrow (Wednesday) evening, between the hours of 5.30 and 8.30. The Playgrounds' Committee will canvas each district at that time, had they will appreciate it very much if the rags and papers are tied into as compact a bundle as possible. Watch to-morrow's paper to see which district will be collected on Thursday evening.

FAVOURITE WAS BEATEN

"Fifinella" in 11 to 2 Shot Won The Famous English Derby To-day —King George's Horse Sir Dighton Was Entered

MANY SOLDIERS THERE

Special to the Examiner:

NEWMARKET, Eng., May 30.—Fifinella, owned by F. Hulton, won the new Derby classic event of English racing season this afternoon from a field of ten starters. Kwang Su, owned by W. C. Fairie, and the favourite, ran second. The final odds on Fifinella were 11 to 2.

This was Derby day in name only. War has robbed the world's classic annual racing event of all its glamor. To-day's spectacle was a sad intimation of the gala days of old when society and common folk to the number of half a million or more used to gather at Epsom Downs to watch the runners and to cheer their king. Though the king and society generally were absent, one of his Majesty's horses, Sir Dighton, was entered. In the early betting Kwang Su, owned by A. W. C. Fairie, was favoured at 3 to 1. The attendance to-day was confined largely to regular race goers, with a liberal sprinkling of men in khaki, officers and soldiers on leave from the front and training camps.

The Funeral of Lieut R. N. Payne

Interment Will Take Place in Bancroft To-morrow Morning

The funeral of Lieut. R. N. Payne, who lost his life on Sunday evening when a canoe capsized on the Otonabee River, will take place to-morrow morning from Bancroft, Ontario. This morning the remains were removed from the home of, Mrs. E. G. Wesley, 380 Stewart Street, where the deceased had been boarding, to Stirling. The following officers acted as pall-bearers: Lieutenants. Richardson, Millburn, Armstrong, Worth, Might and McNabb. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, accompanied the remains to Stirling.

It was impossible to arrange for a military funeral owing to the fact that the 93rd Battalion were under orders to proceed to Barriefield.

CITY FATHERS TO SEE "BRITAIN PREPARED"

Members of Board of Education Will Also Witness Famous Pictures

The Mayor, and members of the City Council and Board of Education have been invited to attend the production of "Britain Prepared," the wonderful film story of the British Empire's share in the world war, to night. No one should miss these pictures. There will be a special matinee for children to-morrow afternoon, at which the admission will be 10 cents.

Thousands Saw Departure of Peterboro Battalion For Camp

FAREWELL TO THE 93rd

Peterborough has said good-bye to her battalion. With their passing on to Barriefield this morning we have seen the 93rd march through our streets for the last time as a battalion. The members will be home on leave from time to time before they go overseas, but it is hardly probable that ever again will the complete battalion assemble at Central Park. That they will be missed goes without saying. The streets wil have an odd appearance without the familiar khaki—the blare of the band, the clarion call of the bugle, the rattle of drums and the tramp of military boots will be strangely lacking. In hundreds of homes in the city and county, there will be an empty chair at the family table. Familiar faces will be missed from their usual circles, and even to those who are not losing a relative the city will seem empty. The progress of the 93rd will be followed with a vivid interest. Never in her history has Peterborough sent out so many fighting men at one time—never has she seen so many citizens leave, and never has she had more reason to feel proud of her sons. The 93rd has already won a high reputation for good conduct, and efficiency, and there is no reason to fear that that record will be lost at Barriefield. The Examiner wishes the officers and men of the Peterborough Battalion a great and glorious career in saying good-bye, and assures them that as this paper has consistently and faithfully supported the 93rd since the day of its organization, it will continue to use its best efforts on the part of the dear ones they are leaving behind to see that their interests are looked after and their welfare maintained while their brave men are fighting for the Empire.

We can say with Longfellow in closing:

Our hearts, our hopes are all with thee
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith, triumphant o'er our fears
Are all with thee—are all with thee!

FORMAL PRESENTATION OF REGIMENTAL FUND TO 93rd BATTALION

Interesting Ceremony at Central Park Yesterday, When City and Country Representative Spoke---Socks From the 57th Chapter I. O. D. E.---Some Interesting Letters From the Front---To-day's Military News.

The formal presentation of the regimental fund collected by private subscription and municipal grants throughout the city and county of Peterborough, under the auspices of the 93rd Battalion fund committee, took place yesterday afternoon in Central Park and was very largely attended—a notable feature being the large number of ladies present. Mayor Duffus presided and on the platform were Ald. Dobbin, Ald. Stratton, Mr. W. H. Dunsford, Adjt. McElheney, Mr. R. J. Winch, Mr. Dan. O'Connell and other members of the committee and canvassing teams, as well as representatives of the Women's Societies who did such good work in connection with the battalion fund. The county was represented by Mr. J. B. Pearce and Reeve Squires of Norwood, Reeve W. A. Anderson of Otonabee and others, while the senior officers of the 93rd were also on the platform.

The battalion was drawn up in mass east of the bandstand during the addresses.

After the band of the 93rd had played "Keep the Home Fires Burning," which had a greater significance than usual in view of the rapidly approaching departure of the battalion, Mayor Duffus opened the proceedings with an address.

His Worship remarked that it was a pleasure and a privilege to make the formal presentation of the fund which was to assist in taking better care of the men of the battalion. Citizens had felt that the city and county of Peterborough could not afford to see the 93rd depart without a suitable recognition. He was well aware that whatever the circumstances might be they would called upon to perform arduous duties and they would then appreciate the benefits of the equipment that it had been possible to provide. The county of Peterborough was proud of its battalion, proud because the men have seen fit to enlist and particularly proud because the battalion has been noted for its good conduct and efficiency. He had no doubt that the good work begun here would be carried on and that the high reputation of those who had gone before them would be maintained.

Before formally turning over the fund to Lt.-Col. Johnston, Mayor Duffus paid a tribute to the work of the ladies, who had been the greatest factor, he said, amid applause, in securing the fund to procure additional comforts for the men of the battalion.

Mr. J. B. Pearce.

Mr. J. B. Pearce of Norwood, said that he had not expected to be called upon to make a speech, but was merely present as a representative of the eastern part of the county. He explained that the municipalities had taken the matter up several weeks ago of securing a field kitchen for D company of the 93rd. It was not too much for the men. "In fact," said Mr. Pearce, "we have not done enough for you men who are going out to fight for the Empire. That you will give a good account of yourselves I have no doubt, when I look into your faces. You are going under efficient officers. Col. Johnston, Major White and others I have known for years and I know that they will not only be a credit to themselves, but will look after the interests of the men under them.

Reeve Squires.

Reeve Squires of Norwood in referring to a gift of a field kitchen from the eastern townships said that it would have been a crying shame if those municipalities had not made such a presentation. Peterborough county was more than proud of the men of the 93rd. They were men who were quite capable of winning as much credit as the brave lads who had gone before them. "Our hope is that they will all return, bringing with them victory," said Mr. Squires in conclusion.

Reeve Anderson.

Mr. W. A. Anderson, reeve of Otonabee, which township contributed $400 to the battalion fund, was the next speaker. Otonabee, he said, was particularly interested in the 93rd Battalion, because Lt.-Col. Johnston, its commanding officer, was a citizen of Otonabee. In contributing to the fund the township was only doing its share, and would be pleased to do something more later on if any further assistance was needed.

Mayor Duffus announced that Mr. T. H. Hooper had presented a field kitchen to the 93rd Battalion and that Mrs. J. R. Stratton had presented the battalion with $500 for the purchase of a motor truck, two announcements that were loudly cheered

Lt.-Col. Johnston.

The cheers were redoubled when Lt.-Col. Johnston was called upon for a speech. The cheers from the battalion left no doubt as to his popularity among the men of the 93rd. In acknowledging the presentation Lt.-Col. Johnston said that he wished to thank the citizens of the city and county for their great kindness to himself and the battalion. "Ever since I set foot in those armouries," he remarked, "I have been treated with kindness. There never was a time

Affecting Scenes at G. T. R. Station as Gallant Lads of Peterboro City and County Left to Finish Their Training Before Going Overseas—Departure Conducted in Admirable Fashion.

A MEMORABLE SEND OFF

Peterborough county's own battalion, the 93rd, has started on the second phase of its career as a unit of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and taken its first step towards the battlefields of Europe. This morning the battalion left for Barriefield camp after a memorable send-off that was responsible for the largest crowd that ever gathered in the neighbourhood of the Grand Trunk station.

It was a notable event in the history of the city and county. Since the war began Peterborough has said farewell to many detachments of gallant sons, but never has there been anything like the number who left this morning. B Squadron of the 8th C.M.R. being the largest unit to leave Peterborough before to-day, and the mounted unit only numbered one hundred and fifty officers and men, about one-sixth of the number who departed this morning. Then Peterborough has watched the 93rd grow from a few recruits into one of the finest battalions in Canada. Since early last autumn it has been a prominent feature of the city's life. In the daytime the sound of marching men and the blare of martial music have been an hourly feature, and on the streets, in the churches and amusement places at night, the khaki uniform has become a familiar sight. Nearly ever one in Peterborough had a relative or a friend in the battalion and the good-byes that were said this morning were not said to strangers, but to near and dear ones.

And these things combined to make the passing of the 93rd an event that will long be remembered.

Admirably Conducted.

From the military standpoint the departure of the battalion was admirably conducted, and went through without the slightest hitch or mishap, thanks to efficient preparations and foresight. The men were at the armouries at 8.30 o'clock and the final details in connection with the departure were carried out in an orderly manner. The kit bags of the men were collected and soon trucks piled high with bags, and in charge of a detail of soldiers were on their way to the station. Early as it was many relatives and friends of the boys had gathered and there were many affecting farewells around the armouries. Old campaigners had said good-bys at home, but even in their case there was moisture in many an eye.

When the bugle sounded the "Fall In" at 8.30 o'clock for the last time in Peterborough and the roll was called it was found that there was not one absentee in the whole battalion. "All present and correct, sir," was the report, every man answering "Here" as his name was called. Every soldier was in his place and ready, a record that shows the efficiency of the battalion and the splendid calibre of the men.

Farewell Speeches.

A big crowd had gathered in Central Park by this time to hear the farewell addresses. The speakers were His Worship Mayor Duffus, Rev. R. G. Peever, George street Methodist church, Rev. Father Phelan, St. Peter's Cathedral, Rev. J. R. Webb, Murray street Baptist church, Mrs. W. R. Morris, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the Speakers' Patriotic League and His Honour Judge Hayden. The speakers united in praising the battalion for its splendid behaviour and efficiency during its stay in Peterborough and in wishing the officers and men God speed and a safe return. Several of the speakers reminded the members of the battalion the justice of the cause for which they were going to fight.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, MAY 30, 1916

DROWNING AND CARELESSNESS

The season of boating is at hand, and almost before it opened we have had sad drowning accidents to chronicle. It is not a certainty that it will serve as a deterrent of rashness and carelessness or an incitement to carefulness, to sound a note of warning. Warnings and admonitions will not create common sense, or eliminate the spirit of frivolity and recklessness, which characterize too many of our young people, and many of our elders, in their pursuit of pleasure. As in everything else the vast majority of drowning accidents are the result of carelessness and neglect of the most elementary precautions. And, besides, most of the drowning accidents result from the use of canoes. This is the most dangerous, as it is the most tempting craft in use for summer water pleasure. It is light, easily propelled, but it is always dangerous, in many cases with even experienced canoe men. It is a veritable danger to the inexperienced, and it becomes a question whether its use should not be absolutely forbidden, except to persons that can be considered competent. For a person unacquainted with the proper use of the canoe it is almost suicidal to venture into it, especially in company with young or thoughtless persons, equally unfamiliar with the possibilities of danger possessed by the canoe. It may be set down as an axiomatic condition that no person unacquainted with the use of a canoe should go into it, unless if is in charge of a thoroughly competent person; and parents who allow their daughters to go canoeing with persons ignorant of its navigation, and indifferent to the dangers its use involves, are, in the great majority of cases, inviting disaster. But possibly no words of warning will be heeded.

It is admitted that the sweep of current at the breakwater below the Locks is a most dangerous bit of water, and expert canoeists and strong swimmers negotiate the passage with fear and trembling; but inexperienced canoeists rashly try to cross the swift current at right angles and, of course, there is an overturn and, possibly, drowning. If persons will take the risks they should be told what to do in case of the accidental overturning of a canoe. Except in cases of very expert swimmers the fatal thing to do if it can be avoided, is to try to swim ashore, encumbered with boots and clothing. If it can be done the only safe thing is to cling to the canoe and float till help comes. A canoe filled with water will not sink and provides a place of comparative safety. That is, if in the action of overturning the canoe is not shot far away from the occupant, when he is thrown into the water. Even then a strong swimmer, with a few strokes, may reach the canoe and guide it to a companion who, perhaps cannot swim. The drowning of Sunday night almost directly resulted from the unsuccessful attempt to swim ashore. As a precaution, no person who is not familiar with the use of a canoe should venture into it, especially if accompanied by an other person equally ignorant; and no person, however skilful, should venture into a canoe unless he can swim, and knows the proper course to take in case of an overturn. It may seem frivilous, as it may be useless, to insist upon the precautions suggested; but the loss of life is an awful thing, and it is worth while to take good deal of trouble to obviate or lessen the risk. It is a beautiful thing for a daughter of the house to return home safely from a canoe trip and hear her prattle of the "perfectly lively time" she has had; but there is a possibility of another side of the story—a death by drowning — and this possibility is increased if she trust herself to an escort ignorant of the proper use of a canoe. We don't want to read the reports of drowning accidents in the papers many times during the summer.

KEEP THE LIST.

In this issue is printed the muster roll of the 93rd Battalion. It contains the rank, name, and regimental number of every member of the battalion up to the time of leaving Peterborough. It is worth preserving, not only as a memento and evidence of the spirit and loyalty of Peterborough citizens, town and county, but, also, for convenience of reference. It is not only a record, but an honour roll that should be cherished and kept available for reference when time and the fortunes of war have made changes in its personnel. If the Examiner at the time had printed the muster rolls of the various Canadian forces that have gone forth to war in the Reil uprising, the Fenian Raid, the Nile expedition and the South African war, and if they had been preserved by readers, they would have been documents of great interest at the present time.

GOOD-BYE, 93RD.

When "the tumult and the shouting died," and we came back to our various posts of duty, after giving a send-off to the boys of the 93rd this morning, we felt an indefinable, but distinct and obsessing sense of loneliness and loss. We could be sympathetic with the deeper feelings of loss and loneliness that anguish thousands of hearts and sadden hundreds of homes in city and county, who have surendered and parted with sons and husbands and have, in farewell, broke stronger and yet tenderer ties than those that unite us to them as fellow citizens. We, at our desks, at our counters on George street, seemed to listen for the stirring music of the band and measured step of the stalwart boys on their daily march. We shall be terribly lonely for the boys of the new brigade. They were our pride and our protectors, taking arms in the great fight for us, and we honour them more than we miss them, with sure trust that we shall have yet stronger reason to hold them in honour. The boys of the 93rd have been good boys as soldiers; their behaviour has made them examples of good soldiers and of good citizenship. They have borne themselves right worthily. They have not only been invariably observant of the rules of military discipline, but they have observed the laws that govern gentlemen and good citizens. They have shown themselves good soldiers, and during their days of training, and even to the last, they were on duty.. At the muster at the station this morning, there was not, out of a thousand men, a single absentee from the place of duty, and there was not one man that had given way to the temptation to qualify his farewell to the city with drink. They were all on hand sober and steady. We are sure they will carry this spirit with them; and when the hour of trial comes, and actual fighting is to be faced, we can be certain they will stand the test. We send them away with sad but proud hearts, deeply feeling that they will take their places worthily beside the first contingents, and emulate the prowess and courage, the "go" and resourcefulness, that have won for Canadian soldiers the praise of the highest military critics, and the generous admiration of their allied comrades in arms. Canadian soldiers have fought a new meaning into the name Canadian, and we are sure that the battalion we sent away this morning will maintain the splendid record the Canadians have achieved both in morale, courage, resourcefulness and fighting efficiency.

We bid the 93rd good-bye, with full and proud hearts; our best wishes and our earnest prayers go with and follow them. They are the first contingent all our own to be enlisted in and sent away from Peterborough. We shall not forget them; we can trust them not to allow us to do that. We shall have splendid reminders of them in the work they will do where the best soldiers are needed. We shall watch their records and glory in what we are sure they will worthily do in the fighting lines. We must, however, do more than that. We must see that they have no need, whether of socks or tobacco, or of anything else we can supply. We must show our pride in them by our provision for their wants. We shall see the faces of some of them no more, but the unreturning brave, will not pass away in vain. They will have given life in the greatest cause for which men do not die in vain, if they die fighting for its triumph.

POWER OF THE PARTY SPIRIT.

President Wilson, of the United States, in his diplomatic correspondence, has fine regard for the two dominating elements of the ruling spirit of the nation he governs. For nearly two years he has been sending polite notes to Germany in regard to the barbarity implied in the killing of United States citizens by submarine murderers. In the matter of the loss of life he has never lost his politeness. True he has delivered several last warnings, but every last warning has been followed by another. This in regard to the loss of life. But when the loss of money comes into question, when correspondence regarding merchandise or stocks or bonds is opened and examined by the British government, with the object of intercepting treasonable communication or information of military importance to the enemy, the indignation of Uncle Sam is concentrated in the stiffest kind of a note, a sort of stand-and-deliver ultimatum to John Bull and the allies. Sinking a few United States citizens, must of course, be protested against, mildly of course so as not to offend German sensibilities or antagonize the hyphenated vote, but the risk of losing a dollar, invites thunderous protest. But we must not be hard on President Wilson. He has to defer to political exigencies. There is a presidential election in the air, and all sorts of political and party sentiment is to be conciliated. No matter how humanity is outraged, no matter how much the life of the United States citizen is left to epistolary protection, the life of the party must be safeguarded. The question of Mexican muddle, the question of submarine slaughter, the question of the only international friendships the genius of the United States ideals can tolerate, must be accomodated to the political situation. Once the elections are over Uncle Sam will be himself again, he will make the Kaiser come to time; he will quit twisting the lion's tail and will make the Gringos be good. We can't, however, throw stones at Uncle Sam in relation to the slavery to party. In Canada, even with the stress of war work heavily upon us; even with our sons and fellow citizens offered to the Maloch of war, we have allowed the machinery of party to take a good deal of the steam we should have furnished the machinery of war preparation. We have allowed the party spirit, expressed through the spirit of the patronage list, to send our soldiers to meet the shock of the enemy inadequately, or not promptly enough supplied with fighting material. The German spirit is bad enough, but the party spirit is not without its power to introduce partial paralysis, even in the stress of an unspeakably wicked and awful war.

Do Our Recruiting Methods Need Improvement?

Canada is evidently stalled in the matter of recruiting, and if more men, in any considerable number, are to be sent to Kitchener's armies it is very apparent that there must be a speedy and drastic change of method. Sir Robert Borden may be satisfied with the fact that we have already raised some 235,000 men of the 500,000 men he has promised to raise, but it is hard to find anyone else interested in the cause of recruiting who is in this complacent mood. And even if no fault can be found with the number of men who have thus far enlisted there is reason to complain that they are being obtained without discrimination and with recruitment of the effort upon the agricultural or manufacturing industry.

The whole subject is reviewed by "A Canadian Officer" in the Toronto Globe of Saturday last. This gentleman says:

New life has got to be infused into old methods, or old methods displaced by new ones, old systems discarded. In Britain an army of four millions was raised voluntarily. If the standard of education in the Old Country rural districts was as high as that in and around London, that number would be eight millions. The 'great middle classes" went for the thing for all they were worth. The stupid, the ignorant, the pig-headed stopped out of it until they were dragged in, and now are forced in by conscription. Canada is a middle-class country. Yet, oddly enough, it is the middle-class young man who thinks he is too "deuced clever a fellow" to see the force of a recruiting sergeant's arguments. He would also almost rather sacrifice his honour than his "independence." Which simply means that he is being stroked the wrong way.

Unless a man is born with a natural bent in a given direction, he looks very coolly on the efforts of those who would induce him by means of a verbal bludgeon to do a thing for which he has little taste. The greater his education, the less does he appreciate being man-handled with words. Give him a solid argument—show him, and he may change his views, if he's possessed of any real gumption.

British newspapers adopted a definite policy. A policy of educating the people to appreciate the situation. They appealed to the best men, and the appeal was not in vain; they gave the hesitating a hearty slap on the back, and told them to go in and win; they cajoled the faint-hearted and the men who did not want to fight. They cursed the cowards, showing them naked in the shame of their cowardliness, and made all decent men shudder at the prospect of being thought one of them. They bullied the government to increase scales and allowances for dependents. In south, they used every device they could muster to "show them." But when it came to the hopelessly ignorant and the hopelessly stubborn the men who did not want to fight and die got want to know why or what they fought for, then they gave up. That is why Britain has conscription to-day.

Canada does not want conscription if it can be avoided, and there is no need to talk anything of the kind until our government and our people have done many things they have not yet even tried. The government needs to organize recruiting as it would any other department of public business, and just as the Imperial government has done. Thus far it has attempted no organization of any kind along these lines, and has permitted recruiting to grow wild, like Topsy. It is time for it to substitute business efficiency for the present lack of system. As for the people, it is apparent that they are being lulled to insensibility to duty by reason of the prevalent prosperity, and the fact that the war has become an old story. In some unexplainable manner they expect the Allies are going to win, and they are even willing to contribute, liberally, in a patronizing kind of way, to the various patriotic funds, but they are not nearly as keen as to the making of real sacrifice for the cause of Empire as they were a year ago, and their indifference is being reflected in the disinclination to sacrifice by enlistment which so many of our young men are now showing. In fact, the present state of feeling is altogether too smug, both with government and people, and both need a good shaking up.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Receives a Letter Written By Pte. Darling Four Days Before His Death

Bright and Cheery Words, in Which He Speaks Interestingly of His Life in the Trenches.

SENT TO MRS. DARRAH

Mrs. Darrah, 390 Chamberlain Street, mother of Pte. Dave Darrah who left here with the 8th Mounted Rifles, has received the following letter from the late Pte. Norman Darling, written just four days before his death:

Belgium, May 19th, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Darrah,—I had the good fortune to be in the same dugout as Dave when your letter reached me last night, or, to be exact, early this morning, when I got back from carrying rations up to the boys in the front line, and while he was making a 4 a.m. cup of tea for us. I read it to him, so he got the benefit of your welcome letter as much as I did. I hadn't seen him for about three weeks, and you can imagine how pleased I was when getting here to the support trench to find him snug and cosey in a little dug-out all by himself, so I shook the company and threw my belongings in along with his, and for three days now we have been making a home out of this dug-out and living and feeling as merry as kings. Sorry to say we part to-night for I hit the front line for a four-days' spell while he moves up a piece, but not quite so far, and so won't likely see each other again until we get out for another rest. Dave met Butcher last night in the communication trench coming out from having done his turn in, and although I must have passed him myself, it being rainy and dark, I didn't recognize him but from Dave's account he is standing the hardships equally as well as we are, so you see we three Peterborough boys are all accounted for and are all going strong. Of course we have all kinds of hardships and run big risks, but if you had a "snap" of Dave and I in this dug-out, laughing and talking while we cook our meals on a coal oil stove, trying to figure out some new dish or way to serve "bully beef" you wouldn't worry so much, but laugh, yourself, to see how contented and self-satisfied we look when the meal turns out a bigger success than we expected. Of course it is not all pleasure we get, but we manage to see the bright side of things, which, in ordinary life, would be annoying. When we get back we have it all planned out to build a dug-out in your back yard and live this life until such times as we get civilized enough to appear in a parlour. We certainly won't be able to feel comfortable without our mess can, big boots, muddy clothes, and all the rest, for quite a time. Wasn't around when Dave got your parcels but was O.K. on one he got last night from Miss Kennealley, and hope to be around when your next one arrives. Those parcels from Canada sure touch the right spot, both stomach and heart. Hope you meet mother, and become friends, but get over being anxious for us. Being old soldiers now we know how to take care of ourselves and will be coming home 'ere long, better sons than before, and with a better understanding of the word (mother) in our hearts. Must close.

Sincerely,
NORMAN.

Council Suggests That Repairs To South Central School Be Not More Than $4000 For The Present

The Council decided at last night's meeting to ask the Board of Education to consider the suggestion that the proposed alterations to the South Central school be limited to $3,000 or $4,000 instead of 15,000 as planned by the Board. The Council clearly showed its desire to support the Board in putting this school in a good condition, but they felt that there were a number of items in the plans that might be dispensed with for a few years. Ald. Edgar opposed the resolution, taking the stand that the Council should immediately grant the Board's request. The Finance Committee was deputed to wait upon the Board and to report back as soon as possible. It is hoped that this question will be disposed of by Monday night.

Ald Strattor reading from architect Blackwell's report said he felt that the basement should be fitted up and the furnaces repaired, but the levelling of the floors, exterior painting and other items might be left over until conditions were more favourable for building.

Ald. Duncan felt that a large work should not be undertaken now, but the furnaces had been in use twenty-five years and were beyond repair. Besides, the levelling of the floors is part of the plan to provide playrooms in the basement. Hence there was a certain interdependence between these items, and if one were included so should the other.

Mayor Duffus remarked that the scarcity of labor and the extra cost thereby was the only objection he could see to the Board of Education's extensive repairs.

Ald Evans thought that it was not good business to spend $15,000 on that old school. The time is coming he said, when the houses to the east of the building should be purchased and at least half the block provided for a new school.

Ald. Weir remarked that it was not the Council's place to dictate to the Board.

Mayor Duffus—We must do it anyway. I feel the Board should know what they want.

Ald. Edgar—I feel that the Board has given more thought to the requirements of that buliding than we have. I don't think they have asked for more than they want.

Ald. Duncan said he would like to see the heating and ventilation improved.

In this connection the ventilation depends upon the plumbing and the heating, according to Ald. Edgar. The levelling of the floors is closely associated with the basement playrooms, and proceeding in this direction all but a few items seem to be unavoidable. However, the Council desired a friendly interview with the Board first to request them to consider Ald. Stratton's suggestion that an attempt be made to equip the school at a cost of not more than $4,000 for the present.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Still another drowning to the credit of the Locks! Why this spot is left in its present condition, in view of repeated fatalities, is past comprehension. To an expert canoeist it is dangerous; to a 'green horn' to attempt to come up against it to the portage or roll way is invariably an upset. Particularly at this season of the year the "bails" from the dam are positively unnavigable and, mark you, to reach the only provision made for hauling canoes over, the canoeist is forced to go through them. Without a warning notice within sight the unsuspecting amateur comes up the river in the still water or back eddy of the Locks it is easy paddling until the swift current; then, with the bow of the canoe in the grip of the racing river, and the stern in still water the boat is wrenched around beyond control, overturned, and tossed down stream, like a chip of wood and another drowning is recorded or narrowly averted.

What can be done? Either a break water should be built, so that small boats can come up to this portage in still water, or failing in this, an illuminated sign should be erected warning all canoeists not to attempt it. This warning, to be of any use must be emphatic: 'Take heed, do not attempt the current when the rives is in flood. Many drownings have occurred here. You may be the next."

March to the Station.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the battalion moved off from the parade ground for the march to the station. The band of the 57th Regiment headed the battalion playing "O Canada." George street was lined deep with people, and as the battalion marched along looking fit and well with their faces nearly as bronzed as their uniforms and carrying the full equipment, with great coats rolled over their shoulders, they were repeatedly cheered, while friends at the windows and on the balconies waved handkerchiefs. As the battalion marched along looking "Are we down-hearted!" some one in the khaki brigade would shout, and from the long line would come a thunderous "no." Along Charlotte street there were the same crowds which increased as the head of the column approached the G.T.R. station. Around the station itself thousands had gathered.

The battalion marched west to Bethune street and then wheeled to the south. Special train No. 1 was in waiting, and in a few minutes, without any confusion or trouble, the members of the band and of A and B companies were entrained. From Charlotte street the crowd extended as far south as King street, filling the road, which was ankle deep in mud. Soiled dresses and muddy mothers, sisters and sweethearts shoes were not considered as wives, crowded in to say the last farewells to loved ones. The affecting scenes of other send-offs to Peterobrough soldiers were multiplied many times over this morning. Some women managed to say their good-byes cheerfully for the sake of the dear one who was leaving and then turned away into the crowd sobbing. Others wept unrestrainedly, and although the boys in khaki did their best to cheer their relatives, many of the soldiers themselves were seen to wipe away a tear as they embraced mother or wife.

First Train Goes.

Promptly at 9.30 o'clock the long train started to draw slowly out of the station amid cheers and the waving of handkerchiefs from the huge crowd. From every window a soldier shouted good-bye, while from the platform of the coaches were other figures in khaki who waved their hands in farewell. On the platform of the last coach was Major R. P. Watt in command of the troops on the first train and Major Leak, third in command of the battalion.

Departure of Train No. 2.

During the half hour's wait for the second train the friends of the men made the most of their opportunities by saying good-bye and imparting last messages. The half hour passed very quickly. Train No. 2 was ready nine minutes before 10 o'clock, and C and D companies, the Signallers, Pioneers, Machine Gun Section, Taymaster's Staff, Battalion Orderly Room Staff and Hospital Staff were entrained with military precision. During the wait music was furnished by the 57th Band. The scenes that attended the departure of the first train were repeated, and then, on time to the minute, the second long train drew away. Lt.-Col. Johnston, who was personally in charge of the second section of the battalion, waved a last farewell to the crowd from the front steps of the last car, while on the rear platform were Capt. J. E. R. Munro, adjutant of the battalion and other officers who were the last things in sight as the train disappeared.

The arrangements for the departure of the troops reflected credit upon the officers of the battalion and upon the G.T.R. officials. Company officers had seen to it that train guards were detailed and a supply of food on board each car for the refreshment of the men en route. No one was allowed to board the cars after the men had entrained and there was no confusion. The transport officers who looked after the details were Lieut. Sexton for A company, Lieut. McNab for B company, Lieut. Milburn for C company, Lieut. Hatten for D company, and Lieut. Crisp for the Staff.

Firemen's Increase Granted as Asked

The Fire, Water and Light committee met last night just long enough to grant the demand of the firemen that they receive an increase of 25 cents a day. Ald. Evans presided, and without any parley, Ald. Saunders proposed the necessary resolution which Mayor Duffus seconded.

Ald. Evans remarked that the committee had made a saving of $534.03 at the city hall by the fact that the staff would be kept at its former complement.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE 93rd BATTALION

Some Incidents in the Career of The Fine Overseas Unit Which Left Peterboro This Morning on the First Stage of The Journey to The Front.

HAS SPLENDID RECORD

Peterborough's fine overseas battalion which left this morning for Barriefield Camp has had an interesting career, and a short resume of its history should be interesting just now.

The first suggestion of a battalion for Peterborough County was coincident with the organization of the Peterborough branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League. This useful association was formed at the end of July last year, and in the first week of August launched a monster recruiting campaign, of which a mass meeting in the Armouries, addressed by Hon. Geo. Foster, was the crowning feature. This was on August 4th, and at that time the suggestion was made by the Speakers' Patriotic League that Peterborough County be allowed to form an overseas battalion. The suggestion was not acted on by the Government at the time, but a little later, on August 23 to be exact, it was announced by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., that Peterborough was to be made an infantry headquarters and training depot, and that at least 500 men would be trained here during the winter.

First Recruits Leave.

In the meantime there was a great increase in recruiting, and by the end of the third week in August over 100 recruits, including twenty bandsmen, had enrolled themselves. There was some doubt as to whether these men, with the exception of the band, were to join the 59th Battalion at Barriefield or remain in Peterborough as the nucleus of a new unit. Lieut.-Col. Walker allowed the men to make their choice, and on August 26 the band and thirty-three men left for Barriefield, leaving fifty-six here for the new battalion. This was really the beginning of the 93rd, although the battalion was not definitely authorized for nearly two months afterward.

At that time it was understood that the Peterborough detachment would form part of the 80th Battalion at Belleville, but in spite of that local authorities still clung to the hope that a Peterborough battalion would eventually materialize. Major R. T. Hounsell, of the 57th Regiment, was placed temporarily in charge of the recruits on August 28th. On September 1st, Sergt. Walter Hughes, cornet soloist of the 57th Regiment Band, was appointed bandmaster, and the work of organizing the present splendid band commenced, the musicians of the 57th Regiment and Temple Bands quickly responding to the call.

On Sept. 7th Lieut.-Col. Johnston, now Commanding Officer of the 93rd, was announced as second in command of the 80th Battalion, and took over the command of the local detachment. On Sept. 18th the recruits, then 136 strong, were inspected at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition by Sir Sam. Hughes.

Peterborough Headquarters.

A few days later, on Sept. 27th, the announcement was made from Ottawa that Peterborough would be the headquarters of the new battalion, with two companies to be recruited here and a company each in Cobourg and Lindsay. This left the status of the recruits who had already enlisted in doubt. It was not known at that time whether they would still be continued as part of the 80th Battalion or not.

Authorized in October.

In fact it was not until a month later that it was officially announced that the Peterborough battalion would be known as he 93rd Overseas Battalion, and that the officers and men who had joined here, and had been carried on the strength of the 80th, would form the nucleus of the 93rd. The announcement arrived at the Armouries just as the Medical Officer of the 80th was examining the local men with a view of having them removed to Belleville, and was enthusiastically received by the men. In November headquarters announced that recruiting for the 93rd would be confined to Peterborough County.

About the same time it was announced that Lieut.-Col. Jos. Mills, of the 2nd Battalion, formerly of the 57th Regiment, was on his way home to take command of the 93rd. Col. Mills arrived in Peterborough early in December, and was in command for a few days when he was called to Ottawa, and presented with a splendid Christmas box in the form of the important appointment of Inspector of Supply and Transport for No. 3 (Toronto) Division, which he accepted. On December 30, Lieut.-Col. Johnston, of the 3rd Dragoons, who had been acting Officer Commanding practically since the commencement of the battalion, was placed in command.

Recruiting continued steadily. By Christmas the battalion had reached the 500 mark. Recruiting stations were opened at Lakefield, Apsley, Havelock, and Norwood, and the announcement that the men who enlisted at these centres would be allowed to train there for the winter had a marked effect on recruiting.

On May 3rd and 4th these platoons were mobilized in Peterborough.

Splendid Conduct.

The stay of the 93rd Battalion in Peterborough has been remarkable for the splendid behaviour of the men in khaki. Throughout the long months the battalion was here there was not the slightest trouble of any kind. A small force of military police, aided by the good conduct of the soldiers individually, has kept law and order so efficiently that probably any similar number of civilians during the same period could not show as good a record.

The Recruiting Problems.

While the 93rd has been longer in organizing than some of the county battalions, this may be accounted for very easily. In the first place the county of Peterborough is on the whole sparsely populated and widely scattered, with few large centres, making the work of reaching eligible men difficult. This threw a lot of the task of raising the battalion upon the city of Peterborough, and, different from many other cities, there were frequent calls here for many for other units. First the Mounted Rifles took away 45 men. Then 60 more went to the 59th Battalion, and some 15 to the 80th; while 145 joined the 33rd Battery, practically the whole battery coming from this city. More recently the 58nd Battery took 60 splendid recruits away, and a number of others have joined other units, so that altogether since recruiting started for the Peterborough County Battalion, some 360 residents of Peterborough have enlisted outside the battalion. Since last August enough citizens of Peterborough have enlisted to complete the strength of the 93rd if they were together, without calling on the county at all, so that there is no reason to feel that the district has been backward. Since the war commenced 2,300 Peterborough men have joined the colours, or one for every nine of Peterborough's population. The average for Canada is about one for every twenty-five.

A Family Battalion.

That the 93rd is a family battalion is evidenced by the fact that there are thirty-five pairs of brothers in its ranks, while no less than fifteen fathers are serving with their sons in the battalion. There are five brothers from one family in the 93rd, the five Taylors from Ghemong Indian Village.

Funeral of Man Who Met Tragic Death Near Cavanville, Took Place Yesterday From Millbrook to Presbyterian Cemetery.

THE JURY

MILLBROOK, May 30.—Despite rumours to the contrary there is little apparent mystery attached to the of Edward Welsh, whose badly mangled body was found strewn over the C.P.R. bridge that crosses the middle road a few hundred yards south of Cavanville. Deceased was last seen alive on Saturday evening. About six o'clock Sunday morning a train crew reported the finding of the body, and it was shortly after five o'clock Sunday evening, or nearly twelve hours later, before the remains were removed from the side of the track where they were placed out of the way of passing trains. It is surmised that Welsh was struck by one of the midnight trains from Toronto. He had been dead several hours when found. The left foot was completely severed, also the right leg below the knee. In addition to this deceased sustained a fracture of the skull, which was partly severed from the body. Death was instantaneous.

Inquest adjourned.

An inquest was held yesterday at eleven o'clock with Coroner Dr. McKinley of Port Hope, preciding. After viewing the remains the inquest was adjourned until Thursday evening when some of the trainmen will be summoned to give evidence concerning the tragic affair. The following jury was empanelled: A. T. Kelly (foreman), James Paul, Edward Keggan, Edwin Moore, James Perrin, Bert Perrin, Howard Keggan, William Tinney, S. Hutchinson, John Mcnight and Thomas Douglas.

Crown Attorney F. W. Kerr will be present at the hearing on Thursday evening in addition to a number of C. P. R. officials.

Funeral Yesterday.

The remains were interred in the Presbyterian cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral which took place from Gillott's undertaking parlours, was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Lees. The deceased was thirty-six years of age and was unmarried. His mother, who is upwards of eighty years of age, survives. Welsh who was very fond of his mother made frequent trips to her home in Lindsay. His last trip was made on the twenty-fourth of May. William and Patrick Welsh of Lindsay survive, also one sister in Toronto.

JORDAN'S FLOWERS AND PLANTS

During the past week there has been a blaze of spring-time splendour inside the Jordan greenhouses, Argyle street, and crowds of visitors have gazed with admiration at the brilliant floral displays. The Jordan bloom has excelled itself this season. The great benches of red and white and blue and pink, and gold and green have won a reputation such as few flower growers in their line have excelled. The six long stretches of glass houses that were filled to their capacity and teeming with bloom and foliage a short fortnight ago, are beginning to show the effect of the big rush that has been on for their home-grown products, although the supply will be equal to all forth coming demand.

ST PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB MEETS ON WED. OF PRESENT WEEK

On account of Thursday being Ascension Day, the work-room and tea-room will be open on Wednesday (to-morrow). All the members who can possibly do so are asked to try and be present to-morrow and help in this noble cause of making not only comforts but necessities for our brave boys who are fighting our battles in this terrible war; also for our sick and wounded soldiers who are suffering at present in hospitals, and who, but for the work of the Red Cross, would have very little help at this trying time. All the ladies of the city are invited to come to our weekly teas, remembering that by doing so they are adding to a fund to buy yarn and other articles of comfort for the boys and at the same time enjoy a social half-hour with St. Peter's Patriotic Club. Tea will be served to-morrow from 5 to 7, and on Thursday, every other week.

TURNBULLS

Quaker Oats Co. Asks for Closing of Mill St. and East End of Murry St. For Improvements

Mr. W. H. Denham, superintendent of the Quaker Oats Co., asked the Council last night to close and appropriate to the company Mill Street and the east end of Murray Street where it turns into Mill Street.

A previous letter from Mr. Denham stated that the company planned within a year or so the building of an office building, warehouse, corn meal mill and increased grain storage. The future facilities and even the present require a change in the arrangement of the spur line which will affect the railway entrance to the Quaker Oats Co. property on Hunter Street. It will necessitate the present west crossing to be moved a considerable distance up Hunter St. This will entail the lowering of the grade where the removed spur would cross the street. "At the north end of the Hydraulic Power Co. property, when the city has no further use for the arc light system it is proposed to abandon the small power house at the end of Murray Street and eventually fill up the headrace.

"This would be done for the purpose of straightening out our spur line at that end of the plant," Mr. Denham wrote, "so as to allow the increasing of our storage capacity by additional storage tanks."

"It is also extremely necessary to our mind that the traffic over the present Hydraulic Company's dam be done away with. We would not care to create a hardship for those citizens who reside east of the river, and, as I understand it, you are now considering the question of utilizing the piers which form part of the old Dickson dam for the purpose of constructing a foot and waggon bridge at that point. We would therefore suggest that if the city sees fit to use the old piers of the Dickson dam and construct a suitable timber bridge at that point, that the Hydraulic Company lease to the city for a term, for instance, of ten years the right to use these piers, and that the Hydraulic Company would also agree to provide an outlet on the East City side of the river and would also agree to the continuation of London Street around the head of the present bay, so as to connect with the proposed waggon bridge. This lease could no doubt be renewed for further periods, at least we know nothing now whereby the Hydraulic Company would require the removal of a bridge of that nature for years to come. In consideration of such a lease and of the additions to the plant which have been made in the past, and which we contemplate making in the future, we would request the closing of the east end of Murray Street at the present western boundaries of the Hydraulic property; that that portion of Murray Street be deeded to the Hydraulic Company for a nominal figure and that what is known as Mill Street, which lies wholly within the Hydraulic Company's property, be abandoned and also deeded to the Hydraulic Company. There has been some objection by the Dickson Co. in the past to the closing of Murray Street. We do not see how the closing of Murray Street could in any way deteriorate the value of the Dickson Company's property, especially if Murray Street is closed at the western lines of the Hydraulic Company. That portion of the street, we venture to say, has not been in use for the traffic of vehicles of any description during the past fifteen years, and could not be of any value for traffic on account of its steep grade, and from the fact that any waggons or other vehicles which could possibly take advantage of that street would be coming on to the Hydraulic property solely in connection with that company's business."

Mr. Denham supplemented this letter last night by referring to the company's continuous employment, progress and expansion. The Quaker Oats had practically meant five industries for Peterborough, the cereal business, power plant, Light and Power Co., Gas Company, and Street Railway Company.

Ald. Weir discussed with him the provision of a bridge to East City, and Mr. Denham even offered a right-of-way from the old Dickson stables north of the upper dam.

Ald. Stratton urged that Mr. Denham's request be referred to the City Solicitor and City Engineer for consideration. Ald. Weir seconded Ald. Stratton's motion to that effect, calling for an early report.

Mr. Denham emphasized his statement that Murray Street does not extend beyond Mill Street to the river.

The simplest method of writing on glass is to moisten its surface with vinegar and then to write upon it with an aluminum point.

To clean a greasy stove dip a cloth in dry soot and rub over the greasy places. Then apply blacklead and the spots will disappear.

When sewing ball and socket snaps on a garment be sure to sew the ball snap on the upper piece. The socket snap leaves a mark.

CROP SITUATION IN AND ADJOINING CAVAN TOWNSHIP

Mr. A. T. Kelly, Ex-Warden, Has Reasons to Believe That the Prospects are Even Better Than Last Year's.

THE FRUIT CROP

MILLBROOK, May 30. — The crop situation in this and surrounding townships are very good considering the lateness of the season. The majority of farmers are through with their spring seeding and are busy preparing the ground for the root crop. Mr. A. T. Kelly, ex-warden of the counties of Northumberland and Durham, states that the prospects for a good crop are very good, and in fact superior to last year. This year the season was late due to the excessive rains. This had the effect of making the land difficult to work with the result that the season has been a hard one on horses.

Help Is Scarce.

In speaking of the help situation, Mr. Kelly states that while he has been able to secure sufficient men, there is a scarcity throughout the neighbourhood. When a man's board is taken into consideration the prevailing wages amount to about two dollars a day. This is at the rate of thirty or thirty-five dollars a month. In some cases this wage includes the cost of keeping a horse for the hired man, which by the way is a twentieth century innovation.

The Fruit Crop.

"The prospects for a large fruit crop are excellent," said Mr. Kelly. "The bloom on the trees, particularly the apple trees, is profuse, and unless a late frost or a blight of some kind should effect the orchards, there is every reason to expect a large apple crop."

Mr. Kelly sees no reason why the crops should not be as good this year as they were last year. The season is a little late, but given good weather the growing crops will more than make up for the belated season. Mr. Kelly finished spring seeding yesterday. Only in two previous years of Mr. Kelly's farming experience has the season been so late. It will be well into June before some of the low land is ready for the cultivator and the seed drill. This will mean that a larger acreage of buckwheat, corn, flax and other late crops will be sown.

BAKER HEIRS WILL PLAN CAMPAIGN IN DETROIT ON JUNE 6

Property in Philadelphia Is Now Worth Over $700,000,000.

DETROIT, May 30.—Two hundred claimants to the famous Baker estate of Philadelphia, which is now estimated to be worth the fabulous sum of seven hundred million dollars, will meet in Detroit on June 6 for the purpose of laying out a plan of campaign to contest the will of the eccentric Quaker multi-millionaire.

The heirs, who are all distant relatives, are scattered all over Canada and the United States. The meeting here will be held at the home of A. J. Cable, 690 Wabash avenue, one of the claimants.

Those possessing family Bibles showing direct relationship to the Baker family, will be given the greatest consideration, although any legal documents proving the right of title will be accepted.

Much of the estate to be divided consists of valuable real estate in the heart of Philadelphia's business section. The trust companies administering the estate are said to hold cash amounting to many millions.

SAYS DAUGHTER WAS STONED TO DEATH

Tarrytown Clergyman Issues Statement That Accuses Schoolgirl of Instigating Attack of Boys.

TARRYTOWN, N.Y., May 30. — The Rev. L. E. Keiser, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church, made a statement Friday in which he says his daughter Dorothy, eight years old, was stoned to death by boys and that the attack upon her was instigated by a girl.

Dorothy died recently in the Tarrytown Hospital of the rupture of a kidney. She was on her way to school a few days before when she quarrelled with another girl, and, according to her father, that girl urged several boys to pursue Dorothy and throw stones at her. One of the many stones struck her, one hit her in the back and inflicted the injury which resulted in death.

THE WAR AND THE JEWS IN THE LIGHT OF PROPHECY

This and Other Subjects Discussed Yesterday at the Bible Study And Prophetic Conference.

The Growth of Spiritualism and Belief in the Occult Believed to be Signs of the End of the Age.

Four striking addresses were given yesterday afternoon and evening at the Bible Study and Prophetic Conference which is in progress in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. The speakers were two laymen, Mr. W. F. Coote, Chairman of the Laymen's Evangelistic committee of the Hamilton Methodist Conference who is a manufacturer in that city, and Mr. H. E. Irwin, K.C., of Toronto, and Rev. F. S. Weston, Pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, Toronto.

Mr. Coote's address was entitled "A Layman's Testimony". He described the effect, the belief in the second advent had in his life when he studied it and grasped its importance and meaning. He gave the testimony of a Methodist Minister who in the course of his different pastorates found that the most devout members of his congregations were those who believed in the second advent. This led him to study the subject and ultimately to adopt it. Mr. Cotte referred to the lack of evangelistic power and to the fact that as many conversions are not being made as there should be in many churches and expressed the belief that this was due to the fact that the churches lacked spiritual power, partly because they have discounted the many scriptural passages that speak of the second return of Christ.

In the evening a masterly address was given by Mr. Irwin, who stated that although he had taken a special course in the study of psychology during his college days and studied many books bearing thereon he had ultimately discovered from careful observation and as a result of experience that the greatest book on the subject is the Bible. Belief in the second advent hope is a practical doctrine. This is shown by the fact that it is always associated in the Scriptures with some practical aspect of life. The apostles when referring to the second advent always urged Christians because of that hope to purify themselves, to comfort one another, to wait with patience, and set in other similar ways because of their belief that the Lord was coming. Mr. Irwin described how men who formerly did many things approved of by the world began dropping one after the other of these because of their conviction that should the Lord come for them they would not want to be found doing just these things. In this way he showed that the vision of one looking for the second coming of the Lord is toward Heaven and thus it has a purifying effect on the life.

THE MIRACLE OF SATAN

Two impressive and striking addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Weston. Many Christians have been confused while reading the authorized version of the Bible by reading of the end of the world. The correct rendition of this expression should be the end of the age or the consummation of the age as it is given in the marginal reading. Thus, many things in the scriptures which people associate with the end of the world should really only be associated with the end of the age.

Mr. Weston showed that it is shown in the Scriptures that Satan has power to perform miracles and even to deceive those who think they are Christians and thereby use them as his tools make them a means of deceiving others. It is predicted by Paul and Peter that in the last days of this age the devil will put forth every effort to deceive the people and thus to get them in his power.

Some of the more striking passages of Scriptures quoted by Mr. Weston to prove Satan's ability to perform miracles and thereby deceive even Christians were these found in Matt. 7:22-23, which reads "Many will say to Me in that day Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works? Then will I profess unto them I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity." and in Matt. 24:24, where Christ said "For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold I have told you before". Attention was drawn also to 2 Thes. 2:9 where Paul speaking about the coming Anti-Christ stated that the Lord would not return until the Anti-Christ would be revealed. "Even Him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders." Numerous other passages were quoted and Christians were warned to be on their guard against these things.

Mr. Weston drew attention to the rapid growth of spiritualism and mentioned men of international reputation who have now identified themselves with it an dare writing articles and books relating to it. He referred to a newspaper despatch showing that the Czar of Russia sent for a woman spiritualistic medium to reveal unto him occult matters. In doing this he was doing the same as King Saul did and for which he was condemned by God. Mr. Weston told of ministers having been led to give up their ministry and take up spiritualism, and said that unless we are watching these things we could not grasp how readily these beliefs were spreading and undermining religion.

They were signs of the times and prove the inspiration of the Scriptures which foretold that these things would occur in the last days of the age.

THE WAR AND THE JEWS.

The closing address at last evening's conference was by Rev. Mr. Weston, and was entitled "The Present Condition of the Jews as Related to Prophecy." He showed that the Jews are God's chosen people, and that the Scriptures clearly reveals that while as a race they have been cast off temporarily, many Old Testament writers show that they are to be re-gathered from among the nations and restored to their own land, where their temple will be rebuilt. One of the most striking passages relating to this is found in Acts 15: 13-18, and in the whole 11th chapter of Romans, and particularly the 25th to the 27th verses.

Among the prophecies relating to the Jews is one that they shall obtain wealth from the different nations. The fig tree is a symbol of Israel. When Christ cursed the fig tree it was a sign of the casting off of that race, but later He told His disciples that the fig tree was yet to bring forth leaf and that when this would take place it would be a sure sign of the approach of His second coming. The Jews as a race were scattered among the nations as foretold in prophecy, and for over 1,800 years have been without a people and without a home. Now, however, they are beginning to show signs of national life, and are holding national conferences and raising funds, preparatory to their return to Jerusalem. They are rapidly acquiring the wealth of the world. One Jewish banking house alone controls $60,000,000,000. Half of the rich people of Germany when the war started were Jews, although they are only 2 per cent. of the population. One out of every six of the notable men of Great Britain are Jews, although they constitute less than one per cent. of the people. Five members of the French Cabinet and fourteen of the leading generals of the French Army are Jews. In the United States half of the students of Columbia University and three-quarters of the students in the New York University are Jews. A number of other striking facts relating to this great race were cited as indications that the end of this age and the second advent are drawing near.

The speakers at to-day's conference are Rev. A. B. Winchester, of Knox Presbyterian Church of Toronto, and Rev. Canon Howitt, of Hamilton. Rev. Mr. Grobb will act as chairman this evening. Canon Howitt will speak on "The Signs of the Times," and Rev. Mr. Winchester on "Letters from Heaven to the Churches." The speakers to-morrow will be Rev. R. V. Bingham and Dr. E. R. Hooper, of Toronto. At 3 o'clock they will speak on "The Times of the Gentiles" and "The Millenium," and at 8 p.m. on "The Anti-Christ" and "The Second Advent and the Missionary Program."

LETTER FROM THE LATE PTE. DARLING

The appended letter addressed to Miss Clarissa Peever, 541 Water street, was written by Private Norman Darling, four days prior to his death. The letter reads as follows:

Belgium, May 10th.

"I thought for sure you had forgotten me when you didn't write for so long, and I was just about ready to go back and see what was the matter with you when your nice letter came along last night and I am not downhearted any more.

"It must be about a year since you wrote last, which is an awful long time to neglect a fellow, and only I am so good-natured I'd be real mad at you, but seeing we get along so nicely together I'll forgive you this time, but don't let it happen again.

"I am glad to hear you are doing so well at school, and I would like to see those boots you got for passing at Christmas, so don't wear them out until I get back, and I will trade you one of my big ones which I wear in the trenches, and which are a great thing to use on the Kaiser when I get him where I want him. You had better send that bull-dog of yours over to me if he is such a good scrapper, and I'll turn him loose on Fritz, who is only forty yards away from me now, and I bet he will scare him worse than I am doing at present. He has been trying his hardest to hit me with a big shell ever since I came to here a few days ago, but I am a pretty good dodger and he has to go some if he does for I am a pretty small target. Just now he must be cleaning out his gun for he is quiet, and I hope he stays that way until I get this finished.

"That joke of yours about the Christmas jewellery was good, and I sprung it on some of the boys, and they guessed at everything from Ireland to mud-turtles, but had to give it up.

"Tell your daddy that the shirt and socks he gave mother to send to me got here and every fine day I take off my tunic and parade around in front of the other boys just to show off a little, and let them know that our church don't let us soldiers go around in the trenches with just a common grey shirt on.

"Write me as soon as you get this, and let me know how you are getting along at school, and tell me everything that happens. Remember me to everybody. Bye, bye.

"NORMAN."

With the salad serve salted wafers which have been buttered, sprinkled with paprika and Parmesan cheese, and browned in the oven.

To make bananas perfectly digestible bake them on a grid in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. They should be eaten fresh from the skin with a fork.

$89 FROM TOWNSHIP OF ENNISMORE

Grant Made to 93rd Battalion Fund —Council Meets

The Ennismore Council met in Court of Revision on May 16, 1916. All members were present and Reeve Crough in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. No appeals against the assessment roll were sent in, which appears satisfactory on the part of the local assessor. No changes were made in the road masters since the first appointment on March 6, 1916.

Moved by Mr. Perdue, seconded by Mr. Holland, that St. Joseph's Hospital be paid the sum of forty-eight dollars for forty-eight days' board and treatment in said hospital to Mrs. McValley.

The ever standing ravage of the canine race seems to prevail despite approved sections of the animal.

When Daniel Kennedy, valuator, sent in the valuation of two lambs killed by dogs and owned by Patrick Crough, at six dolalrs each. The Council decided not to consider the payment for losses of sheep killed by dogs until on or about the fifteenth day of December, 1916.

Moved by Messrs Guiry and Crowley, that this meeting adjourn until on or about the tenth day of June, 1916, or until the call of the Reeve.

May 23.—J. Duffus, the worthy Mayor of Peterborough, and G. Gillespie, M.P.P., met the Council of Ennismore asking them to contribute a municipal war grant to aid the 93rd Battalion to purchase military supplies. The said council did contribute one-quarter of a mill on the dollar on the local assessment of Ennismore, equivalent to eighty-nine dollars.

FROM A BELGIAN ON HIS LANDING IN ENGLAND

"The distant boom of angry guns
No longer fills my ear;
Oh, whither have we fled, my son?
Tell me, that I may hear."
"Father, we are in England!"

"No more I hear the stormy wind
Amid the rigging roar;
I feel beneath my tottering feet
The firm ground of the shore.
Is this the end of all our woes,
Shall we not suffer more!"
"Father, we are in England!"

"I hear the sound of kindly speech,
But do not understand;
I feel I've wandered far,
Far from the fatherland;
How comes it that these tones are not
Those of an unknown land?"
"Father, we are in England!"

"Bend down upon thy knees, my son,
And take into thy hand,
Thy wounded hand, and raise, somewhat
That, dreaming of our home, we two
May kiss the soil of England!"

Albert E. Juby and Alex. Kidd Favorities With Council For The Sanitary Inspectorship

No Appointment Made By Council But Committee Selected to Bring in a Recommendatory Report—Twenty-One Applications.

SALARIES FROM $500 TO $1000

By a balloting system of elimination the council last night reduced twenty-one applications for the position of Sanitary Inspector to two, Albert E. Juby of the grocery firm of Juby Bros. Charlotte street and Patrol Sergeant Alex Kidd of the police force.

The second last ballot gave 8 votes for Juby, 6 for Kidd and 5 for Police Constable Blade. On the final vote Juby secured 6 votes and Kidd 5. At this stage Mayor Duffus expressed a desire that the appointment be made forthwith in order that there should be no vacancy of the position: but other members felt that at least Messrs. Juby and Kidd should be interviewed upon certain points before a final decision was made. Ald. Stratton moved seconded by Ald. McIntyre that a committee for this purpose be composed of the Mayor, Ald. Saunders and Ald. Weir to consider the application and bring in a report at the regular meeting on Monday night next.

The committee had a "whale of a time" with their elimination proceedings. Mayor Duffus wished to turn the applications over to the Property Committee, but the chairman Ald. Saunders, preferred that the committee of the whole proceed with their consideration. The next step was to open, read and list them. That done, the Aldermen realized that they were unacquainted with many of the applicants and ignorant of their qualifications. The balloting idea was Ald Edgars. Each Alderman and likewise the Mayor scratched those unknown to them and entered their "favourites" in the preliminary five-for-all. The result left Messrs. Juby, Kidd, Blade, Hope and Howden in the running and then they proceeded until the final ballot gave Juby 6 and Kidd 5 votes Ald. Langford did not make a selection on the last card. He "didn't know either applicant and for that reason refused to name either of them. Alderman Stratton, McIntyre, Dobbin and others advanced a number of reasons for deferring the appointment until a sub-committee had considered the matter. Ald. Duncan who is chairman of the Board of Health held that Dr Amys, M.O.H., should be consulted since the Sanitary Inspector received instructions from him. Ald. Edgar remarked that the council had expressed its opinion on the last ballot and there was little occasion for delaying the decision. However, Ald. Stratton's motion was carried and that closed the matter for the present. In the meantime Mr. Spence transfers his attention from neglected yards etc., to neglected children on Wednesday and the office will have to carry itself for a few days with the momentum he has had imparted to it.

THE APPLICANTS.

The twenty-one applicants were as follows:—

Martin Neary	$ 700
John Meharry	900
W. J. Cox	800
A. W. Blade, and keep of horse	900
Wesley Ross	900
M. Crowe, including transportation	794
A. Hope, 704 George St.,	880
Sergt. T. R. Cooper, plus allowance for horse	700
T. Howden, plus $150 for horse and vehicle	650
Ben White, butcher and veteran of 1866	500
Alexander Kidd	900
H. R. Wilson, 97 Park St.,	600
Robt. J. Bagley	750
P. C. Boutt, Townsend St.	900
Wm. Fair, Sherbrooke St.	800
Frank Russell, and travelling expenses	1,000
Geo. Metcalf	800
Paul M. Ward, 814 Water St...	750
Albert E. Juby	900
James Oates	650
Thos. Tooms, Romaine street.

QUALIFICATIONS.

In his letter Mr. Juby referred to his extensive knowledge of milk tests and sanitary dairy conditions. In this work he had been engaged with Mr. G. A. Gillespie and Mr. G. G. Publow of Kingston besides a long apprenticeship in dairying. Besides he claimed a knowledge of the importance of civic sanitation.

P. C. Kidd referred to his experience in sanitary work in Brampton and his familiarity of local conditions acquired in police duty.

Sergt. Cooper a returned soldier received only one vote on the first ballot.

Mr. S. D. Carver, North Monaghan, has made many visits to the armouries during the stay here of the 93rd Battalion. He is to be congratulated for his success in being able to link up so many with the Pocket Testament League. Mr. Carver has nothing but praises for the 93rd, as he met so many splendid fellows among them, and while some were not interested in the League work, their conduct was always courteous and gentlemanly. Each member of the 93rd Battalion, whether they joined the League or not, have been presented with a pocket testament, and each one who joined the League with a testament and certificate.

Rev. Major Davidson had the duty of leaving by the Belleville train with Lt. Payne's funeral party to represent the 93rd at the funeral service in Stirling, and so was unable to participate in the farewell to the battalion. Major Davidson has officiated at the departure of all the different military detachments which have left Peterborough, probably over a score in number, taking final prayers at the Armouries, helping to lead the demonstrations at the station, and it is unfortunate that he was debarred by duty from having a part in the send-off of his own regiment.

Mr. Peter Campbell, treasurer of the 93rd Battalion Fund, received a cheque for thirty-nine dollars this morning from Mr W. H. Moore of Quebec. This amount represents the collection made recently by the Peterborough men employed at the Ross Rifle Co., Quebec.

SERGT. PIERCY WOUNDED.

Mrs. Palmer of 226 McDonnel Street has received word that her nephew, Sergt. W. R. Piercy of the 21st Battalion, was wounded in the head with a piece of shrapnel and is admitted to hospital. Sergt. Piercy is a former member of the 57th Regiment and enlisted in September, 1914, with the 57th detachment to the 21st Battalion, going overseas with that unit.

A number of factories allowed their employees an hour or so off this morning in order to witness the departure of the 93rd Battalion. The Public schools of the city had a half holiday and the pupils helped to swell the crowd.

Many visitors from different points in the county were here this morning to say good-bye to their friends in the 93rd Battalion.

With not an absentee this morning and with every man sober and fit, Lt.-Col. Johnston had every reason to feel proud of his battalion.

The 93rd Band did not play on the way to the station this morning, the music being furnished by the band of the 57th Regiment.

A farewell party was held at the home of Pte. R. Mitchell, Sr., Water Street, last evening, in honour of a number of members of the 93rd Battalion. Among the soldiers present were Sergt. W. Mitchell, Pte. Will Grist, Pte. Peter Hammond, Pte. Harold Marsh, Pte. R. Mitchell, Pte. Frank Melville, Pte. R. Mitchell, Jr., Mrs. Foster acted as pianist. The evening was a very enjoyable one and was brought to a close with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

The Armouries are deserted to-day with the exception of the Army Service Corps detachment, in charge of Lieut. Green and ten men of the 93rd Battalion, in command of Lieut Might, who are engaged in cleaning the barracks, in order that it may be left in the best possible shape.

The 93rd Battalion goes into camp with a total strength of 1,000 officers and men. The troops who left this morning numbered 850. About 100 men, consisting of the advance party and other details, had preceded them to Barriefield, and the balance is made up of the rear-guard under Lieut. Might; the recruiting staff left here in charge of Lieut. Ketchum, and the non-coms. who are attending the school at London.

COUNCIL ADDED ONE MILL TO TAX RATE FOR THE UNFORSEEN

Taking an extreme paraphrasing liberty it might be said of this prohibition law, that it returns to plague the inventor, in as much as the business tax paid by licensed dealers, manufacturers and clubs is removed this year, a condition that was unforeseen or overlooked by Peterborough's council and the councils of numerous other Ontario municipalities. Locally the tax on shops, hotels and manufacturer amounted to $1,187.24 plus $30.60 on the Peterborough Club, totalling $1,187.84. A much larger tax curtailment has resulted from the Government's purchase of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. The total annual tax from this sources was $8,767.55, but the city is allowed two months' taxes, $1,461.26, leaving $7,306.29 which with the business tax on licensed places makes a total of $8,464.13, which will be provided for this year by an extra one mill levy on the tax rate which is briefly compiled as follows: 25 3/10 mills for general purposes, 1 mill provincial war tax, 7/10 mill garbage collection, 1 mill unforeseen depreciation of taxable property, making a total of 28 mills.

At last night's meeting of the Council in Committee City Solicitor Gordon said that Oshawa and other towns were hit just as badly as Peterborough. There was no escape, he added, but Alderman Langford claimed that some protest should be made to the Government regarding the city's loss of the taxes on the Light and Power Co. Mr. Gordon replied that this might be done if the city could call an assembly of the Legislature and have a new act passed.

Alderman Stratton moved, seconded by Alderman Dobbin that a mill be added to the tax rate to cover the deficiency. The city loses approximately $9,000 revenue; the additional mill means about $11,000, and the difference will cover patriotic grants and similar incidentals.

Alderman Stratton stated that the appropriations had been cut so fine when the estimates were prepared that $9,000 could not be paid out of the current revenue. Hence the only recourse was the addition of the extra mill.

Store Will Be Closed Early

It is the intention of Goheen and Matchett, 198 Rubidge street, to close their grocery store at seven o'clock each evening. This is a commendable move and one that may be adopted by more of the stores who keep open until nine and ten o'clock each evening of the week.

BASEBALL

Last evening on the Central School grounds, the Seniors of Central School were defeated by the Seniors of the King Edward School. The score was 17 to 2.

Batteries: Central, Carruthers and Munro. King Edward, Cunningham and Taylor.

Mr. Fred McNeely made a satisfactory umpire.

LAWN BOWLING

There will be a general meeting of the Bowling Club next Monday evening at Mr. Fitzgerald's office, for the purpose of electing Skips and other business.

It is particularly requested that every member will bring with him his list of new members for this season. Every member is requested to be present.

Farewell Luncheon to 93rd Battalion Band

The 93rd Battalion Band were the guests of the 57th Regimental Band at a farewell luncheon in the Empress grill last night. All the members of both musical organizations were present and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The courses were excellent and the subsequent speeches and programme added that touch which lifts occasional affairs of this kind above the average. Mr. Herb. King, an old member of the 57th Band, and now prominent in Chicago musical circles, provided practically the entire entertainment and proved himself a prince of entertainers. He is a member of the "Forty Club," which included Mr. Geo. Hamlin, who has sung in Toronto with the Mendelssohn choir, Mr. Herbert Witherspoon of the Metropolitan Opera House, John McCormack the celebrated concert tenor and other celebrities. Mr. King varied his programme of tenor solos with stories and piano sketches and was a whole host in himself. The toasts honoured were those to the King, the 93rd Battalion Band, the 57th Band, and others. Bandmaster Hughes, in a neat speech, presented Mr. Robert Gliddon with a picture of the 93rd Band.

Altogether it was a most pleasant farewell, with a splendid spirit of comradeship between the members of the two musical organizations, and it will doubtless be long remembered by all those who were present.

when we needed help that we didn't get it from you." Our first object is the care of the men, and this fund will assist us in that object. It will be devoted directly to the benefit of the men. The officers of this battalion do not want one cent personally.

Lt.-Col. Johnston pointed out that the field kitchens would demonstrate the usefulness by being used for the preparation of the battalion's first meal at Barriefield.

"We have tried to play our part here and when we get to the front we'll continue to try to play our part and bring credit on the county we represent," said Lt.-Col. Johnston in conclusion.

The National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

Socks Were Presented.

Immediately after this ceremony there was another presentation when the officers and men of the battalion each received a pair of socks from the 57th Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, a gift that was appreciated by every one. The men realized how much patient work with the knitting needles was represented in the large quantity of socks necessary for such a big body of soldiers. Each pair of socks was tied in a neat parcel and formed an attractive gift. A large number of the Chapter was on hand to look after the distribution.

Mr. W. Saxby, 364 Smith Street has received the following letter written May 13th, from his son, Grenadier W. H. Saxby of the 21st Battalion, who was wounded some time ago, and is now in Queen Park hospital, Birmingham, Kent, Eng.:

Dear Parents and All.—As you see by the address I am now in England. I sent a card to you as soon as I got here. Did you get my other letter from the hospital in France? Uncle Harry was here to see me a few days ago. He said he would write to you, and tell you about me. It is hard for me to write, as I just have the left hand. This is a fine place, situated in beautiful grounds. In the country. There are a few Canadians here. Some Canadian ladies came to visit us yesterday. I am well treated here. I am just beginning to walk around, with my arm in a sling. My legs are pretty shaky, but I am getting stronger every day. We had a concert here last night and it was fine. I got Lottie's letter after I was wounded. Uncle Harry showed me the clipping from the Examiner which you sent him. He is going to put it in a London paper with my picture. I suppose Ern. has written you about me. I heard from him a few days ago. I was glad to see old England. I suppose Norm. will be over here soon. I am feeling fine, but my arm is pretty painful. Best love to all. Write to me soon, all of you.

BILL.

Gunner Ambrose Doris, of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., writing from Belgium to his brother, Mr. Albert M. Doris, 201 1-2 Lewis street, says:

"I have met a number of boys from Peterborough who came out with the second and third contingents. Among those whom I met were Willie Allen, Eddie Graham, Norman Barrie, Young, Davidson and Carr. They are all looking fine and fit for time yet. I was told a few days ago that "Fat" Giroux and Oscar Hallihan are within four or five miles of me. However, I have not had the pleasure of meeting either of them as yet, but hope to any day. Harvie Staunton was over to see me a few days ago. He is getting long fine and enjoying good health. Well, dear brother and sister, the front we are on keeps us busy at most times. Our battery is very lucky. We have very few casualties, one killed and two wounded last week. The Canadian casualty list has increased considerably this last while back. I can not see how this war will finish this year. I think it will be at least two years before any one will see the finish. I was coming out of our front line a few days ago and believe me old Fritz made it interesting for me. He missed me several times by about an inch each time. He kept me eating the sand piles for more than a mile. One other night he dropped a shell that we call a "silent Suzy" on the top of the dug out I was sleeping in. Believe me it does not take two shells such as that one to wake us up.

However I am taking the best car possible of myself. I am a little afraid I am going to lose the use of one ear. I have to ask three or four times to make sure of any order given to me while I am on the gun. I have been all through it now for almost fifteen months right at the firing line. I have never been in a hospital and only one time was I sick for more than two or three days since I left Canada. I am sure that when you read this letter you will be quite satisfied to believe that I have enjoyed the best of health and good luck that any one would wish.

In a postcript Gunner Dorris adds: "When I mentioned my ear going to the bad I meant to inform you that I have never gone to the doctor with it, but will if it doesn't soon make a change for the better. If I go to see the doctor he would like send me to the rear to get treated. While I am in France I want to be right with the battery, not back in the rear.

Young men who watched the 93rd Battalion go away this morning and wished regretfully that they were in the ranks have still a chance to gratify their wishes. The Battalion have left a recruiting staff in Peterborough and there will be free transportation to Kingston for all who would like to go and enjoy camp life with the fine Peterborough battalion. Lieut. J. Ketchum is in charge of the recruiting staff and he has with him Sergt. W. Mitchell, Lance Corp. J. T. Deegan, Lance Corp. Livingstone, Pte. J. Mitchell, Pte. T. Hatley, Pte. J. Cadd, Pte. W. Soddards, Pte., J. Wildman (Norwood) Pte. L. Post (Apsley), Pte. J. Morrow, Pte. A. Walker, Pte. D. J. McIntosh. The recruiting rooms, Simcoe street will be kept open and any information can be secured there or from any of the recruiting staff.

The citizens of Peterborough will be pleased to know that 320 of our boys of the 93rd Battalion have joined the Pocket Testament League, and by so doing they pledge themselves that they will read daily a portion of God's word.

Was Fined Ten Dollars and Costs

Fire Chief Howard is Determined to See That By-Laws Effecting His Department are Enforced

In this morning's police court a local merchant was fined $10.00 and costs for harbouring an accumulation of crates, packing cases, etc. at the rear of his store, on Charlotte Street. The complaint was laid by Fire Chief Howard, who asserted that he had repeatedly notified the defendant to remove the refuse which, the Chief claimed, constituted a menace to the surrounding property. Chief Howard intimated that it was his intention to prosecute all who persist in violating the by-law which expressly states that all back yards must be kept free of combustible rubbish.

"Our chief desire is to prevent fires, and not wait until they burn the town down," said Chief Howard this morning.

Decoration Day in United States

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 30.—This was decoration day throughout the United States and was a general holiday for the decoration of veterans' monuments. Presidential campaigns were in full swing, however. President Wilson delivered a patriotic address in Washington, and ex-President Colonel Roosevelt gave a characteristic speech on preparedness in Kansas.

A BOUQUET FOR A BOBBY

A young lady from Barrie was one of a party doing the city in an auto and she lost her heart to a policeman on duty yesterday afternoon at the junction of Charlotte and George streets. His stalwart handsomeness, his politeness and his smile during a little traffic ruffle, resulting from an exploded tire, so attracted her attention that she failed to notice the blow-out. The identity of the smiling bobby is not known, by name, but he will know and feel proud that his official bearing and policic politness, attracts an attention that is not always a "policeman's lot."

The Germans at Verdun Reinforced By 20,000 Austrians

"German People Want No More Bloodshed" Says Socialist

100th Day of Verdun Battle Finds the Crown Prince Rushing Troops To Front

New German Offensive, Started Sunday, Believed to Be the Final Assault Designed to Pierce the French Lines---Enemy Hurrying Into Action Every Man That Can Be Spared.

PARIS, May 31.—The hundredth day of the world's greatest battle at Verdun found the Crown Prince rushing into action fresh legions, amid the roar of hundreds of great guns west of the Meuse.

The new German offensive, initiated Sunday, is the final supreme assault designed to pierce the French lines, all French military critics agreed to-day. The volume and violence of the artillery fire, together with the frequency and intensity of infantry attacks, eclipses anything seen on any battlefield in the world's history.

The Germans are hurrying into action against Verdun every man the Kaiser can spare. The Kaiser himself is reported to be returning to the Verdun front to witness the final assault.

There are widespread rumours that a large Austrian force is en route to the Western front, either to take over a portion of the German line, or to participate directly in the fighting at Verdun.

Before the end of the week, it is believed here, the Crown Prince will be hammering against the French lines with a force numbering nearly a million men.

Faced with these reports, the French public remained utterly calm to-day. The official communiques are being scanned with an interest unequalled since the Germans struck the first blow against the fortress. But there is not the slightest doubt that General Nivelle, if forced to retire upon the north-western forts of Verdun, will maintain his positions there with the same tenacity that brought the Germans to a halt on the northern and north-eastern secions of Verdun.

What Does Your Food Cost? You could easily spend two dollars for a meal and not get as much real, body-building nutriment as you get in two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, the food that contains all the muscle-making material in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk or cream will make a complete, perfect meal at a cost of not over five cents. A food for youngsters and grown-ups. Eat it for breakfast with milk or cream; eat it for luncheon with fresh berries or other fruits; a perfect meal for the Spring days.

French Navy Transported Serbian Army From Corfu To Salonika

Reports Indicate Germans Are Being Held at All Points ---Bulgars and Allied Forces Engage in Heavy Battle

OTTAWA, May 31.—After considerable argument, the Shell Commission admitted Sir Sam. Hughe's statement in which he lauded Col. Allison as saving millions for the Empire.

PARIS, May 31.—Afternoon reports yesterday indicate that the Germans are being held at all points.

ROME, May 31.—Rumours here report a very heavy battle between the Bulgars and the Allied forces, about ten miles from Salonika.

PARIS, May 31.—Admiral Lacaze announced yesterday that the French Navy transported the Serbian Army from Corfu to Salonika.

KANSAS CITY, May 31.—Colonel Roosevelt, in a speech here yesterday, again asked for the second navy of the world and a standing army of 250,000, with ample reserves.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 31.—Resta won the three hundred mile automobile race. Time, 3.36 10.82, averaging 83.26 miles an hour.

Grabs Wolf By The Throat

Kansan Holds On Until Companion Kills the Beast.

Gar Richardson, night marshal, of Columbus, Kan., has performed many daring feats, but his latest was to capture a gray wolf barehanded. The wolf, a large female, was in a fighting mood at that, because seven of her young were in danger of capture.

Richardson and Charles Dye, of this city, happened to be out five miles south-west of Columbus recently when they spied the wolf. They followed her until she disappeared in a hole. The men knew from the action of the wolf that there were some baby wolves in the hole. Several times the wolf looked out to see what was going on.

The men had no gun and it was too far to go after one, so they took opposite positions around the hole and waited. The next time the animal stuck its head out it was looking at Dye, and Richardson sprang and grabbed it by the back of the neck. He held on until Dye tore down a fence to get a pole with which the wolf was finally killed. Procuring a spade, the men captured the young, a litter of seven.

The power of concentration is one of the most valuable of intellectual attainments.—Mann.

THE FUTURE OF THE LIVE STOCK INDUSTRY

Hopefulness and confidence in the future were the noticeable features at all the live stock meetings held during the winter, and they were general throughout the country. United with the optimism expressed was the urgent call to the farmer to breed better or as well as possible, and to breed true to type. Not alone the Dominion Department of Agriculture, but also the various provincial departments, are engaged in active efforts to place pure-bred animals at the disposal of farmers generally. Thus there is little excuse for breeding to scrubs and seventeenth degree mongrels. Above all is the item of health. The wise farmer will take care that the cattle he uses are not only true in pedigree but are good in conformation, sound in health and free from possibility of hereditary disease. In breeding, above all things, there is truth in the saying that a dollar well spent is a pound well earned.

At all times it behooves farmers to note that things are well with their live stock but there never was a period when Canadians were more earnestly summoned to do their utmost in this respect. Never was there a period when so much depended upon their efforts. In a comparatively short time, reckoned by years, probably before the cattle begotten this year come to early maturity, there is going to be a universal demand for live stock of every description, but especially for the bovine. The nations at present at war will be very tired of eating canned and salted stuff and will demand fresh beef, and, as for dairy cattle there is even now a scarsity of milk owing to the great output of cheese required, and the needs of the day must of necessity be very far short of what they will be when declarations of peace are signed. On the manner of cattle we breed now will depend our success and profit not alone then, but always.

Live stock breeding is a branch of production that, following the bountiful harvest of last year is naturally pre-eminent in the agriculturist mind. Taken in conjunction with fruitful fields if successfully, wisely and thriftily carried on it means untold prosperity to the country. It means money to the farmer and benefit to the soil. It means help to Britain and her Allies. In short it means profit all round. The main inings needed to bring this about are to breed to the available best, to pay every possible respect to health and sanitation, to hold on to producing cows, to give every good heifer a chance, to bear in mind in securing service that the cheapest is more frequently than not the dearest in the long run, and to remember that Canada's reputation as a producing country will be particularly at stake in the earliest shipments after the war.

HONOUR MEMORY OF FIRST VICTIM OF GREAT WAR

Monument For Corporal Peugeot of the 44th. French Infantry

PARIS, May 30.—A national subscription has been started to raise funds for the erection at Joncharey, in the Department of Haut Rhin, of a monument to Jules Andre Peugeot, corporal in the 5th company of the 44th Regiment of Infantry, who was the first French victim of the war. He was killed by a German patrol at 10 a.m. Aug. 2, 1914, the day before the declaration of war.

Corporal Peugeot was a sentry on the road to Favrois when an advancing German patrol was sighted. He was amazed to see troops twelve miles inside French territory and went out to arrest the German officer. He was twice wounded, but before he was killed, he shot and fatally wounded the lieutenant in command of the German patrol.

Corporal Peugeot was a school teacher by profession but was incorporated into the army on November 26, 1913, and was made a corporal on April 1, 1914. He had passed examinations to become an officer in the reserves.

WOULD REDUCE OUTPUT OF BEER

LONDON, May 30.—The House of Commons passed the second reading of the bill which would reduce by 15 per cent., the output of beer. The object of the bill is to relieve the room in ships required for importing foreign hops. The measure empowers the Government to prohibit the importation of hops unless the home-grown supply is insufficient to meet requirements, when licenses for importation will be granted.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FINDS DIAMONDS IN SEA.

British Mine Sweeper Deckhand Picks Up Floating Package.

A story of a package of diamonds worth $500 found floating in the North Sea by one of the crew of a British mine sweeper was told in a London police station by a deckhand, Walter Gleeson, who had been arrested while trying to dispose of the gem.

At the police station the deckhand confessed that while on a trawler which was engaged in the hazardous task of gathering up mines in the North Sea he saw a package floating in the water. He got it with a boat-hook and when he opened it he found ninety-eight polished and seventy-five unpolished gems. The deckhand attempted, in company with a friend, to sell the diamonds to a jeweller at Cardiff. There was nothing on the package to indicate the owner or how the diamonds came to be floating about in the mine-strewn waters of the North Sea.

Fortunate is the marshall of thought, the armour of the will, and the fort of reason.—Lord Bacon.

Master Thos. White of town won an Ingersoll watch last week in the Toronto Star's ad-writing contest, to promote the collection of waste. The following is the advertisement:

"Arise Canadians, lend a hand
To help our soldiers bold,
Who bravely in the trenches stand
'Mid hunger, wet and cold.
If money you have none to give,
Then try this easy plan,
Collect your rags and garments old
And send on all you can."

The Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Church met on Wednesday afternoon last, at 2.30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Wm. Backus. After the business part of the meeting a presentation of a beautiful cut glass bowl was presented to Mrs. Harry Gray, their secretary, who left on Thursday afternoon for Toronto to reside. A most appropriate address accompanied the presentation.

Mr and Mrs. Grey will both be greatly missed in the Church, always being willing workers. The best wishes of a host of friends follow them to their new home in Toronto where we hope they will still keep doing their 'bit' in Church work.

Miss Lottie Chiles of Peterborough gave a recital in town on Friday evening, May 27th, at the home of her sister, Mrs. J. B. A. Coon. The programme was greatly appreciated and was beautifully rendered, and was as follows:

Moonlight Sonata ... Beethoven
A May Morning ... Denza
Mrs. Daynard
(a) Valse Op. 64, No. 2 ... Chopin
(b) Elade Op. 2, No. 6 ... Henslet
Reading, "The Paddle Song." (E. Pauline Johnson)—Miss F. Chiles
(a) Hungarian Dance ... Brahms
(b) Second Mazurka ... Godard
Reading, "Ajistoh" (E. Pauline Johnson)—Miss F. Chiles
(a) Les Deux Alouettes ... Leschetizky
(b) Air de Ballet ... Chaminade
'In the Garden of My Heart' E Ball
Mrs. Daynard
"Ballade" ... C. Chopin
God Save The King.

Mrs. Cousins and son, Master Allmore of Smith Falls are the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Haig.

Mrs. Grey and daughter Evelyn left on Thursday last for their home in Toronto.

Many of the soldier boys of the 39rd Battalion, Peterborough, spent the week-end at their homes in town.

News was received here Saurday of the death of Mr. Cecil Duke, killed in action at the front. Cecil was well known in Havelock, having visited here one summer, his parents at one time having resided here, but are now located at Banff, Man.

Memorial services (in honour of the brave hero) were held in the Methodist Church on Sunday evening.

The deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved parents and friends of this brave and noble young man who was loved and esteemed by all who knew him.

Fire broke out on Friday morning at 4 a.m. at the residence of Mr Wm. Althouse, caused by electric wires, and was burned to the ground, hardly any of the contents being saved.

Miss Reynolds of Norwood was the guest of Miss Mary Boyd last week.

Mrs. Wm. Chambers visited friends in Norwood and Peterborough last week.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said would never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Woman Fought As a Soldier

Madame Dieulafoy Fought as a Soldier and Explored in Asia.

PARIS, May 28.—In the sixty-five years of her life, Madame Jane Dieulafoy, who died to-day, passed through experiences which caused her to be regarded as one of the most remarkable women in France.

She was born in Toulouse, and was not yet out of her 'teens when she was married to Marcel Auguste Dieulafoy, a young engineer. He went to the front during the Franco-Prussian war to took his bride with him. She disguised herself as a man in the regulation French uniform and fought by her husband's side. Both returned unscathed from the battlefields. In the '80's her husband, who had established a high reputation as an engineer, was commissioned to go to Asia for archaeological researches. It was a dangerous and arduous task, but Madame Dieulafoy elected to accompany him. She spent several years with him in Chaldea and Persia, sharing his work and perils. They were rewarded by discovering the ruins of the palaces of Darius and Artaxerxes.

After returning to France, Madame Dieulafoy, who had become accustomed during her travels to the constant wearing of man's costume received authorization to appear in public in this apparel. She wrote a large number of books on historical, archaeological and romantic themes, one of which was cited by the French Academy as of especial excellence.

War expenditure must necessarily be wasteful, but there is a degree beyond which it need not go.—Lord Rosebery.

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"And he went into it with open eyes," replied Code, "for his plans were perfect. He pays his crew double wages and they ask no questions. Had it not been for you on two occasions I should have been in jail before this."

"Yes, but now that is past—"

"No," interrupted Code, "it isn't, Elsa. He has just as much power over me as he ever had. I am still a criminal at large to be arrested, and you can wager your last dollar that if he can bring it about will be picked up by the first gunboat that finds me."

"But after all this?"

"Yes, after all this. We have made a beautiful case against him and it fits, but, Elsa, there's one thing we haven't got, and that is a single word of proof. We haven't enough to even bring a charge against him. Do you realize that?"

The girl sat back, unable to reply. Code had expressed the situation in a sentence. Despite all they had pieced together, Code, was still the man against whom the burden of circumstantial evidence rested. Nat was and always could go scot free.

"Code, this is terrible!" she said. "How there may be a way out yet. No man with the right on his side has ever failed to triumph, however black things looked."

"But how?" he cried despairingly. "I have racked my brains for some means of closing the net about him, but there seems no way."

"Now there is not," she returned, "but, Code, you can rest assured that I will do everything I can."

"God bless you," he said, taking her hand; "you are the best friend a man ever had."

CHAPTER XXVI.
WETTING THEIR SALT.

Pete Ellinwood, alone except for the cook, who sat peeling potatoes just outside the galley, paced the quarter-deck of the Charming Lass.

He seemed to be an older man than that night when, goaded beyond endurance by the taunts of the big Frenchman, he had fought a fight that would long be remembered in the streets of the roaring town of St. Pierre.

He felt that he had broken his promise to Ma Schofield that he would keep guard over her boy. Now, for all he knew, that boy was lying in jail at St. Andrew's, or was perhaps defending his life in the murderer's pen.

The night of the fight had been a wild one for Ellinwood.

At the cry of "Police!" the crowd had seemed to melt away from him like the bank fog at the sweep of a breeze. A dozen comrades had seized the prostrate Jean and hurried him away, and Pete, with the instinct of self preservation, had snatched up his clothes and dodged down a dark alley toward the dirty drinking shops along the water front.

There, as he dressed himself, he first asked the question, "Where is Code?"

Then in a frenzy of remorse he returned to the street and began a wild and fruitless search all night. Then he accidentally learned that the Nettie B. had been in port two days and that her crew had been ashore on the night of the fracas.

Sorrowful, bedraggled, and brutised, he rowed out to the Charming Lass just as the whole crew was setting out for shore to search for Code and himself.

During the night the barrels of fresh bait had been lightered to the Lass, and there was nothing for it but to make sail and get back on the Banks as soon as possible leaving Code to his fate but carrying on the work he had begun.

In accordance with Code's instructions, Pete automatically became the skipper of the schooner, and he selected Jimmie Thomas as his mate. By nightfall they had picked up the fleet, and early the next day the dories were out. Then for eight days it had been nothing but fish, fish, fish.

Never in all his experience had Pete seen such schools of cod. They were evidently herding together in thousands, and had found but scanty food for such great hosts for they bit almost on the bare hook.

Now as he looked around the still sea, the white or yellow sails of the fishing fleet showed on all sides in a vast circle. Not five miles away was the Rosan, and to the southward of her the Herring Bone with mean old Jed Martin aboard. Bijonah Tanner had tried his best to shake Martin, but the hard fisted old skipper, knowing recognizing Tanner's "nose" for fish, had clung like a leech and profited by the other's sagacity.

Nor was this all the Grande Mignon fleet.

There were Gloucestermen among it—the champion fishers of the world, who spent their spare time in drifting past the English boats and hurling salty wit—at which pastime they often came off second best.

There were Frenchmen, too, from Miquelon Islands, who worked in colored caps and wore sheath-knives in belts around their waists. Pete often looked over their dirty decks and wondered if his late enemy were among them. There were also vessels called "toothpicks" that did an exclusive trawling business, never using dories except to underrun the trawls or to set them out. These vessels were built on yacht lines and because they filled their holds quickly, made quick runs to port with their catches, thus getting in several trips in a season.

Also there were the steam trawlers, the most progressive of the fleet, owned and operated by the huge fish firms in Boston and Portland. These were not dependent on the vagaries of the wind and steamed wherever their skippers divined that fish might be.

Last of all were the miners after herring and mackerel, schooners mostly, and out of Gloucester or Nova Scotia ports, who secured their catch by encircling schools of fish that played atop of the water with nets a quarter of a mile long and pursued them in by drawstrings much as a man closes a tobacco pouch.

This was the cosmopolitan city that lived on the unmarked lanes of the ocean and preyed upon the never failing supplies of fish that moved beneath.

Among the Grande Mignon boats there was intense rivalry. In the holds the layers of salted fish rose steadily under the phenomenal fishing. The salt barrels were emptied, and crowded out by the cod, hake and pollock. It was these facts that Ellinwood watched with the eye of a hawk, for back in Freakish Head he knew that Bill Boughton stood ready to pay a bonus for the first cargo to reach port. Now was also the time when the advance orders were coming up, and because of the failure of the season on the island itself these orders stood unfilled.

One or two of the smallest sloops had already wet their salt and weighed anchor for home, taking letters and messages; but these Pete knew, could only supply an infinitesimal portion of the demand. What Boughton lacked for was a healthy haul of fifteen hundred to two thousand quintals all ready for drying.

Night and day the work went on. With the first sign of daylight the dories were swung overboard and the men took their positions. A catch of two hundred good sized cod was now considered the usual thing for a handliner and night after night the piles of silver fish in the pens amidships seemed to increase in size.

Now they dressed them under lantern light, sometimes aided by the moon, and the men stood to the tables until they fell asleep on their feet and split their fingers instead of the fish. Then, after buckets of hot coffee, they would fall too again and never stop until the last wet body had been laid atop of its thousands of brothers.

The men were constantly on the trawls. Sometimes they did nothing all day but pick the fish and rebait, finding after a trip to the schooner to unload that a thousand others had struck on the long lines of sagging hooks while they were gone.

It was fast and feverish work and it seemed as though it would never end.

The situation had resolved itself into a race between the schooners and Ellinwood was of no mind to come off second best. Like a jockey before a race, he watched his rivals.

He knew that foxy Bijonah Tanner, who sometimes looked like an old hump-backed cod himself, was his most dangerous rival. Tanner said nothing, but his boats were out early and in late, and the lanterns on his deck over the dressing pens could sometimes be seen as late as ten o'clock at night.

Visits among the fleet had now ceased, both because there was no time for it, and because a man from another schooner was looked upon as a spy.

At the start of the season it had been expected that Nat Burns in the Nettie B. would prove a strong contender for premier honours, but, because of his ceaseless efforts to drive home his revenge, Nat had done very little fishing and therefore could not possibly be in the market.

Other Freakish Head men shrugged their shoulders at this. Nat had the money, and could act that way if it pleased him, they said. But, nevertheless, he lost favour with a great many of his former friends, for the reason that the whole fishing expedition had been a concerted movement to save the people and credit of the island, and not an exploitation of individual desires.

Burns had, with his customary indifference to others, made it just exactly such an exploitation, and the sentiment that had been strong for him at the outset of the cruise was now turning decidedly the other way; although he little guessed this or would have been influenced had he done so.

In reality, then, the race for fish was keenest between the Charming Lass, the Rosan, and the Herring Bone, with three other schooners very close on their heels.

At the end of the nine days there was little space beneath the deck planks of the Charming Lass, but every night Pete would come up, slapping his hands free of salt, and say, 'Wal, boys, I guess we can crowd another day's work into her," and the crew would gather themselves for another great effort as they rolled forward into their bunks.

Every twenty-four hours they did crowd another day's work into her, so that she carried nearly a hundred and fifty tons and the dripping brine had to be pumped out of the hold.

It was the night of the day that opened this chapter.

The lanterns by which the men had dressed down had been lifted from their supports, the cod livers dumped into the gurry-butt, and the tables removed from the rails. The two men on the first watch were sharpening the splitting knives on a tiny grindstone and walking forward occasionally to see that the anchor and trawl buoy lights were burning.

The still air resounded with the snores of the exhausted men forward in the forecastle.

Silently out of the darkness a dory came toward the schooner, pulled by the brawny arms of two men. In the stern of the oncoming boat sat a solitary figure, who strained his eyes toward his destination.

The dory was within fifty yards of the Lass before the men on deck became aware of its approach. Then, fearing some evil work in connection with the last desperate days of fishing, they rushed to the bulwarks and challenged the newcomers. They did not see, a mile away, a schooner without lights gently rising and falling on the oily sea.

"Who is that?" demanded one man, but he received no answer except "A friend," and the boat continued its stealthy approach. It drew alongside the ladder in the waist, and the man in the stern sheets rose. Kent of the Lass's crew leaned over the side and threw the light of his lantern upon the man.

"By God," he cried like one who has seen a ghost, "it's the skipper."

(To be continued.)

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine over nine and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1894 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.

Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the hands of the fingers, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the impurities from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do my work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taking it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
